BEER HOUNDS PROVE SUCCESS.

Des Moines Police Train Dogs to Run Down the Bootleggers.

[DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DES MOINES, Aug. 19.—Des Moines is to have the first beer hounds. Chief of Police Jackson has secured two dogs, mixed bloodhounds and deer hunting dogs, and intends to use them in pursuit of bootleggers in the city. The dogs are being put through a course of training that will lead them to follow the scent of beer or other illegal liquor being sold here. At their first trial today the dogs showed unusual perspicacity and readily traced down a keg of beer that had been confiscated some days ago and was being used in educating the hounds. "They'll do," said the Chief. "In another week I'll have them trained so they can flush a bootlegger as quickly as a bird dog does a quail."

AUSTRIANS FREE AMERICAN WOMAN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—The release from prison in Vienna of Miss Alice Masaryk, daughter of an American woman, who was charged with high treason, was announced here tonight by Alexander von Nuber, Austrian Consul-General. Miss Masaryk, it was said, was freed July 3.

Miss Masaryk is a daughter of Prof. Thomas G. Masaryk of Prague, who married a daughter of Rodolphe Garrigue, a New York banker. Dr. Masaryk is living in England, where he fled soon after the outbreak of the war.

COMMENT ON THE SITUATION.

While the Entente allies may not be pressing the central powers so hard in spots, their offensive now covers a greater area than before. There is every reason to believe that the allied offensive against the Germans, Austrians, Turks and Bulgars is in full swing on every battle front. The only thing needed to complete the circle of fire and fighting all around the centrol powers is a series of naval engagements in the North Sea and the Baltic.

Quick withdrawal of the American punitive expedition from Mexico is promised in a Washington dispatch that at the same time chronicles the chagrin of the Wilson administration caused by premature publication of the fact that Gen. Funston recommends withdrawal. The belief is that the troops will be withdrawn soon after the American and Mexican commissioners meet. Villa is still at large.

BULGARIANS ATTACKED

New Phase of the War Developing.

Onslaught on Central Powers Reported from Every Angle of Europe.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 19.—The long-expected general offensive on the Saloniki front has opened and the grand assault against the forces of the central powers now is in progress in every theater of the world war. Gen. Sarrail is attacking the Bulgar-German forces along the entire Greek-Serbian frontier, a distance of more than 150 miles.

Reports from both Berlin and Paris indicate that the Entente allies are following the same tactics in the Balkans that signalized the opening of the great offensive on the Somme. Small bodies of troops are attacking at numerous points along the Bulgarian line, apparently with the intention of feeling out their opponents' positions before the real battle opens. The French claim the capture of a number of villages in the initial phases of the offensive, while Berlin reports the capture of Florina, a Greek town fifteen miles southeast of Monastir, from the Serbians. Serbian headquarters admits this repulse.

IN THE EAST.

On the eastern front the Russians have forced their way into the heart of the great mountain barried between Galicia and the Hungarian plains. The Austrians admit a retirement west of Jablonitza, the gateway to one of the most important passes through the mountains, which was seized by the Russians last week. In this district the Austrians are retreating toward the Chornahara ridge, the highest point in the Carpathians in this region. From this ridge the ground falls rapidly to the plains of Hungary.

Farther to the south on the Bukowina end of the battle line, the Russians have been forced back in their advance on Kirlibaba, the next pass south of Jablonitza, and about fifty miles from that point.

ALONG THE SOMME.

Daily attacks by the British against the German lines north of the Somme in France are having their reward, and London announces the most notable gain in some days in the region of Guillemont. After withstanding German counter-attacks, the troops of Gen. Haig again assaulted the opposing trenches and gained from 200 to 600 yards along a front of two miles.

The pressure of the Anglo-French forces has been exerted strongly recently where the two forces join hands between Guillemont and Maurepas, and the latest British advance was from Foureaux or High Wood to the junction point. In addition the British report that they have gained a footing in the village of Guillemont. Berlin says that Anglo-French attacks north of the Somme were repulsed, except around Guillemont, where the German line was shortened.

VERDUN.

While not as active as the British on the Somme front, the French have made more gains in the Verdun region. Fighting took place on both banks of the Meuse, the Germans attacking on the left and the French on the right bank. The German advance was frustrated, Paris says, and the French succeeded in gaining entire possession of the village of Fleury. Counter attacks by the Germans failed to dislodge the French, Paris asserts.

Austrian aeroplanes have made another raid on Venice in retaliation for the raid against Triest by the Italians. The Germans have made another air raid against Russian military establishments on Oesel Island, off the Gulf of Riga; Austrian airmen have bombed Italian works at Avlona, and a British squadron has raided German ammunition stations in Belgium.

HUGHES ARRIVES TODAY; BIG TURNOUT PLANNED.

Informal Reception will be Held at the Alexandria Hotel by State and Reception Committees—Will, Attend Church Morning and Evening—Speech at Shrine Auditorium to be Delivered Tomorrow Night.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES, the Republican standard - bearer, will be given a most enthusiastic reception upon his arrival here at 9:50 o'clock this morning. Plans for the greeting and entertainment of the distinguished visitor were announced officially last night by W. W. Mines, vice-chairman of the State Republican Executive Committee.

The Reception Committee and the State Executive Committee will meet at the Southern Pacific depot at 9:30 o'clock, parking their automobiles south of the station, the space having been reserved for them.

While many hundreds will probably gather at the depot expecting to get a chance to shake hands with Mr. Hughes, it is not probable that this will be permitted. He will be escorted from the train to the waiting line of automobiles, which will form a procession west on Fifth street to the Alexandria Hotel.

At the hotel Mr. Hughes will be tendered an informal reception by the State and Reception committees. The wishes of Mr. Hughes in connection with other activities during the day will then be ascertained and of course strictly adhered to.

CHURCH SERVICES.

Plans have been made to escort Mr. Hughes and Mrs. Hughes to a church for the morning service and in the evening he will attend the first Methodist Church.

Tonight at 11:59 o'clock he will morrow evening at 6:30 o'clock. Again he will be met by the Reception Committee and escorted to the Alexandria for dinner. He is due to arrive at Shrine Auditorium at 7:30 o'clock and will begin his speech soon thereafter.

Russ Avery will introduce Stoddard Jess, the chairman. Both of these gentlemen will make short addresses, after which the standard-bearer will be introduced.

Not many seats have been reserved at Shrine Auditorium and it was announced by Mr. Mines that none of them will be held after 7:30 o'clock, not even for vice-presidents.

It is expected that Mr. Hughes will address an overflow meeting in the event there is a large crowd that is unable to get into the Auditorium.

CHANGES IN ITINERARY OF THE HUGHES PARTY

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19.—Changes in the itinerary of the Hughes party which were announced tonight provide for addresses at Stockton and Sacramento and possibly rear platform talks at Tracy and Fresno.

The party left San Francisco at 8 o'clock tonight for Los Angeles, where the nominee will spend tomorrow in rest. Continuing the journey Mr. Hughes will arrive in San Diego Monday morning and after speaking there will return to Los Angeles in time for the meeting there in the evening.

Instead of returning to San Francisco, as had been planned previously, the nominee will leave Los Angeles via the valley route and will pass through Fresno and Tracy on the way to Stockton. A portion of Tuesday afternoon will be spent in Stockton and a stop of three hours is planned at Sacramento.

The nominee will begin his eastern journey from Sacramento late Tuesday, the first scheduled stop being at Reno.

KERBERG MAY LAND JOB.

STRIKE AT LUNCH TENDERED HUGHES.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19.—Union waiters refused today to serve a luncheon given to Charles E. Hughes, Republican Presidential candidate, at the San Francisco Commercial Club because the club exhibits in its window an open shop card as part of a fight being made here by the Chamber of Commerce on the closed shop. For the Hughes luncheon a request was sent by the club management to the Waiters' Union asking for sixty-five waiters, after the union officials had protested to Francis V. Keesling, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, against dining the candidate in an open shop club.

The Pacific Coast Waiters' Association, backed up the action of the local waiters, and pickets were sent to the Commercial Club entrance to warn union waiters away. Culinary workers struck several weeks ago for shorter hours and the Restaurant Men's Association immediately declared an open-shop regime.

"Taits," one of the show places among the large downtown cafes, locked its doors over the lunch hours and sent its entire crew to the relief of the Hughes luncheon. It was the first time since the great 1906 fire that "Tait's" has had a lock on it, save in the early morning hours.

About thirty union waiters who have been employed regularly at the Commercial Club walked out an hour or so before Hughes was due at the club, according to P. R. Reiter, manager. The kitchen help remained.

Health Department of New York Issues Warning to Parents Out of City with Their Children to Stay Away as Long as They Possibly Can.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Mrs. Douglas Gorman of Baltimore, who has been ill for two days at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund S. Nash, at Rye, is suffering from infantile paralysis, it was learned today. Her husband, who is a nephew of the late United States Senator Gorman of Maryland, said it was believed his wife contracted the disease in New York.

The health department today issued a warning to parents who are out of the city with their children, advising them to remain away as long as possible.

The total of new cases in Greater New York for the week ending today was 912, as compared with 1151 for the previous week, while the number of deaths was 226 as compared with 301 last week.

HIGHER FREIGHT RATES TO EASE UNION BURDENS

Government Ownership Club Employed by Wilson to Enforce Demands.

BY JOHN CALLAN O'LAUGHLIN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 19.—President Wilson paved the way today to railroad acceptance of his compromise plan by suggesting an increase in freight rates to meet any undue burden imposed upon the lines.

This suggestion, expected by the roads, was received with satisfaction by the railroad presidents in the city, though they desire it presented in more definite form by the Chief Executive.

There will be further negotiations; other railroad presidents not now in the capital, have been invited to attend the White House conferences in order that the agreement reached shall cover the entire country.

The following summary is the latest proposals made by Mr. Wilson:

(1) An eight-hour day.

(2) Increase in freight rates should experience show it to be necessary.

(3) Postponement of the men's demand for extra pay for overtime and of the contingent proposals of the railroads until the effects of the eight-hour day are established.

(4) An immediate investigation of the entire situation by an impartial tribunal to be appointed with or without Congressional authority and to make a report presenting the facts developed, but without recommendations.

(5) Both parties then are to be free either to terminate the agreement with a view to instituting an inquiry into suggested readjustments of pay or practice.

WANT ARBITRATION.

The railroad presidents, when they conferred with Mr. Wilson this morning, urgently insisted that arbitration should be resorted to. They did not flatly reject the President's plan; indeed, they deemed it wiser to avoid its discussion at this juncture. They are confident they are standing on solid rock with the public in urging the Chief Executive to uphold them in their attitude.

The railroad presidents say it is not enough for the President to suggest that the experience of the eight-hour day would be a "definite guide" to the Interstate Commerce Commission in the matter of raising rates. They say rates should be higher under existing conditions. If all the demands of the men should be granted they estimate an extra $400,000,000 would be added to their operating expenses. If only the eight-hour day, which the President is insisting upon, would be allowed, the increased cost will be more than $100,000,000. To meet the larger expense it is asserted a flat 5 per cent. increase in rates on all commodities would have to be authorized by the commission. The last general decision of the commission permitted such an increase only in eastern territory.

WILL AROUSE SHIPPERS.

The Middle West Senators and Congressmen manifest serious concern over the President's suggestion. They assert it is bad politics and will arouse the shippers against the party. They point out the effect of the adoption of the President's plan will be to shift the wage increase from the railroads to the shoulders of the people and they do not consider such action desirable during a Presidential campaign. Moreover, the strength of the Interstate Commerce Commission has lain in the fact that it is a nonpolitical body. This would no longer be the case, it is said, if, whenever a railroad dispute takes place the President should settle it by agreeing that the commission should consider a petition for an increase in rates.

The conference with the railroad presidents today showed that Mr. Wilson is set upon the granting of the eight-hour day. Back in the mind of the road executives is the suggestion of government ownership made to them yesterday by the President. They also are struck by the President's view that arbitration is impracticable in the present crisis for the employees have refused arbitration and there is no way to compel them to accept it.

The railroad officials say they are standing for a great principle which ought not to be discarded.

"Mine and Thine."

"RESPONSIBILITY ON YOU IF STRIKE IS DECLARED."

Wilson in Advance Fixes the Blame on the Railway Managers and Presidents, but the Best Opinion Seems to be that the Men will Stay at Work—Details of the Conferences in the White House.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—President Wilson appealed to the railroad officials today to abandon their insistence on arbitration of the dispute threatening a nation-wide strike and to accept his plan of settlement, already agreed to by the employees, because, in his opinion, the railroads are contending for a principle which it seemingly is impossible to apply to the present situation.

In one of the most dramatic scenes known to the White House in recent years the President declared to the heads of $5,000,000,000 worth of properties, assembled at his summons:

"If a strike comes, the public will know where the responsibility rests. It will not be upon me."

A few minutes later he issued a statement saying:

FINAL ANSWER WITHHELD.

Refusing acceptance for the present, but not giving a final answer, Hale Holden, president of the Burlington Road, and spokesman for the thirty-three railroad officials, urged the President to uphold the principle of arbitration, and declared his plan would "place in peril all that has been accomplished in the peaceful adjustment of labor controversies by methods of arbitration."

At the close of the conference President Wilson summoned to Washington additional railroad presidents from the West and the executives already here told him they would confer among themselves and return next week, probably Monday. In the meantime representatives of both the roads and the employees will remain here for informal conferences.

The situation tonight was described by a railroad president as "not hopeless, but grave." It will be at a standstill until Monday, at least. Discussion of counter-proposals and compromises was current and serious consideration was given to the possibility of government operation of the roads in case of a strike.

CHANCES OF A STRIKE.

As a result of the day's conferences, however, it was said on good authority that many of the road presidents looked upon the possibility of a strike as more remote than at any time since they came to Washington. Over the week-end it was anticipated that the railroad officials will get into communication with the controlling financial interests and it still was considered possible that some of the powerful directors of the roads would be called to Washington. Both among the employers and employees talk of arrangements for a strike continued and for different reasons both sides thought if it came it would last less than a week.

While President Wilson was still addressing the railroad executives, telling them they faced "a condition, not a principle," his statement to the country, reviewing his plan and characterizing it as "a thoroughly practicable and fair programme," was given out at the White House. In the statement he urged the adoption of the eight-hour day because "he believed the concession right," suggested the creation by Congress of a small body of men to investigate the results, and urged the abandonment of the demand for time and a half overtime pay by the men and the "contingent" proposals by the railroads. Mr. Holden insisted upon arbitration in his reply to the President, "because it is essentially the common right of every citizen of whatever condition in life to be heard," and because experience "has put the right to claim arbitration as a method of settling such controversies beyond question." He argued that the eight-hour day is impracticable in railroading and said the roads are willing for the Interstate Commerce Commission or any other disinterested body to arbitrate the whole question. The demand for the eight-hour day is in reality, he declared, only an indirect plea for "an enormous increase in wages" and said that "in this instance for those demanding a change to refuse to submit their demands to arbitration is indefensible."

THE WILSON STATEMENT.

President Wilson's statement follows:

"I have recommended the concession of the eight-hour day—that is, the substitution of an eight-hour day for the present ten-hour day in all the existing practices and agree-

A DAY ON A RAILROAD IS TWENTY-FOUR HOURS

Text of the Statement Made by Mr. Holden at the Strike Conference.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The railway managers after their conference at the White House today with President Wilson to discuss ways and means to prevent a strike of the union trainmen made public the following statement which President Holden, of the Burlington, made to President Wilson at the conference:

The representatives of the railroads here present have given careful consideration to the proposals submitted by you for an adjustment of the critical conditions confronting us. May we again express the grave sense of responsibility upon our shoulders to discharge, as faithful trustes of the public interest, the duty to maintain and operate these properties as agencies, efficient at all times—to serve the continuous public demand for transportation services—as faithful trustees also to protect, in so far as it is in our power, the interests of the owners of these properties committed to our charge.

In the previous stages of these negotiations the conference committee of managers has constantly adhered to the policy of arbitration as a fundamental principle—it is essentially the common right of every citizen, of whatever station in life to be heard—to have his day in court—it is indeed a substitute for wasteful litigation recognized long since in the codes of all civilized countries.

A denial of the right to be heard does not exist under any form of government with which our race has ever been familiar and the common acceptance in international affairs, in the adjustment of public rights under our Federal and State governments, of the principle of arbitration as an approved method for the friendly settlement of serious contentions of the parties, has put the right to claim arbitration as a method of settling such controversies beyond question. For these reasons we have supported our committee in their continuous demand, and in those important particulars upon which no agreement could be reached arbitration should be accorded upon any reasonable basis that might be adopted.

EIGHT HOUR DAY.

The eight hour day—I shall not at this time stop to fully analyze or comment on the importance of the differences between the eight hour day as commonly understood in the building, manufacturing trades and the so-called eight hour basic day demanded in this controversy—the eight hour day is, in our mature judgment, when considered in connection with railroad train service, a question upon which honest minds may differ and is therefore necessarily a subject of arbitration. In that matter the contentions of the parties may be considered and a fair answer given.

Social questions affecting the ordinary work day in which six days a week a regular routine is pursued are those which determine how long, during each of these periods the laborer should work and while in some States eight hours has been adopted as the desirable or compulsory maximum, this broad land is today teeming with the contented and efficient industry of millions of workers that are working more than eight hours a day. The precedent, therefore, exists—it exists in fact and the right or wrong of it, as we feel, has not yet in this country passed beyond the realm of debate.

THE RAILROAD DAY.

But these are not our problems. The railroad day is a different thing, as has been patiently, and, I infer, many times, explained. Railroad trains run throughout the twenty-four hour period—the public demands that they run on Sundays and holidays—they start at any hour that the necessities may demand—they cannot stop until a terminal is reached, and many conditions, stated and accidental, render it impossible to restrict the hours of labor to a fixed standard.

In a general movement some years ago the present ten hour basis was negotiated and approved by the representative railroad labor throughout the country and has continued, with some exceptions, to the present day. These exceptions have been worked out under local conditions, different often from the general conditions affecting the question.

In several important arbitrations of railroad rates of pay and conditions of service within recent years—the last within two years involving ninety-eight railroads, serving the entire territory between Chicago and the Pacific Coast—the ten hour basic day was incorporated in the demands of the organizations parties thereto and made the basis by them of the rates and rules awarded by the Federal board.

At the present time, in a controversy now pending over the identical questions involved here and in which numerous important railroads and national organization of switchmen are parties, an arbitration through the friendly offices of the Federal Board of Mediation has been agreed to wherein the question of an eight-hour-basic day has been submitted as an arbitrable question.

ARBITRATION.

We stand for the principle of arbitration for the settlement of industrial disputes. Arbitration is the ideal toward which public sentiment and legislation of this country have been steadily tending to the settlement of disputes between employers and employees, particularly in the case of public service corporations, rather than the strike and the lockout with attendant disturbances and paralysis of public business. Arbitration has been provided by legislation, both State and national. So late as 1913 the Federal law was perfected or improved by amendments framed in conference with some of the railroad labor leaders now refusing to arbitrate, and includes in its scope all controversies in railroad service. We invoke that principle now and are willing for the Interstate Commerce Commission to arbitrate the whole question. More than that, we are willing for the President of the United States to appoint a commission of disinterested persons to arbitrate all matters in dispute if neither the Interstate Commerce Commission nor the machinery of the Newlands act is satisfactory to the labor leaders.

But we have been met with a refusal to arbitrate in any manner; and are now asked to surrender the principle and to add an additional burden of many millions per annum to the cost of railroad transportation in this country for the benefit of a class who are among the most highly paid and favored workmen in the world. This is demanded under the guise of a plea for an eight-hour day. It is in reality only an indirect plea for an enormous increase in wages.

The intricate and technical nature of the case and the complexity of the facts make the controversy pre-eminently one for arbitration by an impartial tribunal with authority to examine into every factor and reach a decision fair and just to the employees, the owners and the public, which will ultimately bear the burden. To refuse to arbitrate is an admission of the unreasonableness of the demand. Moreover, the refusal is by those demanding a vital change in an existing status. For a party to demand a change of such a status and accompany the demand with a refusal to arbitrate is in conflict with right standards of conduct. In this instance, for those demanding a change to refuse to submit their demands to arbitration is indefensible.

REVOLUTIONARY CHANGE.

To say that such a demand as that now presented for a revolutionary change in the arrangements that have grown up in the development of the railroad business and involving so many complicated facts and relations and such vast additions to the cost of the country's transportation is not arbitrable, is to destroy the principle of arbitration and if successful would, in our judgment, tend immediately to discard all of the legislation, State and national, which has been enacted in recent years and set the country back to the old days of strike, lockouts, public disorder and business anarchy for the settlement of questions inherent in the relation of employer and employee.

The view that so important an issue as this may not in conscience be honestly debated and, therefore, arbitrated, raises this question above and beyond the lesser contentions of hours of service, or payment of wages—it raises it, in gravity, beyond the social or monetary questions affecting the parties before you, because it tends to enforce by the great weight of your spoken word, the railroads to surrender a right to be heard—a right expressly recognized by the policy of Federal legislation enacted for the purpose of adjusting these disputes, and, under the ban of your disapproval, expressed before the bar of public opinion, to accept as indisputable, conditions requiring, as we believe, an enormous sacrifice in efficiency in service and cost of operation of these properties. An adjustment in this manner will not stop with this controversy. It will be repeated in every industry wherein today industrial peace exists without controversy.

It will, by the force of this high precedent, place in peril all that has been accomplished in the peaceful adjustment of labor controversies by methods of arbitration, and therefore we present to you our respectful, but earnest, request that you do not lend the weight of your great influence against this right which we claim to be heard, but support the railroads in this crisis in the effort to maintain this great principle of arbitration.

CONCLUSION.

The statement concludes with this addition:

Mr. Holden then explained that in accordance with past custom and the requirements of the situation complete authority to conduct negotiations in behalf of the railroads in the present controversy has been conveyed to the Conference Committee of Managers. He further explained that the executives present had authority to speak only for the properties each represents. It is understood that telegrams were sent from the White House to other railroad executives of the country and the conference adjourned pending their arrival.

Discrimination by discerning advertisers between newspapers that bring them quick and satisfactory results and those that do not is responsible for The Times regularly printing more paid advertising than any other Los Angeles newspaper.

Every day in the year The Times leads all of its competitors by a wide margin.

A thorough and careful reading of The Times, induced by the fact that this newspaper regularly prints approximately twice as many separate "want ads" as its nearest competitor, necessarily is of great benefit to display advertisers.

LLOYD GEORGE WELL SATISFIED.

NIPPERS GRIPPING, HE TELLS LARGE AUDIENCE.

Declares Such a Victory Must be Won that it will be Warning to Any Ruler He will be Called to Account for Every Outrage that is Committed.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

CRICCIETH (Wales) Aug. 20.—In a speech last night to his fellow-townsmen here, David Lloyd George, Minister of War, said:

"I am satisfied with the way things are going. I feel for the first time in two years that the nippers are gripping and before long we will hear the crack. Then we will be able to extract the kernel.

"I say that we shall see that there will not be another war in our day. The British people have made greater sacrifices than we ever thought possible. Three years ago nobody dreamed that Great Britain would pour millions of young manhood into the battle front. The vigor of our demand must be according to the measures of our sacrifices.

"We must have such a victory that it will be a warning to any ruler that now sits or will sit upon a throne and to any king or councillors of kings that they will be called sternly to account by the conscience of a civilized nation for every outrage against international right and fair dealings. Hence, we must have an unmistakable and unchallengable victory that cannot be explained away by German professors to a credulous people. Otherwise our sacrifices will be in vain and will have to be renewed on a blacker and a bloodier scale.

"Let us have done with war now and forever."

The War Secretary's speech was interspersed with cheering by his hearers.

NAVAL BILL WILL BE SIGNED TUESDAY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—Next Tuesday President Wilson will sign the naval appropriation bill, carrying the largest building programme ever projected for the country. On the following day bids for the four battleships, the scout cruisers, submarines, destroyers and all other craft authorized, except the four battle cruisers and the ammunition ship, will be requested from private builders, to be opened October 18. Inquiries as to the type of ship each builder desires to bid on were sent out today.

It now is expected that the battle cruiser plans will be ready for advertisement by October 1, a month earlier than previously estimated. The entire 1917 programme probably will be under contract before January 1 and only shortage of skilled labor will delay construction, as the structural steel companies already have given assurances that prompt deliveries of material can be made.

The bill authorizes Secretary Daniels to equip several additional naval yards for government construction, $6,000,000 having been appropriated for that purpose.

THE SHIPPING BILL IN FINAL STAGES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The administration shipping bill today had entered upon the final stages of enactment. It passed the Senate late last night by a strict party vote of thirty-eight to twenty-one and now goes to the House where it has already passed.

Chairman Alexander of the House Merchant Marine Committee intimated today that the bill as amended by the Senate might be accepted by the House possibly Tuesday without sending it to conference. Democratic Leader Kitchin said he believed the House would concur in the Senate amendments and not ask a conference.

DRYS REJECT THE PROGRESSIVE PLAN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE, Aug. 19.—Representatives of the Prohibition party of Washington assembled in conference with State Progressive party leaders today rejected the Progressives' plan for a fusion ticket, and both parties will conduct separate campaigns before the primary. A committee of prohibitionists was named to confer with the Progressives after the primary election, September 12. The committee will then have power to act in the matter of joint indorsement of candidates and other campaign affairs.

CHECKERBOARD OF WAR INDICATES LONG SIEGE.

"The Allies Can't Do It This Year," Seems to be Universal Verdict.

BY HARRY CARR.

ARMY men and writers on army subjects seem to be unanimously of the belief that the allies will not be able to do it this year.

Many of them hold that Germany is due for a crushing defeat in the end. Others hold that the war will be a draw. But they all seem to agree that the coming of the snows this fall will find the war still in an indecisive state.

An officer of our army who has just returned from the battle front in Europe is quoted by a reliable technical journal as saying that the allies regard the present offensive as hardly more than tentative. The real drive is coming in the spring of 1917. By next May the allies will have attained the ultimate of their military strength.

The British army will, by that time, have attained proficiency as a result of two years and a half of study and experience. The Russian government will have been able to arm and equip enormous new armies.

This American army officer states that Germany has 4,000,000 men with the colors and Austria 2,500,000. France, he says, has 3,500,000 men with the colors and 2,000,000 now in training in the interior provinces. In May, England had 1,600,000 men in France. Since that time large contingents of British troops have been sent from Egypt to the west front.

ORDERS FOR MUNITIONS.

As evidence that the British expect the war to be going full tilt in the spring of 1917, they have been placing large orders for munitions in the United States, on contracts running until May, 1917. One order for $60,000,000 worth of munitions has been placed since the beginning of the recent offensive.

It doesn't seem now to be of so much importance which side wins the honor of a victory in the war. I have never believed that either side would win enough of a victory to crow over. The important thing is that the finances and the wealth resources of the world must stand the strain of another year of this dreadful bleeding.

Every thoughtful person is asking himself, aghast, what the world will be like when these great powers finally fight themselves to a finish and stop.

From a rather superficial glance into the probabilities of the future, it would seem that the blow will fall hardest on France and lightest on Russia.

It seems clear to me that the continuance of this war is sure to make Russia the greatest power in the world.

I have never believed that it would be possible for the allies to defeat Germany in the sense that they hope for; but it is fairly to be anticipated that Turkey and probably Austria will feel the heavy hand of the victor.

Russia is very likely to be in possession of the Dardanelles when the war closes. The events of the war in the Mediterranean not only indicate that England expects this, but that England regards the prospect as a menace. The British have grabbed up enough Aegean islands belonging to other people since the war began practically to command the entrance to the Dardanelles even if the straits should be taken by Russia.

THE SLAV MENACE.

With at last an outlet into the Mediterranean, with her mighty arm reaching down to enfold the shores of the Black Sea, her soldiers and her sphere of influence reaching down into Persia and backing up to the back door of India at the Kyber Pass, Russia will stand as a threatening menace to every power in Europe, while her new ally Japan will threaten those who dispute the sway of the Slav on the Pacific shores.

There is every reason to believe that this war will be the dawn of a new and wonderful day for both Japan and Russia.

To a nation whose people are as the leaves of a great forest, the drain of man loss cannot have affected Russia. The "great white Czar" never did have any money, but the resources of his empire are so prodigious that the war expenses cannot have nicked him very seriously.

When I was in Germany last summer, the German business men with whom I carefully canvassed the whole financial situation told me with genuine regret that they thought the war would utterly ruin France. Whereas Russia has been obliged to beat a grumbling retreat, the real wealth of the empire has not been touched by the invading armies. With France it is different. Her manufacturing centers, her champagne vineyards and her mines have been in the possession of the Germans ever since the war began.

When the war ends, it is almost certain that France will recover these provinces, if not actually during the war. But she will have to take up life anew with her wealth torn into shreds and her population depleted to a harrowing degree.

England is so rich that she can probably endure even this financial tapping, although $30,000,000 a day, continued for three years, is a tidy sum to juggle with. Men eminent in world affairs with whom I have discussed this matter have nearly all agreed that the British Empire, at the close of the war, is due for a very dangerous strain which will be both political and social. The dark clouds of her labor troubles are already lowering. There is a general feeling in diplomatic circles that she will have a hard time with India and, because of India, a hard time holding the scattered empire together.

GERMAN ENDURANCE.

There is much speculation as to how Germany will endure another year of war. In the literal sense of the word, there is no prospect of Germany being starved out during the coming year. She has had too much time to conserve food supplies and has had the benefit of too much alien ground upon which to raise extra crops.

The best informed German business men with whom I convassed this situation a year ago had no doubt of the ability of Germany to hold out indefinitely; but they expressed great concern as to the conditions that might prevail in Germany after the war. Especially if the war lasted three years or longer.

"If we do not win such a victory that will give us indemnity from some defeated country, I can only hope that God will give us the courage to bear what will be in store for us," said one of the merchant princes of Saxony to me one night in Leipzig last August.

His fear was based upon three propositions: That the war would end with all the other nations hating Germany and German goods: that the war would cause such a famine in dyes that America would, by force of necessity, learn to make dyes; that, during the war, other nations would be able to invade German sphere of commercial influence and capture German trade.

Of the three he considered the second to be the most serious. If the secret of German dyes is preserved, Germany expects to be able to force other nations to swallow what hatred they may have and to win back whatever customers they may have lost.

In the opinion of Herr von Weinburg, one of the dictators of the dye market of the world, to whom I talked in Frankfurt, the third year of the war will be the period of danger for the German dye secrets.

"Ordinarily, we could keep our secrets forever," he said. "Your American dye houses employ five or six chemists. I have employed 500 chemists and have employed 500 for forty years. You haven't the patience or the time to experiment with dyes; but if this war goes on into the third year, dyes will become so scarce that the necessity for dyes will be so great in America that you are likely to make unusual efforts in this regard."

GERMANY'S ADVANTAGE.

Over all the other nations concerned in the war Germany has one great advantage. Her war debts are all home debts. The German people have financed the war. If it becomes necessary for her to repudiate her debts, or to extend them far into the future, Germany can do so without hurting her credit.

The fate of Austria seems to be disintegration. No matter with what brave front Germany emerges from the war, it is hard to see how Austria can avoid a break-up, an eventuality to be hastened by the death of the aged Franz Josef.

Meanwhile if the war is to last another year, America cannot hope to come out unscarred. Three years of a war of such magnitude will so reduce the world's wealth that every person and every nation in the world must feel the squeeze to some extent.

LODGE SCORES WILSON AS MERE PHRASE MAKER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NANTASKET (Mass.) Aug. 19.—Asserting that the present government at Washington has been an "administration of words," Senator Henry Cabot Lodge made his opening speech of the Presidential campaign at an outing of the Republican Club of Dorchester here today. Mr. Lodge said in part:

"Behind a great barrier of words, the President has sheltered himself, surrounded by a cloud of phrases; big words with no meaning.

"After the awful disaster of the Lusitania the President used the memorable phrase, 'too proud to fight.' The country responded the next morning. It was not a friendly response.

"So he changed and we had a great note on 'strict accountability.' And it remains a phrase. There never has been a reparation or even an apology for the Americans drowned or killed on the Lusitania.

"The same phrase was posted on the consulate of Mexico not long ago—that if any injury came to Americans, Mexico would be held strictly accountable. Americans have been killed and every outrage committed, and 'strictly accountable' still remains the false and empty phrase.

"Another cry, 'kept us out of war.' It is not easy to get into war when nobody wants to go to war with you."

Senator Lodge predicted that Massachusetts would give Hughes a larger plurality than the plurality of the combined Taft and Roosevelt vote in 1912.

PORTERVILLE, Aug. 19.—With H. C. Carr, N. M. Hall, J. A. Althouse, C. E. Robin and J. A. Fuller, all prominent Porterville business men, who are also interested in the orange industry, as incorporators, the Sunland Packing-house Company has filed articles at Visalia. HUGHES SPEAKS AT SAN JOSE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN JOSE, Aug. 19.—Charles E. Hughes, Republican candidate for President, passed through here tonight on his way to Los Angeles. Arrangements had been made for a ten-minute talk from the observation car and the crowd, after a great outburst of applause, listened in perfect silence and good order to the speech. Mr. Hughes, after being introduced by Congressman E. A. Hayes, touched upon the broadest aspects of the Republican policy. He argued the necessity for adequate military, naval and commercial preparedness.

SHORTAGE ALLEGED IN TEXAS BANK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

LONGVIEW (Tex.) Aug. 19.—The Peoples State Bank closed its doors yesterday by order of the State bank examiner, because of an alleged shortage of $120,000 in the funds of the bank. Mayor G. A. ALL IN READINESS FOR HUGHES DAY.

VISIT TO EXPOSITION WILL BE MADE NOTABLE.

Presidential Candidate and His Party will be Escorted at San Diego by Procession of Automobiles, Every One New—To Speak at Great Pipe Organ.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 18.—All plans have been completed for Hughes's day here Monday, and it promises to be one of the biggest days in the history of the exposition.

Some changes have been necessary in the programme for the time of Mr. and Mrs. Hughes's stay here. Instead of escorting them to the exposition at 9 o'clock it has been decided that an hour's drive to Point Loma from 9 to 10 will afford a better chance for Mr. Hughes to rest. President G. A. Davidson's car will be sent for the distinguished visitors.

At 10 o'clock the reception committee will meet Mr. Hughes and his party at the train and escort them to the exposition. A feature of this parade will be that every car in it will be a new, unused automobile. Besides the large reception committee, the directors of the exposition, the woman's board and others, there will be in the procession hundreds of automobiles from the country.

At 11 o'clock a great reception will be held on the Plaza de Panama, where everyone may shake hands with Mr. and Mrs. Hughes. The tree planting by Mr. Hughes that was first planned will not take place.

At noon the Hughes luncheon will be held at the Cristobal and at 1:30 the Presidential candidate will speak at the big organ, when Ellen Beach Yaw will sing.

Mr. and Mrs. Hughes will leave here at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon.

DENMARK'S KING ADVISES HARMONY

CALLS POLITICAL LEADERS TO IMPORTANT CONFERENCE.

Asks Them to Shake Hands with Each Other in Token of Toleration and Suggests They Bury Differences of the Past—May Form Coalition Ministry.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 19.—King Christian of Denmark summoned the leaders of all the political parties in Parliament today and delivered an address which is quoted as follows by Reuter's Copenhagen correspondent:

"It is under serious circumstances that I have summoned you. The world war still rages vehemently and nations stand sharply against each other. During past years we have enjoyed the blessings of peace, but uncertainty is still existent for us, as was the case two years ago.

"It is a great task I have given you to try to shake hands in toleration and forget for the time differences between parties. If you succeed I believe you will have written the most beauteous page in the political history of Denmark, in which it will be recorded that during a time of uncertainly for her each voter was represented in the King's Council. I wish you God's blessing for alleviating the difficulties you have to to overcome."

The leaders afterward attended party caucuses at which all declared themselves willing to negotiate concerning the formation of a coalition Ministry.

FOSTER AMERICAN TRADE, DECLARATION OF HUGHES

Can't Run the Government by Mixing Business and Politics, He Says.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19.—Charles E. Hughes told audiences here and in Oakland today that the government of the United States could not properly be conducted by mixing politics with business, with preparedness, with the maintenance of international honor, or with other administrative functions of government.

"When you start out to be military, be military and not political," Mr. Hughes told an audience in Oakland.

"I do not believe we can run this government by mixing business and politics," the nominee said to a gathering of business men here a short time before the Oakland meeting. At Oakland Mr. Hughes repeated his declaration that he favored fostering honorable American achievements in business and adjusting difficulties by finding and acting upon the facts.

FAVORS PUBLICITY.

"You can break down your prosperity by prostituting yourself in the face of an unjust popular demand," Mr. Hughes said. "I shall never do that. And the unjust popular demand is only unjust because the facts are not understood. The only thing I am afraid of in this country is the dark. When we get things out into the light of day and see the actual facts we generally find out where truth and justice lie.

"Some people live in dreamland," Mr. Hughes continued, in speaking of the need for military and commercial preparedness. "They do not understand the actual world we live in."

The nominee spoke of Federal commissions to investigate various situations.

"We have developed commissions of investigation," he said. "What do they amount to unless we have expert commissioners? Commissioners are nothing except as they are dominated by good sense, inspired by loyalty and patriotism and controlled by the facts and the justice of the case before them.

"I believe we can put down what is wrong without destroying what is good. In weeding our garden we do not want to pull up the useful plants. We do not desire in correcting abuses to destroy the opportunities of success. We are competent, if we go about it in the right way, to destroy abuses, to secure open, fair dealing and at the same time make possible honest enterprise.

"We cannot go forward unless we realize ourselves nationally. We must more than ever understand that national powers are to be exercised and that national prosperity can be gained only by the potency of our national organization."

INVISIBLE GOVERNMENT.

Mr. Hughes declared himself opposed to invisible government. "I want," he said, "visible government, competent administration, not only by those elected by the people, but by appointees of elected officials who represent the competence, the intelligence and the talent of the nation. We are entitled to that."

In his address to the business men of San Francisco at the Commercial Club, Mr. Hughes spoke, in part, as follows:

"We come to a constructive period, a difficult period, a period in which America must look forward with greater confidence in the soundness of our life than she has hitherto had. We have had an abundant surgery. Nobody can live by surgery alone, however necessary it may be.

"We have got to have hygienic treatment. The system of the patient must be built up by abundant exercise, by fresh exercise and abundant nutrition. I am glad to think that we already are for that forward movement and now I think we can be sure that we can control monopolistic parties, and that we can prevent unjust discrimination. We can secure a square deal and yet we can foster enterprise, build up and not destroy, encourage and not fetter, and make the honorable man of business feel that he has a free avenue to an honest success.

FUTURE OF COUNTRY.

"If we cannot so judge the United States then our future is a troublous one and we will fail as great nations of the past have failed. We are but a young people. We are only an experiment. [illegible] times our age have [illegible] left but scant memorials. We [illegible] as I say, a very difficult [illegible] government. It requires [illegible] attention, and constant study [illegible] attention on the part of those [illegible] know. The man who knows [illegible] man I want to talk to about [illegible] department of life.

"I do not believe it is necessary to prostitute public business in order to have the confidence of the electorate; I think that is a great mistake. What we need in this country, as I have said, is, first, to have correct principles.

"This is a nonpartisan [illegible] I do not want to abuse it by talking in a partisan way, but I should be unjust to myself if I did not say that as a principle—as a principle which of course must be carefully and prudently applied—that we must have the idea of protecting American enterprises against the competition of other nations acting under their protection on a different basis in regard to wages and standards of living from what we have. We must not be afraid of perfect co-operation.

FUTURE ACHIEVEMENT.

"Everywhere along the line from this time on we have to consider not what each one can do in a haphazard way, but what is the best way to do things in order to achieve things in the future. For example, [illegible] practice is only comparatively new of keeping properly the items of cost so that you get from the manufacturer a real cost sheet. How many realize now what can be done and where improvements can be made?

"I have talked with many along that line and I believe without doing you gentlemen an injustice that there is a great deal that we have yet to learn in this country in order that we may hold our own with the better organized nations abroad.

"We have work yet to do in this country. We are loose, we are disjointed and we are unorganized. I want to see fair co-operation on a proper basis with such supervision as is necessary to prevent abuse in order that we can go forward and advance our foreign trade throughout the world.

"Now, when the nation has something to do and undertakes the management of any particular kind of work it ought to be done in a way that would be a pattern for the entire country, so that Federal standards in every form of governmental activity would furnish a pattern to any State activity of a like nature.

"The fact that we have the State supreme in its sphere and the nation supreme in its sphere, [illegible] that where the two interests [illegible] Federal power must be regarded as the dominant power does not mean that we should not have those accommodations which will give certainty and security to all business activities that come in contact with the government where interest is local.

LOCAL INTERESTS.

"There should be opportunity [illegible] to be heard where the interest is local. Where the interest is [illegible] there must be the opportunity [illegible] to be heard. Where you have a district or territory or area in which there is doubt there should be opportunity for such to be heard [illegible] a proper tribunal by which, as an administrative matter, the question can be determined, and have no twilight zone—no place of uncertainty in which business can fall into disesteem and come under a cloud of doubt.

"I maintain that wherever we have the government represented in regulation and supervision, it must be a regulation and supervision that is really expert and squares with the facts of business life. There is no conflict between the public right and what is right for the individual when properly understood. The difficulty comes in when we have incompetence and fear and apprehension and a desire to please this one or that one instead of squarely facing the facts and relying upon the common sense of justice."

CHINA PROTESTS ACTION OF JAPS.

Sending Troops to Mongolia Resented at Peking.

Situation Causes Discussion in Tokio Cabinet.

Recent Disturbance Result of Bandit Attacks.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—China has protested to Japan, it was learned here today, against the sending of 2000 troops to Cheng-chia-tung in Eastern Mongolia, because of recent disturbances there resulting in a clash between Chinese and Japanese troops.

It is contended by the Peking government that when the local magistrate ordered precautions taken against an expected raid by nomadic bandits who were seizing prominent persons in that section for ransom some of the Japanese residents refused to obey. The magistrate attempted to enforce the order by arresting a Japanese, it is said, whereupon the Japanese began armed resistance, which resulted in about seventeen deaths on both sides. The Japanese captured the magistrate and took him away. The Japanese are said to have received reinforcements from their near-by garrisons in South Manchuria, and reports from Tokio say a regiment of cavalry, three battalions of infantry and a mixed company with machine guns have been dispatched to the city. China at once entered a protest, and the whole situation was discussed Friday by the Japanese Cabinet, which announced that its attitude would depend on the attitude and co-operation of China.

CHINESE CABINET IS UNPOPULAR.

PROBABLY WON'T LAST MANY MONTHS MORE.

New Minister of Foreign Affairs will not be Able to Come to Peking for Some Time—Members of the Old Parliament are Returning.

[[illegible] FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PEKING, July 15.—Tuan Chi-jui's new Cabinet represents practically all political parties in China, as well as geographical divisions. But it does not seem to appeal very strongly to any of the political parties, and predictions are general that the new Cabinet will not last many months.

Tang Shao-yi, the new Minister of Foreign Affairs, and several of the other members of the Cabinet will not be able to come to Peking for some time. Political conditions [illegible] very much unsettled, and probably will be for many months. It is not anticipated that the reconvening on August 1 of the Parliament which Yuan Shi-kai disbanded will immediately bring about a solution of the political difficulties.

Representatives of the various prominent political leaders of the South who dare not come to Peking at this time have gathered in the capital, and others are coming. Scores of members of the old Parliament are already in Peking engaging in political controversy. About 200 other members of the old Parliament are gathered at Shanghai, where they are meeting informally and keeping in touch with the situation in the capital.

Hsu Shih-ying, the new Minister of the Interior, was a judge under the Tsing dynasty, and rose to the post of Minister of Justice in the early days of the republic. He was forced to resign this position, and later became Governor of Fukien province, a post which he held until the outbreak of hostilities in the recent revolution.

Chang Kuo-kan, the new Minister of Commerce and Agriculture, was a member of the State Council under Yuan Shi-kai, and was intimately connected with the monarchical movement.

[illegible] Hung-yi, the new Minister of Education, has been a prominent politician most of his life. He took a strong position in opposition to Yuan Shi-kai's monarchical movement, and did able work for the Republican cause at Shanghai.

Chang Yao-tseng, who becomes Minister of Justice in the new Cabinet, is a graduate of a Japanese university and a member of the Parliament which Yuan Shi-kai disbanded. He formerly taught in the Government university at Peking. When the monarchical movement was started last year, he left the capital and joined the revolutionists in [illegible] province.

Admiral Chen Pih-kuan, who becomes Minister of the Navy, was educated in a British naval school and has served in the Chinese navy most of his life. He was a captain commanding the cruiser Haichi when the revolution broke out in 1911. For some time he served as naval adviser to the late President Yuan Shi-kai.

ARE WE SOON TO BECOME A RACE OF BALD-HEADED MEN?

PROF. JOHN H. AUSTIN

Hair Specialist of Chicago, Who is Now at Hamburger's, Talks most Interestingly About the Hair.

He says that baldness is increasing rapidly among men and points out some of the reasons. Prof. Austin is probably right in saying that about one man in every hundred ever thinks about his hair at all, except to comb it two or three times a day. If it falls out he looks anxiously at the falling hair, and then promptly forgets it until the next time he uses the comb.

A man will give the utmost attention to his teeth, because he knows that when trouble arises he will have more trouble and probably lose his teeth if he doesn't go to a dentist promptly. But his hair doesn't ache, it just gradually dies, and when it is nearly gone, and the roots are dead, he anxiously tries a dozen different remedies at once and then resigns himself to baldness.

According to Prof. Austin, there are somthing like 60 different conditions of the scalp and hair. Some are contagious. Others develop from neglect. Practically all of them are curable in the early stages.

Prof Austin examines the roots of your hair with a powerful microscope. He finds out just what is the trouble with YOUR HAIR, and then he tells you what to do for that trouble.

It doesn't cost a penny for the examination, and it puts you under no obligation to follow his advice if you don't want to do so.

Prof. Austin has devoted thirty-seven years to studying the hair and scalp. Surely it will be worth the few minutes it takes to let him turn the microscope on your hair.

During the past nineteen months Prof. Austin has made thousands of free microscopic examinations of the hair and scalp of our patrons—they enthusiastically appreciate this free service.

He will make FREE MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATION of the hair and scalp all this week in his private office on the second floor, Hamburger's. Hours, 10 to 12 p. m. and 2 to 4 p. m.

Michigan and Wisconsin Resorts Have High Temperatures with Nights Comparatively Cool—Two Deaths are Reported in Chicago. Cold Storms in the Dakotas.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 19.—Hot weather continues over all the East and Middle West, with no promise of relief before Monday. Chicago's maximum today was 95 deg., the lowest temperature of the night being 82 deg., which means general suffering. Tonight it is 85 deg. Michigan and Wisconsin resorts report 96 to 98 deg., but the nights comparatively cool. Hurricanes on the Texas coast will have no effect upon the weather this far north, the only hope being cold storms in the Dakotas. Two deaths were reported in Chicago and thirty-four babies succumbed to the effects of the heat. Temperatures elsewhere, as reported by the United States Weather Bureau, were as follows:

Gen. Funston was asked to express his views on the military aspects of the expedition. There is every indication that the commissioners, and later the administration, were expected to abide by the recommendations of the chief military adviser on border matters.

Publication of the fact that Gen. Funston believes it wise to withdraw the troops may hamper the American commissioners, some officials think, in obtaining whatever guarantees they may ask of the Mexican government as to security of the border from bandit raids. It is believed the administration is fully prepared to arrange for the recall of Gen. Pershing's force, since both State and War Department officials are understood to share the views expressed in Gen. Funston's report.

There can be little doubt, it is now said, that the withdrawal will be promptly agreed to when the commission meets, the conferees then turning their attention to the drafting of a protocol to cover future border operations, investigation of the causes of bandit raids, and such other matters as they may wish to take up.

No intimation came from the White House today as to when announcement of the American membership of the commission might be expected. In view of Secretary Lansing's recent assurances to Eliseo Arredondo, Mexican Ambassador-designate, that the commission could be assembled very soon, it was believed tonight that the names of the commissioners would be made public early next week. Secretary Lane, who will head the delegation, already has accepted the post, and as soon as his associates have been named and their views as to the meeting place ascertained, an agreement on that point will be reached by Secretary Lansing and Mr. Arredondo.

HAY GETS IN LINE ON THE ARMY BILL.

PROSPECT OF SPLIT ON VETO HAS VANISHED.

When Measure Comes Back from the Senate it will Contain New Articles of War and will Likely Become a Law—Chairman Soon to Retire.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—Prospects of a Congressional split over President Wilson's veto of the army bill went glimmering today and the attitude of Chairman Hay of the House Military Committee was one of acquiescence toward passing the bill with such a revision of the articles of war as the President and the War Department say is necessary. Mr. Hay, it became known, will not oppose the bill when it comes back from the Senate containing the new articles of war, but not the exemptions to retired officers which caused the President to veto the bill.

Chairman Hay, who will retire from Congress next month to take a place on the Court of Claims, today denied that his objection to the exemption article was inspired by former Adjt.-Gen. Ainsworth or any other retired officer. The Congressman himself identified the officer whose name has been used in this connection as Gen. Ainsworth.

Chairman Hay said his advocacy of the exemption article resulted from instances of injustice to retired officers he had observed.

WHY PACIFIC MAIL HAS BEEN RESUMED.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—The resumption of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's trans-Pacific service announced yesterday is made possible, says President George Baldwin, by the present high rates for freight.

"We know that during the existence of the present abnormal freight rates these ships can be profitably operated," said Mr. Baldwin, "and having bought them, we propose to continue their operation as long as this may prove profitable, believing that such revision of our laws will be made as will enable us to continue permanently the only trans-Pacific line operating under the American flag."

WANTS A WARNING TO COUNTY CLERKS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19.—Judge Walter Bordwell of Los Angeles asked the State Supreme Court today to direct every county clerk in California to omit his name from the official primary ballots as a candidate for the nomination for United States Senator. Yesterday the Supreme Court issued such a writ against the Clerk of Orange county.

EDITOR FOUND DROWNED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MILL VALLEY, Aug. 19.—N. F. Douglass, editor of the Mill Valley Record, was found drowned today in the bay off Sausalito. He had just bought the paper and his wife and children are on their way here from Montana. The county authorities are investigating.

¶ The Times completely overwhelms and submerges every other newspaper in Los Angeles in the volume of classified and display advertising printed every month in the year. This is due to the undeniable fact that The Times gets its advertising patrons quicker and better results than any other local medium.

MORMON BISHOP FEASTS INDIANS

Barbecue and Watermelons, Lemonade on Side.

Phoenix Railway Abandons a Line from Economy.

Tucson's City Charter Called a Back Number.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Aug. 18.—A novel feast lately was enjoyed by 700 Pima and Maricopa Indians, residents of the Salt River and Lehi reservations, above Tempe. They were the guests of the Mormon missionary, Bishop Tiffany, whose church has many redskin communicants. There was a barbecue, with watermelons as a second course and with an abundance of lemonade. A considerable number of young men of the Salt River reserve now are with the Arizona troops on the border, members of the Indian company of the National Guard. Eight of them are needed at home, for the support of dependent families, and a petition in their behalf has been forwarded by Bishop Tiffany.

FOR ECONOMY.

The Phoenix Railway Company has just abandoned its First-street line, consolidating it with the Fourth-street line, for reasons of economy in operation and to save large paving expense. Mandamus proceedings promptly have been begun against the corporation by First-street property owners, who claim to have assisted in construction of the road and who seek to compel resumption of service.

TO CHANGE AFFILIATIONS.

Atty.-Gen. Jones is said to have telephoned officials in several counties that voters should be allowed to change the record of their party affiliations, if so desired, before the date of the primary election.

TO HEAR HUGHES.

Reservations have been made for fifty Arizonans on the platform of the Los Angeles Shrine Auditorium at the Hughes meeting through the courtesy of the California Campaign Committee. A considerable number are expected to go from Phoenix to secure a near view of the next President and the seats will at least be filled, for hundreds of summering Arizonans still remain on the Coast.

BOND ISSUE ELECTION.

The City Commission has reaffirmed its order that an election be held October 3 to pass upon the question whether the city shall issue bonds for construction of a municipal electric light and power plant and gas plant. This was an issue at the late election and the commission had little alternative. The Pacific Gas and Electric Company, which has about three-quarters of a million at stake in the matter, presented the commission a plan for an unofficial referendum among all the tax-paying electors, a majority of whom, it was claimed, are not in favor of the large addition proposed to the already considerable bonded debt of the city. It was pointed out that the election was called on petition of 600 names, of which only 100 were those of elector taxpayers, while the company had presented a negative petition with 1300 names, of which 600 were qualified to vote on a bond issue.

LOSES HER MONEY.

Mrs. S. L. Prescott, a colored evangelist, traveling from Los Angeles to Phoenix, is in Yuma, where she tells she was robbed on the train of a purse containing $85 in money and her transportation.

JUNIOR REPUBLIC.

Government by means of a Junior Republic was very successful during a two-weeks' camping trip just concluded by twenty members of the Mesa Boy Scouts, under Scoutmaster John Cumnard. In charge of discipline, one of the lads acted as Mayor and police judge, assisted by a sheriff and prosecuting attorney. Another lad had large powers as a camp and sanitary inspector.

MANY NEWS FAKES.

The season in Arizona has had rather an overproduction of news fakes. One of them, that concerned an alleged meeting in Phoenix of representatives of the Russian, Japanese and Mexican governments, has been dignified by investigation during the past few days by a government inspector, who has been unable to trace the story back of the newspaper office.

TUCSON CITY CHARTER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) Aug. 18.—Tucson's city charter is declared out of date. It was granted by the Legislature in 1883, when the initiative, referendum and recall were unknown. Now it is suggested that the experiment of having a City Manager be made permanent and that a full commission form of government be demanded. Though only an opposing labor-union element seems hostile to the present city administration, it is believed that greater economy could be secured under a commission.

Chief of Police James Cullen, on the day of his announcement of candidacy for re-election, has been summoned before the City Council to answer charges of threatening the life of F. J. Wharton, a local magazine publisher, in the event the Chief failed of success in the election. Cullen also is charged with having permitted the listing of fictitious names on the station blotter, when arrested individuals were averse to publicity, and with having sustained the desk sergeant in an unauthorized release of Nick Brown, a revenue officer, said to have been drunk and disorderly in the restricted district, but who claimed to be in that quarter securing evidence against the opium traffic.

Josefina Finley, shot through the head, from ear to eye nearly three weeks ago at Sasco, has nearly recovered from her experience and is ready to leave the hospital, to which she was taken to die.

F. W. Taylor has assumed management of the property of the Tucson Farms Company, succeeding the Mankenheimer brothers, two of whom will take over direct control of property owned by them in California.

SUGGESTS YUAN MAY NOT BE DEAD.

ENEMIES OF LATE PRESIDENT HAVE NEW THEORY.

Astounding View has Found its Way into the Chinese Press Emphasizing that Financial Irregularities Must be Concealed from Public.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PEKING, July 15.—Not content with surrounding Yuan Shi Kai's death by mystery and suggesting that he either killed himself or was poisoned, the enemies of the late President are now suggesting that he is not dead at all, but has made his escape to a foreign land and shielded his associates in alleged financial irregularities by means of the funeral and changed government.

This astounding view is not confined to mere word-of-mouth gossip, but has found its way into the Chinese press, and is apparently believed by some Chinese, particularly those of the coolie class.

An anonymous letter writer whose communication appears in the Peking Daily Gazette says: "Do you think anyone is so stupid to believe that Yuan Shi Kai is dead, or this whole piece of public theatrical by which we have just been entertained is anything more than a huge and very successful practical joke perpetrated by those implicated in China's misfortunes so as to free themselves from the grip of justice?

"Just allow me to run over the scenes in this recent farce. First: The banks were robbed officially and a lot of other depredations committed. There was no way to escape the consequences except by heaping all the blame on one person, and then smuggling him away in feigned death.

"Second: The other particeps criminis had sufficient latent power at the time of Yuan Shi Kai's 'death,' and his successor had sufficient generosity to accord Yuan Shi Kai the burial of a national hero."

In concluding his letter, the correspondent says: "Talk of foreign experts! What are foreign experts but so many associated for the chicanery to a corrupt bureaucracy? Does China need any foreign advice —or has she ever taken any—in the tricks of politics, diplomacy, finance, electioneering, or of journalism? China can give tips to a corrupt world in any of the fine arts of statecraft. I do not refer to professional experts. When you buy a machine in any country or embark in anything new, you get a man to show you its work; but the Chinese are past masters at anything in statecraft."

SWAMPER KILLED BY ENGINE BLADE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VAN NUYS, Aug. 19.—John Martin, a swamper on a caterpillar engine, was instantly killed at 3 a.m. when a fan blade, revolving at a speed of 3000 revolutions per minute, broke and buried itself in his skull to a depth of four inches.

Martin had gone to the front of the huge machine to turn on the oil when the accident occurred. J. C. Peterson, who was driving the engine, did not see the accident in the darkness and drove twice around the field before he missed Martin. A search following revealed Martin lying in the field, dead.

In transmitting the message a mistake was made and the report was understood to say that Martin had been murdered. A fast run from police headquarters was made to the scene of the accident. The body was removed to the undertaking parlors of Langum & Nordvold, where a Coroner's inquest will be held Monday.

LARGE SHIPMENTS OF BUTTER EAST.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Aug. 19.—In response to a direct order, a carload of butter was shipped yesterday from the Visalia Co-operative Creamery to a New York City wholesaler. Other cars will follow.

While shipments of California butter to the East are of comparatively recent origin, the Visalia creamery alone has sent 170,000 pounds of butter to the Atlantic Coast since February 1, 1916.

For cream supplied during the month of July, the Visalia Co-operative Creamery paid out Wednesday $30,000. The company is now turnout out two tons of butter each day.

COLORADO ARRIVES.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 19.—After what her officers termed an uneventful stay of two months on duty off the lower coast of Mexico, the cruiser Colorado, now flagship of the Pacific reserve fleet, with Rear-Admiral W. F. Fullam on board, arrived in port this afternoon. The Colorado left Acapulco Monday. Conditions in the several Mexican coast towns are more quiet than for months past, according to the Colorado's officers.

INVISIBLE GAS USED ON SLAVS.

Deadly War Material Tried on the Eastern Front.

Only Warning is when Men are Seen to Stagger.

New Magazines on Rifles may Work a Revolution.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, Aug. 19.—The Germans, it is reported, are about to use on the French front a colorless poison gas which they have been using to a great extent on the Russians in the East. The lack of color prevents detection by the enemy of the advancing clouds of gas, thereby catching them without their helmets on. The gas is absolutely invisible, not even presenting the appearance of a haze to the eye. When it arrives at a position the men are suddently seen to gasp, their heads droop and their hands fall to rest.

The Russian officers have issued stringent orders to their men to don their gas masks instantly they see any of their comrades, particularly in advance, stagger or reel. Whenever the wind blows from the German trenches, instructions go forward to all the men to maintain a sharp vigilance in order that the first effects of the gas readily may be detected.

The French troops also are discovering a new German magazine which increases the rifle capacity of the Teutonic armies about 400 per cent. This magazine is in common use also on the Russian front where the lack of long continued trench fighting makes the magazine more useful than in France where the German sharpshooters have plenty of time to load their weapons.

Heretofore the magazine of the German rifle has contained only five cartridges, but the new magazine enables twenty-five cartridges to be fed to the firing mechanism before a reloading is necessary. On the Russian front more than half of the rifles captured are fitted with the new magazine.

The prisoners taken by the French say the new magazines soon will be in common use among all the Teutonic armies, the output of the factories being directed to the Italian and western fronts when the troops resisting the Russians have been completely outfitted.

THEFT BY WEALTHY WOMAN?

Reputed Jeweler's Wife Said to Have Confessed Guilt.

Mrs. Eleanore Sauer, who told the police her husband is a wealthy and prominent jeweler of San Diego, was arrested at Third street and Broadway yesterday afternoon by detectives of the Nick Harris agency. She is charged with being a shoplifter. At the Central Police Station Mrs. Sauer is said to have confessed to having taken about $30 worth of silk stockings, handkerchiefs and other articles.

Several days ago Mrs. Sauer and her sister, Mrs. Raflin, arrived at the Alhambra Hotel in this city. Her arrest yesterday threw her into hysterics and for a time she was unable to talk coherently.

A report from San Diego said that Mrs. Ella S. Sauer, the wife of A. Ray Sauer, a jeweler employed by L. M. Schiller, a big jewelry firm of that city, was known to have been visiting in Los Angeles. Her sister-in-law, Miss Sauer, said that nothing had been heard by the family of Mrs. Sauer's arrest, and believe there must be a mistake in the identification. Mrs. Sauer expected to go north from here after a short visit in this city.

HOLT TO BUILD FINE RESIDENCE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VAN NUYS, Aug. 19.—W. F. Holt, one of the pioneer developers of the Imperial Valley, has taken out a building permit for a $35,000 home to be built in the South Van Nuys foothills. Mr. Holt recently purchased 800 acres here, adjoining the estate of Harold Bell Wright, the celebrated novelist. Mr. Holt and Mr. Wright are old-time friends and were neighbors in the Imperial Valley.

Mr. Wright purchased a tract of land in the beautiful mountains just south of here two years ago, and it was not long until his old neighbor and close friend followed suit. It is understood that Mr. Holt will develop his place into a beautiful country home and model stock farm.

NEW POULTRY RANCH.

Then acres in the Van Nuys Bungalow Home tract were sold to M. A. Schofield of Gardena, president of the Poultry Federation of Southern California, and A. C. Olsen, his partner and one of the most prominent poultrymen of this section. Mr. Schofield is one of the leading men in his line in the State and has been president of the Federation for a number of years. He and Mr. Olsen expect to build a model hatchery and pullet plant, where the fowls will be raised to the laying stage.

Mr. Schofield states that on account of the climatic conditions and the fact that the poultryman grows his own green feed here, it is only a question of a few years until Southern California will lead all other communities in the world in the production of eggs.

Outlaws.

BRIGANDS IN MEXICO ARE OPERATING BOLDLY.

Thousands of Freebooters are in the Saddle Openly Ravaging Farms and Ranches—Necessity has Forced Large Number to Take to the Business to Avoid the Pangs of Starvation.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MONTEREY (Mex.) Aug. 10.—Fresh outbreaks of brigands are reported from the rural districts and towns of the States of San Luis Potosi, Coahuila, Tamaulipas, Guanajuato and Vera Cruz. Thousands of freebooters are in the saddle and are ravaging the farms and ranches, the village stores and whatever property falls within their path. These roving bands of outlaws usually operate boldly and openly and in some instances they are believed to have the support and sanction of the local government officials of their respective districts, where such authority exists. The condition of the country is almost indescribably bad. It is not an infrequent occurrence for a traveler between the city of Mexico and Monterey to be held up and robbed a half-dozen times while en route. All manner of means are taken to secrete valuables and money when one enters a train or other conveyance, to prevent the falling into the hands of bandits. The reign of brigandage that was widespread in Mexico at the time Porfirio Diaz became president was nothing to compare with that which now exists.

Necessity has forced great numbers of starving men to take to brigandage in order to provide food for themselves and their families. The practice of this kind of outlawry has become so general that it is now regarded even by the better element of citizenship as a more or less lawful occupation.

RANCHES ARE SACKED.

Several large American-owned ranches and plantations in the State of San Luis Potosi have been sacked recently by bandits. The Rio Tamasopa Sugar Company which is composed of Indiana men has been repeatedly preyed upon by outlaws during the last several weeks. Its rich property in the Huasteca valley has been robbed of practically everything movable of value. The same thing is true of La Concepcion plantation, which is owned by the Cunningham Investment Company, at Mirador, San Luis Potosi, bandits attacked the plantation of R. L. Heckman and after loading their pack-animals with all they could carry off, destroyed the remainder of the crops and applied the torch to the buildings. This work of robbery and destruction is going on all over the country.

Speculating in Carranza war currency is the chief business of the comparatively few people remaining in Mexico who still have money at their command. In the city of Mexico several Americans who refused to leave the country when President Wilson made his last call of alarm, have made fortunes of considerable size by buying up the war currency in the interior at prices ranging from three to four cents on the dollar and selling the paper money in the capital for twenty cents on the dollar. The chaotic condition of the money situation all over the country is as bad as ever and no relief is in sight. Hundreds of merchants that were forced to keep their places of business open by order of the de facto government have exhausted their stocks of goods and closed the doors of their establishments.

Unless relief of some kind comes to the missions of unemployed and suffering peons throughout the country before cold weather sets in the loss of life will astound the world. It is claimed by men who have had occasion to travel through different parts of the republic during the last few weeks, in probably no country upon this earth which offered any pretense of being civilized did such a horrible state of affairs ever exist as now afflicts the masses of people of Mexico.

Carranza and the coterie of ignorant and selfish men who surround him are absolutely unable to right the wrongs of the people, it is claimed by men who are in position to speak knowingly on the subject. Months have passed since the de facto government came into its so-called power. During that period it has not made a constructive move towards getting the people and the country out of the slough of death and ruin into which they have fallen. Beyond issuing a few decrees which have for their chief purpose the confiscation of the properties of the wealthy class of exiled Mexicans and placing additional burdens and hindrances upon American and other foreign investors of the country, Carranza has done nothing. No attempt has been made by him to give the different States and lesser political subdivisions and effective and capable governments.

The country is practically running itself. In the meanwhile Carranza sits in the private car or in the National Palace, as the case may be, and pompously dickers with the government at Washington on matters relating to the massing of American troops upon the border and the withdrawal of Pershing's forces from this country. It is with him like it is with most Mexicans, "manana," tomorrow will take care of itself; "who should worry?" The cry of the starving millions may move Carranza to sympathy but he is powerless to render the distressed people any aid.

CHANGE MUST BE QUICK.

If Carranza and the de facto government has any constructive policy in contemplation for bringing the lawless element under control, combatting the opposing revolutionary factions, placing the financial condition upon a stable basis and giving the people a stable government they have given the public no intimation of their plans in this respect. The Carranza army is said to be much weaker, both as to number of men and completeness of equipment, than it was three months ago. The internal affairs of the public as they closely relate to the people are becoming worse constantly.

According to reports received here Carranza sees the hopelessness of his ever being able to realize his ambition to be President. ever being able to be President He has consented that that honor shall go to Luis Cabrera, who is said to be his chief advisor. There are no prospects, however, of this plan being realized, as the uprising of the Legalista revolutionary party is scheduled to take place in the near future and the de facto government will be kept busy for a time at least.

VIENNA OFFICIALS BECOME JUNKMEN.

COLLECTING ALL THE METAL IN DUAL MONARCHY.

Most Comprehensive Campaign Since Beginning of War is Now On—People Must Surrender All Articles Which Can be Utilized in Munitions Manufacture.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

VIENNA, Aug. 10.—By far the most comprehensive campaign for the collection of metal that Vienna has known since the beginning of the war has been ordered. Not only must individuals turn over to the government practically all the metal they possess, but manufacturers, dealers, inn-keepers, restaurateurs, bakeries, sugar refineries, associations of all kinds, cloisters, hospitals, sanatoria and convalescent homes, bathing resorts, schools and educational institutions and countless similar organizations are going to have to surrender a large variety of materials.

The list of things that have to be turned in, against payment, as determined by the government some time ago, includes:

(1.) Cooking utensils of all kinds, pots, pans, casseroles, plates, cups, saucers, lamps and similar objects that are made of copper, or of metals of which copper is a component. Only knives, forks and spoons are exempt.

(2.) Soup tureens, pots, sauce and dessert dishes, vegetable containers, etc., made of pure nickel.

(3.) Kitchen utensils of every sort, irons, cups and lamps made of, brass.

(4.) Wash boilers, water kettles, hearth adjuncts, such as tongs, bathtubs and the like, made of copper or metal of which copper is an alloy.

(5.) Vessels for boiling fruit, made of copper or nickel.

(7.) Weights for scales weighing more than one pound.

(8.) Curtain rods and rug or carpet holders and such other rods used in the ordinary household as are easily removed and are made of brass.

Manufacturers of and dealers in any of the articles above enumerated are required for the time being to turn over only one-third of their supply on hand, reckoned by weight rather than value. All other possessors of metal are required to turn over everything they own, unless they can prove to a commission already in existence that this or that article is indispensable. Heavy penalties are provided for those who conceal anything.

No less than ninety-one commissions for receiving metal articles have been created to handle the arduous task of collecting all the available metal in Vienna. Up to the beginning of the compulsory surrender of metals, voluntary surrenders will be received as they are made. After that the city will specify days of surrender for all persons with names beginning with the letters A, B, etc. At the conclusion of the collection there will be granted a one-day leeway during which delinquents can explain why they have not turned in their possessions.

In case the owner of metal utensils subject to surrender cannot afford in advance to purchase substitutes, they will be purchased for him and their price deducted from the amount allowed him for his copper or nickel things. If the latter is less than the cost of new material, the city will bear the difference unless the utensils he turns in are not in usable condition.

Sardinia. Instead of going north of Sardinia and along the north shore of the Mediterranean, which before that time had proved the safest route, she went south of Sardinia and through the straits of Bonifacio, between Sardinia and Corsica.

Several armed Italian steamships have reported sighting submarines in the Mediterranean and in some instances being pursued by them and firing on them. Italian naval gunners were detailed to service on armed passenger vessels to operate the guns.

When the Italian steamship Re d'Italia arrived in New York August 6 from Genoa her captain reported she had fired on three submarines in the Mediterranean. She was pursued for seven hours and passengers said they believed one of the submarines had been sunk.

There has been some increase recently in submarine activity. The naval expert of the Paris Temps wrote on Thursday that the German submarine campaign against merchant ships was again in full swing, in accordance with the German note to the United States in February, in which it was said merchant ships carrying guns could not be considered as peaceful vessels.

The Stampalia was 476 feet long and 55 feet of beam. She was built at Spezia in 1909 and was owned at Genoa.

The New York agents for the Stampalia said today that two weeks ago they had received a cable message advising them that all sailings of the steamship had been cancelled. They express the opinion on this account that the Stampalia had been requisitioned and was in the service of the Italian government. In this case she would have no passengers on board.

BREMEN'S DASH MAY BE TODAY.

Activity of Allied Warships Reported off Coast.

Tug Hansa Takes Provisions Along the Water Front.

Weather Conditions Ideal for Submarine's Arrival.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BALTIMORE, Aug. 19.—Officials of the Eastern Forwarding Company are reticent tonight concerning the expected merchant submarine Bremen. It was plainly intimated, however, that it would be bad policy to indicate for publication at what port the Bremen was expected. She will make the port most available under the conditions that may confront her, said one who no doubt knows, but that was all the information obtainable.

Henry G. Hilken, local agent for the Schumacher Company and representative of the Eastern Forwarding Company, said tonight he had received no word from either the Deutschland or the Bremen. He added that he expected to receive word of the safe arrival of the Deutschland in a German port any minute.

The fact that Capt. Hinsch of the interned German steamer Neckar and other officers of that ship have located at New London, Conn., has been construed in some quarters as indicating that the Bremen would enter that port.

SIDETRACKING BALTIMORE.

Apparently the chief reason for the reported sidetracking of Baltimore as a submarine terminal is the long stretch between this port and the capes. It gives a lead of upward of twelve hours to the allied patrol. From New London and Providence the open sea may be reached in three or four hours.

Many hundred canvas bags, a little larger than those in which coin is transported, arrived at the pier of the Eastern Forwarding Company, at Locust Point, yesterday from a cotton duck manufacturer in the South. These bags are to be used for the transportation of nickel that is in the company's warehouse. Stevedores are there at work filling the bags with the nickel.

These operations give color to the reports from Norfolk tonight that the Bremen is expected within twenty-four hours at the capes. According to a dispatch from Norfolk tonight.

"A stir was caused all along the water front there today when the tug Hansa, formerly the Thomas F. Timmins, arrived in Norfolk and began overloading her bunkers with coal and larders with provisions. Remembering the tug's former long vigil off the Virginia Capes, which ended in the arrival of the German undersea merchantman Deutschland, and the continued rumors that her sister ship, the Bremen, is about due at the mouth of the Chesapeake, on her way to Baltimore, the news of the Hansa's arrival traveled fast.

MANY DOCK TODAY.

"Tonight the rumors are persistent that the Bremen will arrive at the capes some time early in the morning, or at least within the next twenty-four hours. It is declared that that is the reason for the Hansa's arrival and that tonight the tug will resume her vigil off the Cape Henry light. With a strong northeaster blowing, the sea choppy and the atmosphere misty, weather conditions are ideal for the Bremen's dash into the Chesapeake Bay.

"It is also true that reports of the expected arrival of the Bremen have reached the allied warships off the American coast. Two appeared again at the capes today, standing about five miles off."

SOCIALISTS FAVOR WEST INDIES SALE.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 19 (via London.)—The Socialist party adopted a resolution in caucus today expressing its willingness to be represented in a coalition Cabinet in order not to prevent the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States. It was stipulated in the resolution, however, that this action would be taken only on condition that the home and foreign defense policy of the new Cabinet should remain unchanged.

As the opposition, the Conservative and left parties, is unwilling to accept this condition, this means that a coalition Ministry is impossible.

BRITISH CRUISER APPROACHES MANILA.

[BY PACIFIC CABLE.]

MANILA, Aug. 19.—An unidentified British cruiser today entered the bay and came to within four miles of Manila Harbor when it turned and departed.

The insular government is considering making a protest charging violation of neutrality on the ground that the cruiser was on an observation trip.

SWISS DISPUTE MAY BE SOLVED.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Aug. 19.—The economic complications in which Switzerland is involved with Germany are attracting close attention in official circles here, but no serious view is taken of the situation. Conferences between German and Swiss delegates have been resumed in the attempt to solve difficulties caused by Germany's demand that Switzerland permit exportation of cotton and other products collected by Swiss agents. Unless this were done Germany threatened that she would prohibit exportation to Switzerland of coal, iron and other products essential for Swiss industries.

It has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of the commanding officers, it is stated, and according to the army men will revolutionize the culinary department of the American army in the field if adopted.

The entire outfit, capable of preparing food and hot water for a company of 150 men, folds into a package 14x20 and weighs 125 pounds, making a load for one side of a pack saddle, the other side of the pack to be filled with food.

HOLD BANK TELLER AS AN EMBEZZLER.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

PASS BILL TO PROTECT GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The Workmen's Compensation Bill, to provide uniform compensation for government employees when disabled and adequate benefits for their families in case of death was passed today by the Senate practically in the same form as it passed the House.

Federal employees would receive two-thirds wages through disability and provision is made for adequate medical attendance of injured to effect economy in preventing protracted compensation payments.

A commission to administer the workmen's compensation affairs will be composed of three members at $4000 a year each. The bill was drafted by the American Association for Labor Legislation, of which Irving Fisher of Yale is president. President Wilson, Jane Addams and Justice Brandeis are among the vice-presidents. The bill will go to the President next week.

GREAT BRITAIN TURNED INTO MUNITIONS WORKS.

Four Thousand Firms, Employing Two Million Workers, are Turning Out the Greatest Amount of Ammunition that he World has Ever Seen—Lloyd George's Work has Enabled Allies to Assume Offensive.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, July 31.—When the British forces in France began their great offensive bombardment on June 27 and for days hurled into the German lines such an avalanche of steel and lead as the world had never known before, even the people of England expressed wonder that it should have been possible to assemble so vast a store of munitions. The story of how these supplies were created constitutes one of the most important chapters in the history of British achievement during the war.

At the outbreak of hostilities two years ago there were only three important government munitions factories in the British Isles. Today some 4000 government-controlled firms, employing more than 2,000,000 workers, are turning out virtually all of the tremendous amount of war materials which have gone to equip the 5,000,000 British soldiers in the field.

The organization of this great industry has been accomplished in a little more than one year by the Ministry of Munitions, which was established in May, 1915, under the leadership of David Lloyd George. In that time every available resource of the country has been built for the production of munitions. Some idea of the scale upon which this organization has been carried out may be gathered from the statement that the largest of the new plants covers an area nine miles long and from three to four miles wide.

BIG STAFF REQUIRED.

A staff of 5000 people has been required to supervise the work. At the head of this staff, and responsible only to the Minister of Munitions, has been a man whose organizing ability has been accorded wide-spread recognition. He is Dr. Christopher Addison, internationally known for his medical research work. For some years he has devoted his attention to politics, and besides holding a seat in the House of Commons had been Parliamentary secretary to the Board of Education before entering on his present duties as Parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Munitions. Every detail of the munitions production is known to Dr. Addison, and during an interview with a representative of the Associated Press he told as much of the story of the creation of this industry as could be made public at this time.

At the outset he disposed of the statement which has been made in America to the effect that if it were not for the munitions furnished by the United States Great Britain would have to quit the war.

ADDISON'S STATEMENT.

"I have heard that statement made," said Dr. Addison, "and it is preposterous, of course. The United States has furnished and is furnishing many raw materials which we are anxious to get for the manufacture of munitions, but so far as the actual production of shells goes, America has provided us with only a very small percentage of those which we have used."

Turning to the manufacture of munitions in this country, he continued:

"At the beginning of the war there were only three important munitions factories in the United Kingdom. In addition there were a number of large private munitions and armament firms. At the start reliance was placed mainly in these national factories and experienced firms, and at that time they were full of orders.

"In the early stages of the conflict more attention was paid to field guns and their equipment than to heavy guns, but as time went on the requirements for heavy shells greatly increased. In June, 1915, we made an inventory of all the available machinery in the country and it was evident that it was entirely inadequate to meet the demands. There were, however, a great many private firms which could be brought in to make munitions and it was decided to mobilize them for national service. In order to do this we created an organization embracing the entire country. The country was divided into districts in each of which a working board of management was set up. By means of this scheme of local organization, thousands of firms have been brought in, many of which had never seen a shell body, or a fuse, or a grenade, or a bomb, before, much less than made them. Now munition making in some form or other has extended well nigh to every considerable town—indeed to large numbers of villages.

DESIRES TO HELP.

"An earnest desire to help, an adaptability and eagerness to learn have brought into munition-making the most remarkable assortment imaginable of shops and factories. In one era alone shell bodies or the components of shells are being made not only by engineering works, but in confectionery works, by a music-roll manufacturer, by an infants' food maker, by a candle maker, by a flour miller, by a tobacco merchant, by an advertising agent, in several breweries, by some jobmasters, by a glazier, by syphon manufacturers and so on. Shells and good shells have been turned out by machines and methods which would be horrifying to the apostles of orthodoxy.

"What all this amounts to in the aggregate you can form some conception of when I tell you that a calculation made three weeks ago showed that there were being turned out weekly by firms who a year ago had not been engaged in munition work, sixteen times as many heavy shells as were being produced a year ago by all the national plants and private armament firms put together. Of course, the big armament firms have been greatly extended since then and that figure does not apply to their present output.

"Numbers of manufacturers who have hitherto been engaged in producing quite different goods have sacrificed their business and good-will in order to take up the manufacture of munitions. They have done it for the asking and ungrudgingly. Many of them will find themselves at the end of the war with a great part of their good-will jeopardized or lost.

PRIVATE FIRMS.

"Coincidentally with this programme of bringing in private firms it became evident that even with their help the output would still be insufficient, so the Ministry of Munitions proceeded to provide a large number of 'single purpose' factories, that is, plants where the work could be specialized. Skilled engineers divided the work up into a number of repetition operations such as could be done with a few weeks' training by women or unskilled labor. There are now in the country fifty-three national shell factories of this kind, all of which have either been built or reconstructed by the government. Of these, thirty-eight are under the management of the boards previously referred to. Others are managed for the ministry by experienced munitions firms.

"Just as the output of shells, shell-bodies, etc., had to be augmented so we had similarly to provide explosives and filling factories. As a result of this, apart from the enormous extensions of existing factories, nineteen special explosive works have been provided. This has practically doubled the whole previous output of the country. Similarly there had to be built fourteen filling factories, each of which has been provided since last August. Altogether there are now ninety national factories which have been equipped with machinery and in most cases built during the last twelve months.

"We can produce in less than a month as many of the lighter shells as could have been turned out in the whole year of 1914-15. In less than a fortnight we can make more heavy shells than we could have done in the year 1914-15. We can now turn out in a week far more shells, filled and complete, than were used in the whole battle of Loos, which extended over a fortnight, and they had been saving ammunition for that battle for a month. We could have a battle of Loos every week now and it wouldn't touch the shell reserve stock.

MANUFACTURE OF GUNS.

"The manufacture of guns, which did not lend itself to the process of subdivision like ammunition, has had to be concentrated largely in the hands of experienced firms, but new factories under the direction of these firms have been made for 'single purpose' work.

"Regarding our present capacity for gun production as compared with the capacity in June, 1914, before the war, we are now making in the case of the lighest guns over ten times what we were then, and in the case of medium-weight guns over twenty times, and in the case of heavy guns more than fifty times.

"The production of trench warfare supplies has meant the creation of an industry of which there was practically no experience in this country. Now grenades are being made in back yards and in all sorts of small shops, as well as in the big factories, and hundreds of thousands are being produced weekly. In the early days of the war the trench mortar was a weapon which had received little attention and undergone little development, and there was a mere handful of these weapons in existence. They are now being produced in immensely improved types in hundreds where they were previously in units. And the output of their heavy ammunition has had to keep pace. The output of bombs, where it previously was reckoned in hundreds, has now reached a total of scores of thousands weekly. The production of trench warfare munitions in a most miscellaneous collection of workshops has, of course, necessitated the provision of many assembly and inspection stations.

"One of the earliest steps the Ministry of Munitions had to take was to acquire control of every machine-tool maker in the United Kingdom and also to bring in the manufacturers of machine tools. Every machine tool made during the last twelve months has been disposed of as directed by the Ministry of Munitions. The tools have been sent where they were most needed for the making of munitions.

AN ANXIOUS PROBLEM.

"One of the our most anxious problems has been the supply and the distribution of skilled labor. There was not enough skilled labor to go round. This fact was recognized by the trades unions and the government has received their hearty assistance throughout in the distribution of skilled labor and in the dilution of skilled labor with unskilled. The introduction of unskilled labor into the field of skilled labor is a sacrifice of skilled labor to which no too-high tribute can be paid. Skilled men have trained and instructed unskilled workers and in thousands of cases have willingly been moved from piece work to day wages with the result that they have earned smaller wages than the people they had trained have received at piece work.

"This position was rendered more difficult by the fact that many skilled workmen crowded into the army. More than 43,000 highly-skilled workmen have since been withdrawn for munitions work. They go where they are sent. This has given the Ministry of Munitions control of a large body of skilled workmen who can be moved as required.

"Apart from the manufacture of ships, aeroplanes, etc., which do not fall under the charge of the Ministry of Munitions, there are now employed about 2,000,000 people of whom several hundred thousand are women. It follows that there has been much labor expended in housing munitions workers. Whole villages have been built and we have provided accommodations for 60,000 people in twelve months.

CLASSES OF SOCIETY.

"People from all classes of society have joined in the manufacture of munitions. There is, for example, on the staff of the Ministry of Munitions, the daughter of an earl, who worked for nine months as a lathe hand in a munitions factory. Large numbers of the best-known families have devoted themselves to work in the canteens and to other work in connection with the factories. There is a department in the Ministry which is solely concerned with the provision of canteens for munition workers and these canteens provide meals for 500,000 people daily. This enables them to get their food under decent conditions. Charges are made to cover the cost."

Dr. Addison pointed out that it has been necessary to interfere arbitrarily in private industry in order to carry on the munitions work. Private and public building has been stopped in many cases in order to move the labor elsewhere or to economize material. What applies to the building trade, holds good with many others. However, this interference has been cheerfully borne, he declared.

CHEMICAL FORMULAE.

He stated that as a result of the demands upon the Ministry of Munitions, the formulae for many chemicals and instruments which formerly had been made by the Germans had been discovered by English scientists and that these things were now being manufactured here.

In conclusion he said:

"When the Ministry of Munitions is no more, the equipment of the factories and works extensions all over the country with power and plant on up-to-date systems, accurate and modern machine tools, will add enormously to our industrial strength in the markets of the world."

It is stated that the heads of the different departments of the Ministry of Munitions are largely directors and managers of great industries who have volunteered their services and have given up the whole of their private work to labor for the country without remuneration. As one has put it, "the Ministry of Munitions is, in fact, the general staff of British industry, organized for war." To an American who has volunteered his services is given credit for effecting reductions in shell contract prices which saved the government £400,000 a week.

HEYLAN'S DEFENSE OF JOHNSON FALLS DOWN.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 18.—Despite evasions and apologies and attempts to cloud the issue, the fact stands out as clear as the sun on a cloudless day that the State administration of California has engaged during the last six years in a career of extravagance without a parallel.

Figures on total expense, taken from the financial report of State Controller Chambers, show that the total expense of State government in 1911 was $18,200,000
That the total cost in 1915 was 36,500,000
The 1910 tax levy was 8,376,297
That of 1915 was 15,681,943

The State tax rate in 1910 was 35.3 cents on each $100 of assessed valuation.

Reckoned on the same ad valorem basis, that of 1915 was 84 cents on each $100.

The per capita tax rate of California for 1915 was $12.7. This is the highest in the United States. It is more than three times the average for the other forty-seven States. It is more than five times the average for eight other States having a similar population.

The people of this State are being fed a great deal of statistical [illegible] as to the cost of running the State government under the administration of Gov. Johnson, as compared with that under the administrations of Governors Pardee and Gillett.

[illegible] there has been running in the press a series of articles from administration sources attempting to show "where all the money goes" in a measure attempting to justify lavish expenditure of money during the last six years.

These articles deal mostly with expenses and expenditures under systems of accounting usually in use in the State, a county or a municipality, are complicated things, only understood except by those versed in public accounting. [illegible] in public accounting are [illegible] under some innocent [illegible] many items of expenditures which, to the uninformed, might appear wholly irrelevant and not chargeable to State maintenance, but which, when properly analyzed show a direct maintenance charge.

CONSIDER THE TAXES.

[illegible] not consider the subject from another angle—that of taxation. Every owner of property in the State has felt the heavy hand of the tax-gatherer and is familiar with the word "taxes" and knows its meaning. Why not a comparison of [illegible] purely along the line of taxes, without giving consideration to other State revenues received from fees of officers, interest on State moneys and securities, and other such sources, amounting [illegible] to about $4,000,000 [illegible] but in which the people are not directly interested? It would not be much of a task to work out the tax comparison, and such information should be found in the reports of the State [illegible].

The State Controller is presumed to be the fiscal agent of the State, and certainly his report and that of the Equalization Board should [illegible] a splendid basis for the information and data needed for such comparison. Such reports ought to be available for consultation in the public libraries throughout the State.

GOVERNOR RESPONSIBLE.

It is understood at the start that no taxes can be collected except by legislative authorization fixing the amount and method, with the understanding that the amount to be raised is always dictated by the Governor.

Those who look to the legislative [illegible] and consult the so-called "tax-levy bill" for their total taxes will be misled if not careful. The tax-levy bill, which was passed at each session of the Legislature, made provision for the levy of taxes for the general running expenses of the State government. But in addition to these the Legislature had passed a continuing law for the support of the University of California, and these taxes were separate and distinct from the taxes in the tax-levy bill for running [illegible]. This university tax was [illegible] on each $100 of taxable property for the years 1903-1908 and [illegible] in 1909-1910.

[illegible] table herewith given, therefore, the taxes for all purposes are [illegible], including the university tax. [illegible] taken from the State reports [illegible] as follows:

	Total taxes.
[illegible]	$8,964,447.42
[illegible]	8,296,565.43
[illegible]	7,667,724.44
[illegible]	7,598,590.19
[illegible]	8,565,815.94
[illegible]	7,660,024.84
[illegible]	8,670,813.29
[illegible]	8,376,297.69
[illegible]	10,454,215.46
[illegible]	10,922,405.72
[illegible]	12,071,541.80
[illegible]	13,600,666.44
[illegible]	15,096,700.02
[illegible]	15,681,943.28

[illegible] the foregoing table it will be seen that during the Pardee-Gillett administrations the amount of taxes which each had was about even. It will be noted that Gov. Gillett, in the last year of his administration, [illegible] by more than $500,000 [illegible] Pardee required in the [illegible] of his administration, and notwithstanding the fact that [illegible], in 1909, had raised the [illegible] from 2 cents to 3.

[illegible] to a comparison of Gov. Johnson's administration and the advent of the new [illegible] (1911-1912:)

[illegible] BARREL POLITICS.

[illegible] noted that Gov. Johnson, [illegible] year in office, had over [illegible] of dollars more to spend [illegible] Gillett in his last year. [illegible]

[illegible] further be noticed that [illegible] went out of office [illegible] received from taxes [illegible] $1,000,000 of having [illegible] from $8,376,297.69 [illegible] $15,681,943.28 in 1916.

[illegible] stated, the increase, year by year, in [illegible] administration. But a small calculation [illegible] the fact that the first [illegible] was in office [illegible] taxes alone went [illegible] about $8,400,000 to approximately $11,000,000. To carry the illustration a little further, the ratio of tax collections since Johnson took office has increased up to the present year 87 per cent. from the time Gov. Gillett stepped out, the taxes going up from, say, $8,400,000 to approximately $15,700,000.

Now, as to another angle of comparison: There are some who boldly make the assertion that, had the old ad valorem system of collecting taxes from the people been kept for the years 1911-1916, Johnson "would not have dared to spend so much money; that he would have had a tax rate which would have been 'out of sight;'" that if the great European war was a godsend to President Wilson in covering up a huge deficiency in the government's revenues, so also was the new California tax system a godsend to Johnson as a "tax-getter" without trampling upon the corns of the "plain people."

Why cannot a comparison be made of the tax rates? To a certain extent it can be.

REPUBLICAN ECONOMY.

The following table will show the facts in the Pardee-Gillett administration:

	Total taxes.	Total State assessment.	State tax rate.
[illegible]	$8,964,447.42	$1,507,944,240	56.1 cents
[illegible]	8,296,565.43	1,545,036,795	55.5 cents
[illegible]	7,667,724.44	1,624,026,172	49.0 cents
[illegible]	7,598,590.19	1,594,291,577	47.6 cents
[illegible]	8,565,815.94	1,767,754,000	44.5 cents
[illegible]	7,660,024.84	1,960,212,601	40.0 cents
[illegible]	8,670,813.29	2,432,566,453	35.4 cents
[illegible]	8,376,297.69	2,372,944,301	35.3 cents

We come now to the period (1911-1915) when the State no longer collected taxes upon the county assessments—to the period when the "State tax rate" was dropped. But it seems that approximate tax ratios can be arrived at which Johnson would have required to raise the amounts of taxes that came to his administration. The only indeterminate factor is the logical and proper total assessment to be used.

It is conceded that the assessed values of property throughout the State increased much faster, after the State went under the new tax system and ceased taxing all kinds of property, than it did before. Therefore, let us assume, for the purpose of comparison, that Johnson had the same average total assessment throughout his administration which obtained in the Pardee-Gillett administrations. The total assessment averaged for Gov. Pardee in his four years, in round numbers, $1,600,000,000; for the Gillett four years the average was $2,140,000,000; the average in the eight years of Pardee-Gillett is, say, $1,870,000,000.

PROGRESSIVE EXTRAVAGANCE.

If this had been Gov. Johnson's average the State tax rate would have run about as follows:

Year—	Total taxes.	Approx. rate.
1911-1912	$10,454,215.00	56 cents
1912-1913	10,922,405.00	57 cents
1913-1914	12,071,541.00	70 cents
1914-1915	13,600,666.00	73 cents
1915-1916	15,096,709.00	80 cents
1916-1917	15,681,943.00	84 cents

Prior to 1909 it required a period of twenty years to double the assessed values in the State, and this notwithstanding the fact the State was in a very prosperous condition. But each County Assessor was looking after his county's interest and saw to it that his values did not rise, and thus held in check the amount his county was compelled to pay the State in the way of taxes. Again, the State did not reach the $2,000,000,000 mark in assessed values until 1909 and it is now over the $3,000,000,000 mark, showing that since the State ceased taxing the counties the greatest increase in the assessed values has taken place.

For a period of years prior to 1909 the normal increase ranged anywhere from 2 per cent. to 5 per cent. annually. Then for another comparison allow that Gov. Johnson would have had an annual increase of, say, 5 per cent. if the State had continued under the old system of taxation. The Governor would then have had approximate tax rates as follows, starting with the 1910 assessment as the base:

First two years, 42 cents; second two years, 47 cents; third two years, 50 cents.

And these percentage tax rates would have been added to the high county tax rates which prevail throughout the State.

Keeping Yourself Well

BUILDING UP STRENGTH

After a severe illness, or sometimes without that misfortune, many people do not gain strength as they should. Often this is because the food taken is not relished and does not go to the making of rich blood.

Nature should then be aided. It will usually be the case that in the mucous membranes that line most of the body there will be areas of stagnation, with the blood engorged instead of circulating. When these are in the stomach or bowels the food ferments when it might be making strength.

Peruna dispels stagnation in these membranes, invigorates the digestion, tones up the bodily functions, overcomes all catarrhal conditions and starts the organs to working properly. After illness it is a good tonic, used by all with safety.

Liquid or tablet form—each with the same principles—whichever is more convenient, or may be used together.

THE BLACK BASS, FIGHTER.

When Hooked the Fish Never Sulks but Fights to a Finish.

[All Outdoors:] The black bass is the type of the lesser-sized game fishes of America. Why? Because he is not only great in muscular energy and fights like a bulldog, yet in his strenuous efforts to escape shows almost human intelligence; he will run in, and then on a slack line leap into the air and shake his body in his efforts to dislodge the steel; failing, down in the pool he surges, and darts around a sunken rock, as if to sever the gut leader on the sharp or scraggy edges; or failing, seek the bottom, and there unseen, brace his pectoral fins between two small rocks and in this fortress of defense, jig, jig, jig on the line, much as a dog jerks at a rope held in the hand. Some anglers have compared this action of the bass to the sulk of the salmon, which is reflective on the bass that never sulks but is ever in action and fights to a finish. But these traits of the black bass are like stories many times told, to the old angler for "bronzebackers," but the young 'un perhaps is yet to pass through the thrilling experience of fighting an impaled bass with a light rod, a gossamer leader, and a feathered fly, and it is well to warn him of the acrobatic gyrations of the Micropterus dolomieu, for such is the scientific nom de plume of our lordly fighter.

POLO IN PHILIPPINES.

Sport, Has Become Popular With Periods Shortened by the Heat.

[The Spur:] While polo in the Philippines is scarcely so full of vim as when Gov. William Cameron Forbes was in command, there is lots of spirited play in the competition for the championships. Unless the Mexican situation seriously affects the army men stationed in the island this promises to be one of the best seasons in years. Of course, the really good field named after the ex-governor, at Pasay, Manila, has much to do with the popularity of the sport.

Owing to the extreme heat the periods, as a rule, are of six minutes' duration, instead of the orthodox seven and a half minutes before the whistle is sounded, and there are only seven chukkers instead of eight. Otherwise the game is played under the rules of the Polo Association. The mounts are small thoroughbreds from Australia or good playing stock from the United States. At present the senior championship of the Philippine Islands Polo Association is held by the Ninth Cavalry team. It was won by this four after an exceedingly fast game in which the Second Artillery was defeated by a score of 7 goals to 2 3-4 goals. The junior championship is held by the Second Field Artillery, which beat the Fifteenth Cavalry by 1 1-4 to 0, after an exciting game.

LIQUID FIRE NOT NEW.

Was an Invention of the Middle Ages When Hot Things Were Used.

[Wall-street Journal:] The use by the Germans of fire-throwing machines in the assault on Verdun has been hailed as something new in military operation. As a matter of fact, liquid fire is a product of the warfare of the middle ages. In the strenuous days when our doughty ancestors were besieged in castles, they used to amuse themselves by standing on the ramparts and pouring boiling oil and burning pitch below. This usually proved disconcerting for the attacking party.

The Germans have gone several steps farther. All the accessories that the knights of old brought into play in the gentle art of fire-hurling were a bucket, its contents, and a good strong pair of arms. The modern Teutonic fiery fluid can be distributed much more deftly and with greater force by reason of a simple device, known as a "fire projector." Petrol is poured into a tank under pressure of several hundred pounds per square inch. The tank is equipped with a long nozzle, and the petrol is enflamed as it leaves the nozzle by an electric spark. Thus the German soldier is able to sit safely behind his own lines and spray the enemy with fire over a distance of more than a hundred feet, much in the manner of a suburbanite watering his lawn with an oversized garden hose.

War Prices in Paris.

[Wall Street Journal:] One hears a great deal about the rising cost of living in Germany, resulting from the British blockade, but comparatively little about the privations of the allies. The following letter from an American engineer in Paris, tells something of the hardships of the City of Light:

"Cold boiled ham cost 95 cents a pound and each thin slice comes to 10 cents. Butter is uneatable at less than 64 cents a pound, and everything is in proportion. Gasoline is 20 cents a quart. Alcohol is out of the question, as it is now 48 cents a quart as compared to 14 cents before the war. Sugar is 14 cents a pound.

"I believe the war won't be over before next year, so we settle down to it as a fact to be borne. It hits everyone except a few. I am comfortable, have enough to eat and a good bed, but living is 'just' (narrow;) I just about come out even."

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel crashes into sour bile like dynamite, breaking it up. That's when you feel that awful nausea and cramping.

If you want to enjoy the nicest gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced just take a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight. Your druggist or dealer sells you a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone under my personal money-back guarantee that each spoonful will clean your sluggish liver better than a dose of nasty calomel and that it won't make you sick.

MARIONETTES COMING BACK.

New Interest Being Taken in the Most Primitive Entertainment.

[Answers:] The puppet show flourished wonderfully in the days when George IV was King, and after a long rest it looks as if the marionette—of whom Charles Gounod wrote a funeral march, a very peculiar piece of music—is coming into his own again in the reign of George V.

The return of these comical little figures is due to the artistic enterprise of Mr. and Mrs. Gair Wilkinson, who gave Answers' representative some interesting details of the working of a puppet show.

They first started their entertainment for the benefit of the Wounded Soldiers' Hospital at the Hampstead Garden suburb.

The puppets they use are some twelve in number, and each twenty inches in height. A dozen puppets mean an enormous number of strings to be manipulated, even if only a few of the figures are on the little stage at a time.

There are strings to feet, ankles, shoulders, arms, wrists, back and head, in order to get a really lifelike movement of the dolls.

In the Middle Ages the puppet show achieved a most remarkable success—indeed, in the sixteenth century it was said that the marionette rivaled in attraction the living actor.

Mr. Wilkinson believes in puppets, and he manufactures his own, for he says it would be very difficult to purchase what he required in England.

To possess a theater in which one has full artistic control, in which even the actors are under one's thumbs, is a position full of opportunity and worthy the attention of any artist.

Puppets, he finds, are born actors. They swagger and give themselves airs. They dance and dance again, as if care never came to them.

They make love and scold and fight, and always they are play-acting—but play-acting with such directness and simplicity as is a thousand times more vivid than the reality.

We laugh to see the puppets mimic human beings; but all their mimicry is charged with satire, and we recognize ourselves and laugh again to think we are capable of such antics.

Puppets' heads are not blockheads. They have to be "put on" properly. And there is certainly no trouble with the leading lady or the chorus, as in the real theater, for, as the showman—Mr. Wilkinson—sings:

"My leading lady, since first she was new,
Never turned up her nose at her part or her 'screw.'
All the 'screw' that she gets is the 'screw' in her head,
Which makes her look round when I pull the right thread."

Punch and Judy today is the only relic of the puppets of the past, but the figures are worked in a totally different way—by the fingers under the dress instead of long wires from above, as with the Italian fantoccini and the marionettes.

Remaking Military Rifles.

[Outing:] Nations with large armies were often loth to discard their old weapons, and frequently altered existing models to bring them up to date. Thus we note that England converted her old muzzle loading Enfields in 1864 and 1866 to use the Snider action with a metallic cartridge case. In 1886 Austria adopted the Mannlicher .433 caliber with a straight pull bolt action and a box magazine, loading from a steel clip. Two years later the caliber was reduced to .315, using black powder. The sights of these rifles were regraduated in 1890 on the adoption of smokeless powder.

Beet Land Growers,
Lemon Growers, get these facts

Would you be willing to pay $400 to $550 an acre for some of the best proven lemon land in the State—under one of the best gravity water systems in the West?

Would you be willing to pay $350 to $400 an acre for what expert beet growers consider to be the most desirable sugar beet land in the Southwest—under the same great water system?

Do you realize that there is only one section where land of this type, and at these bedrock prices, can be obtained today?

Do you know that over $1,000,000 worth of this land has been purchased by scores of the shrewdest ranchers in the State during the past year?

Do you know that the San Fernando Mission Lands tract is establishing eye-opening records in lemon, Valencia orange and sugar beet culture this year?

These records have surprised the hardest headed growers, and also the American Beet Sugar Company.

You want some of this land. Why wait until it advances in price? Now is the time to buy. The great water distributing system is now being installed.

The BIG rush for these lands will soon begin—the result of State-wide advertising.

If you are in the market for proven lemon and beet land at 50 per cent. under its real value—land that will produce bumper crops of alfalfa, potatoes, onions, citrus and deciduous fruits, avocadoes and vegetables—get in touch with us at once.

The terms are one-fifth cash—balance 1, 2, 3 and 4 years, with interest at 6 per cent.

PLAIN TALK TO RAILROAD UNIONS.

By an ex-R. R. Employee,

WALTER LENOIR CHURCH of California.

"Friends, Romans, Countrymen! Lend me your ears!"

May I also use the invocation of Antony to the people who came not to praise Caesar, but to bury him—as I hope all animosities may be buried during this plain talk of a plain man from your ranks.

No, Mr. Joker, do not decide that I have ears enough and to spare, of my own, until you have heard my message. Four years ago at Omaha I was editor of the Harriman Lines Railroad Educational Bureau. Many of you, perhaps, have studied, or at least read, my words in your text-books on efficiency, and in bulletins or magazines published in your interest. Wherefore, take it from me once more, as your friend still holding your welfare at heart, still zealous that any wrong done you may be rightly righted.

Now, now, Mr. Joker, don't butt in yet awhile to exclaim, "Good Lord, deliver us from our friends—our enemies we can dispose of ourselves!" Better bide a wee! Thanks! Fair play is good Americanism. Hear the other fellow before you swat him—surely if he thinks he is your friend.

Let us then heed the universal railroad warning: "Stop! Look! Listen!"

Two trains can't pass on the same track, or on the same crossing of different roads at the same time—without cause for regret!

I do not now discuss or question the merits of your claim against the railroads; but as an American citizen I have the right to question the ethics and the expediency of your method for enforcing your claim.

You threaten, if that demand be not allowed, that you will drastically punish not only your employers—against whom you have a deep grievance—but also the whole American people, against whom you have no grievance and who have no wish to wrong you. In fact, most of them are now your friends and sympathizers. But how long will they remain your friends if your ruinous threat be carried out?

You think you hold the balance of political power, else you would not seriously make such a threat. But how long could you hold such power if that revolutionary threat be carried out to its fatal conclusion?

Let us look the situation squarely in the face. What would actually happen if the railroads were tied up? Aside from the privations to yourselves and your families, however bravely endured "for the cause," you would force on millions of other people, also, floods of loss and ruin beyond estimate—and they unprepared. All the autos in the world could merely diminish—not avert the terrible consequences for which you would be responsible. A million babies, many of your own, would suffer and languish; thousands would sicken and die for want of milk and other proper food. Thousands of producers of and dealers in perishable products would be financially ruined. Business as a whole would stagnate—for next to production transportation is the key to commerce. When you stop the wheels of the railroad, the very heart of human affairs slows down to the danger point.

Travelers all over the land would be kept from their destination—many without money or the means of getting money for mere existence. White-slavers the gray wolves of humanity, would fatten on a harvest of young girls, helpless among strangers and hopeless of succor.

The sick would languish for the comfort of coming friends. The dying would lack the ministrations of forcibly-detained dear ones! According to their own deep-seated conviction, many souls would be sped, horrified, into purgatory without the longed-for presence of their father confessor, who had no way to reach the deathbed in time.

Do you wish to assume the responsibility of such calamity?

Furthermore, think of the millions of letters delayed or destroyed in the United States mails—letters of business, many bearing money needed to keep the wolf from the door, perhaps to keep some good woman from selling her body to succor those dearer to her than life, or even honor; letters of friendship; letters of love; letters of condolence for hearts bowed down by weight of woe—affecting not hundreds but thousands of suffering souls and bodies!

My God, men, can you be wild beasts, that you would viciously do or cause such a thing? Truly it is said that our civilization is a sham—a mere whited sepulcher.

Would you, for a little more money, turn loose such a demoniac spirit in our fair land? No, a thousand times NO! Such a thing would be madness beyond insanity—ludicrous past the limit of absurdity did it not so involve the tragic terrible.

Yes, I know you men of the railroad unions. You are mostly good citizens, and you neither intend nor contemplate such a chapter of horrors. You only wish to exercise your right to stop work when you will. But look yourselves in the glass fairly, squarely, and ask, "Is that all?"

When you find yourselves unable to look yourselves in the eyes without flinching, you will know you are self-deceived; you will know that such a strike cannot be maintained without violence; you will know that to meet that violence the President of these United States would call out and sacrifice, if need be, our whole army, navy and militia. Oh, yes, I know you have many sympathizers in all three—but sooner or later they would turn against you.

The great heart of the people is in this thing, realizing the ferocious fact that stares us in the face. We as a republic are at the parting of the ways; we are confronted by the most acute crisis thus far met in the long-waged, irrepressible conflict between greed and greed. On every citizen—rich or poor, employer or employee, servant or master, bribed or briber—throughout the length and breadth of our land is forced the responsibility of deciding clearly and definitely whether he will cast his lot with those who would preserve or with those who would destroy this republic.

The sooner two such parties are lined up, the better for this country and its people—all the people—even for the malefactors themselves. The essence of a republic is that the majority shall rule. When a minority holds the balance of power for a revolutionary purpose it is time every good citizen's partisanship is merged in his patriotism. You railroad union men are mostly good citizens when you think for yourselves and refuse to let your thinking be done by those who have enriched themselves by your following. Would they starve in a long strike? Wouldn't it be a case of "Let George do it?"

But consider also the millions of fellow-workers who would be thrown out of their jobs by your strike for more wages. When you get right down to bedrock, the meanest, scabbiest human hog is he who deliberately sacrifices fellow-workmen for a little gain to himself. The Virginia City miners did it. The 2500 workers there for good wages have dwindled down to about 250. Of course, they have regular joy-ride times. But what of their fellows—2250 of them—driven off by wages higher than the traffic would bear!

Remember another thing: There are already over 1,000,000 men out of employment. Your jobs will look good to them, and 10,000,000 men, if need be, will see that they get the vacated jobs. Why? Simply because railroad transportation for food and mails—not considering other things—is a stern necessity which knows neither ethics nor law.

Americans like fair play; they are for the underdog till he goes mad, runs amuck, and bites the bystanders. Then they kill him.

Whoever threatens our free institutions, whether by intention or from ignorance, becomes a public enemy, regardless of race, color or previous degree of imbecility. All the partisan contestants, divided by nonessential issues, will unite against him and knock him out.

Put your ear to the ground. What do you hear? Partisan politicians in the Republican party praising Woodrow Wilson; great journalists who bitterly opposed him in minor policies now bidding him godspeed and praying that he will stand fast in this our own "Watch on the Rhine." The people pay the freight. They now know it; they are aroused and will grimly take and hold that for which they pay the price.

It is a basic truth that he who reaches a conclusion without reason cannot be driven from it by reason. But it is also true that self-preservation is the first law of nature, and the last. Personal selfishness always "carries the house," for it is the one touch of nature that makes the whole world kin. The hope of the race lies in the possible wider selfishness that can see the tomorrow. Wise is the man who will not mistake a warning for a threat.

Note: The law provides a perfectly sure and safe way to get all that's coming to you. Next Sunday The Times will tell you how.

AVIATION IN MEXICO.

Bad Conditions Are Heat, Dry Air and Lack of Landing Places.

[New York Sun:] About all the various kinds of difficulties aviators usually ru nagainst singly seem to be "mobilized against our aviators across the Mexican border," according to a regular army officer who is now in New York helping to round up military aviators to send to the Rio Grande.

Army men had assumed, according to statements made by this officer yesterday, that the American machines which have hung up good records here and are giving excellent service in the great war in Europe, would stand up under the tests to which they were put across the border. This has not been the case, the army man says.

Among conditions bad for aviation which the officer said may all be found in Northern Mexico, are the thin air of an elevation as high as Denver, air as dry as that of Minneapolis, an extremely high temperature, rising and falling air currents due to the desert, and finally a soft light sand covered with low brush from which it is difficult to get away into the air and dangerous ground upon which to land.

The high altitude means a cutting down of the machine's climbing and weight carrying powers. The high temperature, said the army officer, is so extreme during the day that often the aviation mechanics have to cool off chisels and other metal tools before handling them, and the heat sometimes brings the water in the radiators up to 140 degrees, even when the motors are dead.

But the officer said the very worst trouble is with the aeroplane propellers. So dry is the air that propellers which can be run successfully here for many hours sometimes go to pieces after fanning the Mexican air only a few minutes. Difficulties with superheated water in radiators are being overcome by making the radiators deeper in order to get more cooling surface. The troubles of landing and starting on the soft sand, also are being lessened by the use of a new style of flat, wide tire. But there are many other troubles facing the aviators which baffle our flying men, not the least of which come from the sudden whirlwinds, that scurry out of nowhere and suddenly turn over machines standing on the ground.

The value of many aeroplanes of various types and numerous aviators to run them, concluded the army man, cannot be overestimated if we are to go into Mexico. The flyers will need much practice, wherefore the officer said that the aviation service should be got under way as quickly as possible.

Fixes Responsibility

ments. I made this recommendation because I believe the concession right. The eight-hour day now undoubtedly has the sanction of the judgment of society in its favor and should be adopted as a basis for wages even where the actual work to be done cannot be completed within eight hours.

"Concerning the adjustments which should be made, in justice to the railroads and their stockholders, in the payments and privileges to which their men are now entitled (if such adjustments are necessary) there is a wide divergence of opinion.

"The railroads which have already adopted the eight-hour day do not seem to be at any serious disadvantage in respect of their cost of operation, as compared with the railroads that have retained the ten-hour day and calculations as to the cost of the change must, if made now, be made without regard to any possible administrative economies or readjustments.

"Only experience can make it certain what rearrangements would be fair and equitable either on behalf of the men, or on behalf of the railroads. That experience would be a definite guide to the Interstate Commerce Commission, for example, in determining whether, as a consequence of the change, it would be necessary and right to authorize an increase in rates for the handling and carriage of freight (for passenger service is not affected.)

"I therefore propose that the demand for extra pay for overtime made by the men and the contingent proposals of the railroad authorities be postponed until facts shall have taken the place of calculations and forecast with regard to the effects of a change to the eight-hour day; that, in the meantime, while experience was developing the facts, I should seek and, if need be, obtain authority from Congress to appoint a small body of impartial men to observe and thoroughly acquaint themselves with the results, with a view to reporting to Congress at the earliest possible time the facts disclosed by their inquiries, but without recommendation of any kind; and that it should then be entirely open to either or both parties to the present controversy to give notice of a termination of the present agreements with a view to instituting inquiry into suggested readjustments of pay or practice.

"This seems to be a thoroughly practical and entirely fair programme and I think that the public has the right to expect its acceptance."

FOR THE EMPLOYEES.

W. G. Lee, head of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, gave out a brief statement tonight on behalf of the men, pointing out that in accepting President Wilson's plan the employees "surrendered a very large portion of their demands" while the railroad companies "seem about as unwilling to accept suggestions from the President of the United States as they have in the past refused to consider requests from their employees." He added the workmen would remain here, but would take no further action until released by Mr. Wilson.

The railroad officials found two points in President Wilson's public statement of his settlement plan that comforted them and led to a belief that eventually there will be an agreement averting a strike. The first was a hint that if the facts warranted the Interstate Commerce Commission might grant an increase in freight rates, and the second was a suggestion that the eight-hour day would be accepted only tentatively and might be terminated after investigation by the commission provided under the President's plan.

RAILWAY CONTENTION.

The railroads all along have contended that the facts relating to pay of men will not justify the eight-hour day and some of them are said to feel that investigation by an impartial commission cannot fail to back up that position. The companies would be under additional expense while the investigation was in progress, but in the opinion of Mr. Wilson its work would be done expeditiously and a report might be expected in a few months.

The road officials, however, evidently feel that before a decision is reached every opportunity should be given other business interests to decide what might be the effect on them of an eight-hour railroad day. There was no concealment of the fact that some of them believe many manufacturers and shippers are bound to register at the White House their opposition to this proposal, and that pressure will be exercised to have members of the Senate and House express to the President their convictions along the same line.

Each part of the President's proposal is expected to be taken up separately and the answers given to the White House separately. This fact and the fact that the western executives cannot reach Washington for several days, will contribute to the Executive's plan to consider the whole problem slowly and give ample opportunity for every detail to impress itself upon the public mind.

It was after a prolonged meeting at their hotel that the railroad presidents went to the White House shortly before noon today to listen to Mr. Wilson's appeal and to outline their tentative position. At the same time the general committee of employees held a meeting, but only marked time awaiting the decision of the officials.

DRAMATIC APPEAL.

President Wilson welcomed the railroad officials in the Blue Room, and, after Mr. Holden had stated their position, began a dramatic appeal which left his visitors sobered and thoughtful. At times striding up and down the room and emphasizing points by shaking his fists, the President told the executives bluntly he thought they should accept his plan.

"We must face the naked truth in this crisis," he said. "We must not discuss impractical things. We must get down to a basis on which this situation can be solved."

Solemnly Mr. Wilson pointed out that he represented the 100,000,000 people of the nation, every one of whom had a deep interest in the threatened strike. He said his only object was to avert a break. In a voice rising at times so that it could be heard outside the closed doors, he declared he had tried to bring about arbitration; that his efforts had failed and that he had no way of forcing its acceptance. Congress, he declared, would not pass a compulsory arbitration law.

After the conference the President told Mr. Holden he would be ready to receive the executives again whenever they were ready. He remained at the White House for the afternoon, but finally it was determined to postpone a further conference until the arrival of the western railroad presidents.

While the brotherhood men were in session today at their hall the President sent word to the union officials that they might excuse their members until Monday. Some of them, he thought, might desire to leave Washington over Sunday and he did not wish to hold them here unnecessarily. Tonight they are leaving towns for near-by resorts by scores.

The brotherhood men have made no complaint over the length of time they have had to remain here and their leaders predicted tonight that they would be willing to stay another week if it seemed necessary.

Many of the brotherhood men called on their representatives in Congress today and protested in advance against any compulsory arbitration bills which might be introduced. The men are fearful that the railroads may try to put through such a bill.

There is only one bill that the brotherhood men are anxious to see come out of the present agitation. That would be a measure to empower the government in case of a strike to operate the railways with the present crews on an eight hour day basis pending a settlement of the differences between the railroads and their employees. One of the leaders "guessed" today that such a bill would be introduced in case of a strike.

BREAK STRIKE IN A WEEK.

Among the railway executives the claim was made tonight that a strike could be broken within a week. It was declared the idea that the country's commerce would be stopped immediately was entirely wrong. Attention was called to the fact that a large number of railway employees voted against a strike and it was claimed many cast an assenting vote upon the understanding that no strike actually would be called.

The claim was made that in case of a strike many of the old engineers would refuse to go out and that with these men the railways would be able to continue operation of trains. Some time ago the managements were said to have called for volunteers to serve in case of a walkout. Many responses were received, it was asserted, from among the 400,000 men in shop service engaged in building or repairing locomotives and who are familiar with their operation. A great number of men would not be needed, it was said, highly trained workers not being needed to fill positions as trainmen.

Some railroad officials believe that as many as 15 or 20 per cent. of the normal number of employees would be available for service, enough to guarantee the movement of all necessary freight. All shipments for export would, they concede, probably cease immediately, including shipments of war munitions.

These claims are all denied vehemently by the brotherhood men, who contend they have so firm a grasp on the situation that they could bring the roads speedily to terms should a strike be called.

The western road executives summoned by the President today are: Louis W. Hill, Great Northern; J. M. Hannaford, Northern Pacific; J. M. Dickinson, Rock Island; E. F. Kearney, Wabash; W. C. Nixon, St. Louis & San Francisco; H. U. Mudge, Denver & Rio Grande; C. M. Levey, Western Pacific; W. G. Besler, Central Railroad of New Jersey; E. Pinnington, Minnesota, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie; M. H. Smith, Louisville & Nashville; C. E. Schaff, Missouri, Kansas & Texas; Edwin Gould, St. Louis & Southwestern.

GATEWAY OF VENEZUELA.

La Guayra's Existence Depends on the Ships that Come and Go.

[Washington Star:] La Guayra is the gateway of Venezuela. Through this little port passes everything from cowhides shipped to New York to diplomats bound for Caracas. La Guayra is the warden of the shipping, the connecting link between the capital and the world.

Since La Guayra's principal excuse for existence is found in the ships that come and go, it is altogether fitting and proper that the life and the architecture of the town should center on the water front. At its widest the city is only a few blocks wide, and it is built on the sloping beach in a long curve that fronts throughout its length on the busy wharves. The impression given is that of some great outdoor theater, engrossed in the doings below.

The old castle on the hillside is falling to ruins; even the bull ring is not in as good repair as it might be, but the great concrete breakwater, one of the most daring engineering works in South America in its day, is kept groomed to the minute. The day of castles is past, but the usefulness of the breakwater that makes the harbor is only beginning. The long concrete dike runs out to sea for 2000 feet, rising half a dozen yards above the waves that beat its sides, turning what was one of the most dangerous of anchorages into one of the safest.

The little city itself is neither beautiful nor particularly pleasant to live in. The streets are narrow, the houses mean, except for a few on the principal business street. The heat is always intense, and the well-to-do in La Guayra generally live in one of the cooler seaside hamlets up or down the coast. The picturesque peak of Picaho, towering back of the town, is largely responsible for the heat, for besides decorating the landscape the mountain acts as a reflector for the sunlight.

Wherever you go in La Guayra your road is pretty sure to lead back to the wharves. Almost always there is a ship there, loading or unloading, the swarthy porters hustling the bales of hides, the bags of coffee and cacao with a stolid indifference to the heat that almost knocks the idle onlooker down.

FRENCH PREPAREDNESS.

Rapid Increase in Number of Heavy Guns and Ammunition.

[Wall Street Journal:] The French authority who pointed out that more powder has been burned during the Verdun struggle than throughout the entire Franco-Prussian war, is substantiated with actual figures.

France has twenty-three times as many heavy guns now as at the beginning of the war, and it is estimated that the total will be 50 per cent. more before the end of the current year.

Furthermore, the French are turning out sufficient ammunition to cover this increase in guns and leave ample reserve for all contingencies.

Munition factories are being built in France as rapidly as construction can do the work, and to all appearances France is preparing to keep up the struggle indefinitely. Recently a motor car manufacturer erected a factory in three months. This plant is now, however, turning out 1000 shrapnel shells for the famous 75's.

ANGELENO DROWNED WHEN CANOE CAPSIZES.

MR. AND MRS. EDWIN S. BONBRIGHT left for Portland yesterday to take charge of the body of their only son, Edwin Stanton Bonbright, Jr., who was drowned while canoeing in the Willamette River last Thursday.

Edwin Stanton Bonbright was 20 years of age and was a draughtsman in the employ of a shipping firm in Portland, Or. The accident occurred off Ross Island when a canoe containing the young man and a companion, Eugene Smith, also of this city, capsized, throwing the young men into the water. Mr. Smith succeeded in swimming to shore, but young Bonbright sank before he could be reached.

The body was recovered yesterday by Hugh Brady, the municipal grappler, after he had dragged the river bottom for an hour and a half with grappling hooks. When found the body was in fifteen feet of water.

E. S. Bonbright, the father, is a sales agent and resides at No. 429 West Avenue 57. With his wife and son he went to Portland some time ago and resided in Irvington for several months, later returning to Los Angeles.

The funeral arrangements will be announced later.

NAVAL MILITIA RETURNS FROM PRACTICE CRUISE.

THE famous old battleship Oregon returned yesterday to Los Angeles Harbor from Seattle, with the nearly 400 members of the California Naval Militia, after a very successful cruise of fourteen days. With the exception of two days' shore leave, practically all the time was spent at sea and the men were given practical experience in seamanship in the respective departments to which they had been assigned.

"This has been the most successful cruise ever held by the Naval Militia since its organization twenty-five years ago," said Lieutenant-Commander A. H. Woodbine. "I cannot say too much for the officers of the Oregon, whose interest and enthusiasm in the work is beyond description."

Commander George Williams of the Oregon in turn was equally strong in his praise for the officers and men of the militia. He fears that civilians do not appreciate the patriotism of members of the militia in giving their time to the organization.

During the cruise the men were assigned places in the various departments on the ship and each did the regular work of members of the crew. There were boat drills, fire drills, man-overboard drills and general practice work.

The Oregon will remain here until Tuesday, according to present plans. While the battleship is here members of the crew will be entertained in Los Angeles by the officers of the militia.

Tomorrow the cruiser South Dakota, which has been in port for the last week, will sail on another naval cruise, taking over fifty civilians. This cruise differs from that of the Oregon in that the civilians who go on the South Dakota are not members of the militia. They are mostly business and professional men who have accepted the offer of the Navy Department to get some practical experience in the navy.

The South Dakota will go from here to San Francisco for additional civilians, and may then go to Magdalena Bay and Honolulu. There is no expense attached to the cruise other than $30 for uniforms. The cruise of the South Dakota will last a month.

MAY LOSE JOBS.

Linemen at San Bernardino Prefer Union to Employment.

Linemen from this city may be sent to San Bernardino to take the places of linemen employed by the Pacific Light and Power Company, who were discharged several days ago because they refused to declare their allegiance to the company above that of the labor organization, according to a statement made yesterday by an official of the company.

A. L. Hoke, general manager of the Pacific Light and Power Company, had asked the men if they were willing to work with linemen of the Southern Sierras Company, on which a general strike was declared last week. Seven men refused.

How the War Started.

The British-American has the following story regarding how the war started:

The Crown Prince was having a nice little chat with his father and apropos of nothing said: "Father, who started this war?"

"I know," said the father playfully, "but I won't tell."

"Did Cousin George start it?" persisted the youth.

"No," said father.

"Did Cousin Nicholas?"

"No," said papa.

"Did Francis Joseph?"

"No," said the old man.

"Well, who did, then?"

"I'll tell you, son. You remember Teddy Roosevelt came out of Central Africa and called on us several years ago, and I showed him our magnificent army; I showed him our great and glorious navy; I showed him the Zeps and the submarines and the gas bags; and Teddy, greatly impressed, slapped me on the back and said: 'Bill, my boy, you can lick the world.' And like a damned fool I believed him."

NATIONAL MILITARY SERVICE.

(To cast negative vote write the word "not" in blank space. This will negative the entire ballot.)

I am —— an advocate of national legislation which will place the military policy of the country on the basis of a true democracy as provided in the Constitution of the United States.

I believe this can be brought about only by making all young men who are physically and mentally fit liable for military training before reaching the age of 21.

I believe that such a policy would not only produce the force of trained citizen-soldiers necessary to the preservation of the nation, but would conserve the human resources of the nation so as to reduce the criminal rate, produce a higher type of manhood and destroy all traces of class distinction by training and educating the poor and rich alike in the higher duties of citizenship under the same ennobling and invigorating system.

I believe that the Chamberlain Swiss System Bill (S. 1695,) or legislation along these lines, worked out with the advice of the General Staff of the Army, will solve the problem.

OXNARD, Aug. 19.—Three Mexicans chose the sidewalk in front of the residence occupied by Chief of Police Murray for an attempted hold-up, and promptly landed in jail.

The men, when first noticed by the Chief, were in the alley beside his house. The near-victims of the hold-up were J. W. Bell and J. W. Moore, who had considerable money on their persons.

The three hold-up men, who gave the names of C. Foloriez, F. Ortego and M. Castellano, grabbed their victims and threatened to shoot and knife them, when stopped by the Chief. The affair occurred late at night.

INCENDIARIES ACTIVE.

Unknown incendiaries attempted to destroy the Oxnard Operahouse by fire last night. Light from burning kerosene under the building attracted the attention of near-by residents about 10:30 o'clock. Aid was called and the fire soon extinguished, but not until a hole several feet across had been burned through the main floor of the building. Investigation as to the source of the fire revealed a blackened can with a charred woolen rag placed in it as a wick, directly under where the fire started.

Wear Paper Clothing.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] A new use for paper has been found in the manufacture of clothing for aviators. Paper is better than most fabrics for keeping out the cold encountered at high altitudes.

A special kind of paper, thin and light in weight, has been made for this purpose. It is so tough that it can be washed and dried.

The full suit includes coat, trousers, socks, cap with ear laps and gloves which can be worn inside of cloth gloves if desired. It is said that these paper suits are being used extensively by the aviators of the German army.

STRANGLED A WOLF.

Animal Caught Bare-handed Though it was in Fighting Mood.

[Kansas City Star:] Gar Richardson of Columbus, Kan., night marshal, has performed many daring feats, but his latest was to capture a gray wolf barehanded. The wolf, a large female, was in a fighting mood at that, because seven of her young were in danger of capture.

Richardson and Charles Dye of this city happened to be out five miles southwest of Columbus recently when they spied the wolf. They followed her until she disappeared in a hole. The men knew from the action of the wolf that there were some baby wolves in the hole. Several times the wolf looked out to see what was going on.

The men had no gun, and it was too far to go after one, so they took opposite positions around the hole and waited. The next time the animal stuck its head out it was looking at Dye, and Richardson sprang and grabbed it by the back of the neck. He held on until Dye tore down a fence to get a pole, with which the wolf was finally killed. Procuring a spade, the men captured the young, a litter of seven.

London's Land Values.

[National Real Estate Journal:] There is an amazing price set upon the land of London. In the center of the English metropolis tiny lots have been sold for fortunes.

An acre there is the dearest in the world. Many a transaction over ground in the heart of the city has set the figure of $16,250,000 per acre. One square mile of London is valued at $750,000,000. The land beneath the Bank of England at low estimate is worth $35,000,000, and there are only three acres in that tract, too.

There are places on Queen Victoria, Upper Thames, St. Mary-at-Hill and Cannon streets where one square inch is worth $1.25. In Lombard street and King William street prices have ranged from $200 and $250 to $350 per square foot.

SHARK SPOILS BIG TUNA CATCH.

Bluefin Torn in Two Before Angler Landed Him in the Boat.

[BY WIRELESS TO THE TIMES.]

AVALON, Aug. 19.—James Leavy of Salt Lake City fought a bluefin tuna for over an hour today when a torpedo shark attacked the game-fish as it was vainly trying to disengage itself from Mr. Leavy's tackle. The tuna was badly mutilated, about fifty pounds being torn from it. The tuna had towed the launch three miles and, when weighed, tipped the scales at 136 pounds. The catch was disqualified by Tuna Club officials on the ground that the shark had killed the fish and not the angler. Mr. Leavy has landed eight tuna during the past week, but today's catch was the first of the season to weigh more than 100 pounds.

PRUNES A PLENTY.

New York's National Guard Well Supplied with Fruit Acid.

[Wall Street Journal:] The soldiers at Camp Whitman, Green Haven, N. Y., were yearning for fruit last week. They complained of too much proteids and too little acid. Of course they had grape fruit and oranges in mind for their breakfasts. It was announced that a whole carload of fruit had gone astray on the New York Central. Several officers were dispatched in automobiles to locate the lost car. At Peekskill they discovered the car on a siding and the railroad authorities hurried the car to Green Haven, where it was opened. Alas, the car was filled with prunes from top to bottom and end to end. Now, a dry prune is one thing but a prune which has been soaked in water over night is a larger thing. An officer in the camp figured out that a carload of dry prunes was equivalent to two carloads when ready for the mess. There are only 2000 soldiers at Camp Whitman and they are likely to be dispatched to the Mexican border at a very early date. The officers are worrying about those prunts. The prunes will last a month and may therefore have to follow the troops all the way to Mexico. That is regarded as a sad prospect.

100 Choice Beach Lots, Sea Shore Colony Tract, Newport Beach

to be disposed of at public auction, to the highest bidder, without limit or reserve of any nature. This is the chance of a lifetime to get a REAL OCEAN FRONT BEACH LOT, at a REAL SACRIFICE PRICE.

—This property is located within the corporate limits of Newport Beach. Pacific Electric cars directly to tract. Good car service. Water, gas and electricity at reasonable rates.

For a Home or as an Investment —To obtain a beach home or make an investment, it is safe to say you will never have such an opportunity again. Ocean front beach property is rapidly becoming scarce and for this reason there is no doubt about these lots increasing greatly in value in the near future. With all our attractive beach resorts this is really the most desirable. Being only 39 miles from Los Angeles, it is near enough to town for a permanent or summer home and far enough away not to attract the undesirable transient element. In other words, this is a home beach where the family is comfortable and safe at all times and under all conditions.

—The location of Newport Beach makes it particularly desirable for the Riverside-San Bernardino district, being the nearest to this section. Highways direct from Riverside through Santa Ana Canyon reduce the distance to less than 50 miles. The Coast Boulevard, now being constructed from Long Beach to San Diego, by way of Newport, will soon be accomplished. A bond issue soon to be presented, calls for dredging Newport Bay and establishing a jetty for the protection of small craft coming in and out. This will enhance values to a great extent. City ownership of the gas and water systems and Pacific Electric Light and Power Co.'s electricity, give you the finest of service.

Going the Limit.

PROMOTER'S STOCK VOID BY STATE BOARD ORDER.

THE latest development in the case of William Taylor, former president of the Latin-American Trading Company, who was arrested here several days ago, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses, was provided yesterday by the State Corporation Commissioner, who ordered the directors of the trading company to declare void Mr. Taylor's portion of the stock of the company.

S. A. Ratliffe, secretary of the State Corporation Department, who has been here several days, said last night the department is going to go the limit in the prosecution of Mr. Taylor. According to Mr. Ratliffe, who has made an exhaustive investigation in the Taylor matter, the facts are as follows:

Mr. Taylor, who is out on bail pending a hearing of charges of dealing in counterfeit Mexican currency, made application for incorporation of the Latin-American Trading Company May 24, last. A permit was granted authorizing the issuance of nineteen shares of stock to each of the officers and directors of the company. Certificates were issued to Mr. Taylor, B. Newman, E. L. Howland, W. W. Thurlow and W. E. Runston, although the stock was held in escrow by the corporation department.

When, Mr. Ratliffe says, Mr. Taylor failed to carry out provisions of the agreement which he made, and which formed part of the consideration for which nineteen shares of stock were issued to him, and was arrested charged with obtaining $4000 from the California-Portland Cement Company, the corporation commissioner made an investigation and demanded that Mr. Taylor surrender his stock. This, it is said, Mr. Taylor refused to do, unless he received $2000. When informed of his action, the corporation department made formal demand on the directors to declare Mr. Taylor's stock void.

Fate.

ESCAPE IS FOILED BY DRY "GAS" TANK.

FUGITIVE'S CAR STOPS NEAR PURSUING OFFICER.

Alleged Smooth Check Passer Eludes Long Beach Police and Starts Dash for Los Angeles. Caught when He Can't Buy Needed Fuel.

Carl Duevey's getaway from officers at Long Beach might have been entirely successful, had it not been for the fact that the automobile in which he was speeding to Los Angeles ran out of gasoline, and neither he nor the chauffeur he had hired had the necessary funds to buy more.

Duevey, who dresses in the height of fashion, lives at the best hotels and apparently has enjoyed life, was sought by the Long Beach officers for passing alleged worthless checks at a hotel there. When they forced the door of Duevey's room they discovered he had escaped, by going through several other rooms and a hallway not under surveillance.

When they arrived on the street again they found he had boarded a taxicab and disappeared toward Los Angeles. The Sheriff's office was notified at once. Even this would not have resulted in the capture of Duevey, perhaps, if he had carried money in his pocket at all times. When with a monocle at his eye he dashed into the car driven by John Erkert and asked to be taken to the Southern Pacific station here in record time and without regard for speed cops, the chauffeur thought he had a fine job.

Arriving at Huntington Park the car gave a few grunts and stopped. Investigation showed the gasoline tank empty. Mr. Erkert's pocket was also empty. Deciding he would have $5 or $10 coming from his fare, he turned to Duevey and asked for $1 on account.

Words of strong character failed him when Duevey first expressed indignation at such procedure, and Mr. Erkert finally secured an admission that his "fare" had no coin.

"How in—are you going to pay me if we do get to Los Angeles?" demanded Mr. Erkert.

"My dear fellow, I have $100,000 to my credit in the First National Bank in Los Angeles. Get me there and I'll give you lots of money," answered Duevey.

The loud words had attracted a crowd and this in turn had attracted Deputy Sheriff Anderson, going toward the beach in search of the Long Beach escape. From descriptions given him the officer immediately recognized his quarry.

"Guess you won't get away this time," he said, as he manacled Duevey.

Mr. Erkert, noting the developments, screwed up his courage and borrowed from Deputy Sheriff Anderson money to buy enough gasoline to get him back to Long Beach.

PINNED UNDER CAR.

Auto Turns Turtle When Brakes Are Set Too Quickly by Driver.

By applying the brakes too quickly, George Stuevinger, of No. 1028 West Thirty-seventh street, yesterday afternoon caused his automobile to turn turtle at Thirty-first and Main streets. He was pinned beneath the overturned car, and persons who rushed to his aid considered him as good as dead.

However, after concerted efforts had righted the car, Mr. Stuevinger emerged with nothing to show for his mishap, but a pair of very torn trousers. He was uninjured.

TOWNS WITHOUT TAXES.

Revenues are Raised from Forests Planted by Past Generations.

[Answers:] In these days of expensive living, when everything costs double what it used to, and four times more than you can afford to pay, what a boon to live in a city without taxes. Are there such things? you ask. Most certainly!

But they aren't in England.

There is Orson, in Sweden. This municipality has its ordinary city expenses, but it imposes no taxes. Moreover, the local railway is free to every citizen and there is no charge for telephone service, schools, libraries and like.

All this is due to the wisdom of a former generation, who planted trees on all the available ground, with the result that during the past thirty years £1,000,000 worth of young trees and timber have been sold, while judicious replantings have provided for a similar income in the future.

Then there is Montmarion, in the Midi, France. Here not only are there no taxes, but the timbers on the commercial lands are sufficient to grant each person a small annuity. There are only seven electors in this hamlet, so, to avoid anything like rivalry, the seven returned themselves to the local Council.

Nearer home we have the island of Innishmurray, off the west coast of Ireland. Here there are no taxs, simply because the fourteen families who live on the island absolutely refuse to pay. In a recent report to the local government board the rate collector stated that he could not get a boat on the mainland to take him to the island on such an errand as collecting rates. At a meeting of the Sligo County Council it was stated that some years ago two officers of the Council who trier to land on the island for the same purpose were stoned off the shore by the inhabitants.

ARMY OF MERCY GUARDS BIRDS.

Nests no Longer Despoiled; Woe to Hungry Snakes.

Glendale Boys and Girls are Friends of Warblers.

Clubs Forming Elsewhere to Spread Good Work.

There will be no more despoiling of birds' nests at Glendale. There is a band of earnest-faced youngsters who are going to see to that, and there is an auxiliary company of eager-eyed little girls who are going to back them up to the limit in policing the city and surrounding country for the protection of the songbirds who frequent that neighborhood.

Instead of airguns and slingshots, with which they used to prove terrifying to the feathered songsters, the boys have armed themselves with cameras and lunch baskets, and with their best little girls they trudge to the woods and make friends with the feathered inhabitants. They share their lunch with the birdlings they find in the nests, and the mama and papa birds are becoming so used to visitors that they chirp happily in near-by boughs and don't seem to mind at all the attentions showered upon their babies.

The Bird and Flower Club is responsible for all this change in Glendale, and, far from being persecutors of the orioles, the titmouses, the thrushes and a score of other species, the members are now their champions, and woe to the boy caught molesting nests, and it is sure death to snakes in the neighborhood.

SNAKE IS VANQUISHED.

One of the biggest achievements noted on the minutes of the club is the record of how four youngsters stoned to death a King snake which had climbed a tree and was just about to devour four birdies in a nest who were yelling "blue-murder" with fright. Dorothy Sherman was the scout who found the snake wriggling up the tree trunk, and she rushed for reinforcements and brought Charles Arbutnot, Walter Puffer, Gordon Richardson and another boy to the rescue. The snake was struck by a volley of stones, and it fell to the ground, where it was dispatched.

Mrs. Nanno Woods, the president of the club, immediately ordered honor badges presented to the five children, who are as proud of their emblems of courage as any Kaiser's soldier is of the Iron Cross.

Another one of the works of mercy done by these little bird protectors was the rescuing of a tiny bluebird which had fallen from its nest and broken a wing. The child who found it gently carried it to headquarters and gave "first aid." Then a bevy of children surrounded the tree under which the bird was found and assisted one of their number into the branches, where the nest was discovered, and the little bird waif was restored to its parents and its home.

Every Wednesday the children start out, accompanied by Mrs. Woods and their parents, and carrying picnic lunch, to find the camping ground for the day. They prepare papers on different birds and flowers, which are read to all the children. Then the scouting expeditions start out to find the excitement of the day. The little girls are more interested in the wild flowers and odd plants of the woods than in the birds; still, they are full of excitement when allowed to look at the tiny warblers.

The club is starting a branch in St. Louis. Mrs. Daniel Goodman, while visiting in Glendale, became so enthusiastic over the club that she has asked co-operation in starting a branch in her home city. The women's clubs of Burbank have asked Mrs. Woods to address them on the work and purpose of the club, and their intention is to start a branch also at Burbank.

So the Vacation Club for the children has developed into a stable organization, and bids fair to spread all over the country, so that the tots from other places may have the similar pleasure and learn the same things that are interesting the Glendale children.

Mrs. Nanno Woods and her bird-lovers.

A unique class of young folks which she has formed at Glendale to protect wild life from its many enemies.

COMES TO REST.

Samuel Newhouse, Copper Magnate, Makes Tour of the Country.

Samuel Newhouse, builder of the Newhouse Hotel at Salt Lake City, president of the Newhouse Operating Company, and one of the pioneer copper miners of Utah, arrived at the Stowell yesterday with his secretary, H. D. Bemish, with whom he has just completed a transcontinental tour partly by rail and partly by automobile. He will be here a week, recuperating from the experience, enjoying good roads for a change, and playing golf and tennis.

Mr. Newhouse is one of the familiar figures of the southwest and is generally credited with being the discoverer of copper in Utah, having found and developed a small mine about twenty-five years ago. He is also said to be the first man to appreciate the value of porphry ore, now one of the most common valuable minerals in Utah because of its rich copper content.

CHAMPION TOMATO.

G. C. Harkness, No. 1218 Exposition boulevard, has raised what he believes to be the grand-daddy of all tomatoes. It is nearly twenty inches in circumference and weighs two pounds and an ounce. When exhibited yesterday it was ripe and practically free from blemish. Mr. Harkness is a Civil War veteran, 85 years old.

Novena.

OBSERVE NINE DAYS' PRAYER AND FEAST.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES HELD AT PLAZA CHURCH.

Noted Pulpit Orator Delivers Daily Sermons — Specially Arranged Music by Girls' Choir. Archbishop of Durango to Preside at Immaculate Heart Feast.

A solemn novena and feast in honor of the Immaculate Heart of Mary began yesterday at the Church of Our Lady Queen of the Angels and services will continue every morning and evening for the full nine days intervening from the beginning of these services until the Feast of the Immaculate Heart, next Sunday, when there will be a notable demonstration.

Every morning at 8 o'clock mass will be celebrated, with accompaniment of organ and motets. At 7:30 o'clock each night there will be exercises consisting of the rosary, recitation of the mysteries and the litany, sung with accompaniment of orchestra; novena sermon and benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Rev. F. Benito Ibanez, C.M.F., who has recently been transferred from San Antonio, Tex., to the Plaza parish, delivers the daily sermons. He is a pulpit orator of note in Catholic circles.

Special attention is being paid to the musical features of the services of the novena. Various noted singers are participating. Besides the girls' choir there are soloists from the California Opera School. The choir includes Aurura Duran, Irene Redona, Juanita Villasenor, Catalina Villasenor, Virginia Gomez, Griselda Chavez and Maria Chavez, directed by Miss Lupe Rodriguez, who is organist of the church.

This evening Miss Esther Gonzalez will sing Dudley Buck's "Ave Maria." The soloists for the remaining evenings of the novena are as follows: Tomorrow evening, Rafael Villagrana will sing Gounod's "Ave Maria," and the girls' choir will sing "Blessed by Thy Purity," with violin accompaniment by Mrs. J. Quinn. Tuesday evening, Mrs. and Miss Chapman, duet; girls' choir, "Crucifix." Wednesday evening, Miss Barry, Millard's "Ave Maria;" girls' choir, "Prayer to the Virgin;" violin accompaniment. Thursday evening, Miss Zambrano, "Prayer;" violin accompaniment by Miss Whalen; girls' choir, "Ave Maria." Friday evening, Miss May Belle Chapman, "Prayer;" violin, Miss Whalen; girls' choir, "Ave Maria." Saturday evening, tenor solo, with violin by Miss Whalen, and girls' choir will sing "Madre Mia." Sunday evening, "Prayer;" "Ave Maria," Miss Lupe Rodriguez; hymns by the girls' choir.

On the feast of the Immaculate Heart, next Sunday, at the 8 o'clock mass there will be general communion, and a sermon pertaining to the feast. Miss Lupe Rodriguez will sing the offertory. At 9 o'clock a solemn high mass will be celebrated, with Most Rev. Francisco Mendoza, archbishop of Durango, Mexico, presiding. Well-known singers will participate in this service.

In the evening, after the services as on other days of the novena, there will be an imposing procession, when the statue of the Immaculate Heart of Mary will be carried by young ladies in a march through the corridors and around the patio. The Young Men's Institute Band will participate in the procession. The services will terminate by the ceremony of kissing the hands of the statue and it being placed on a new altar.

CATTLE IMPORTED BY INDIAN RANCHERS

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BEAUMONT, Aug. 19.—The arrival from Texas of 150 thoroughbred Hereford heifers and five thoroughbred Hereford bulls from the Sparks ranch in Nevada at the Morongo Indian Reservation, seven miles east of Beaumont, marks the beginning of an experiment which, if it proves successful, is expected to vastly improve the condition of the various Indian tribes in Southern California.

Uncle Sam and the Morongo Indians have formed a partnership to engage in the cattle business. The Morongos have hundreds of acres of excellent grazing land on their reservation, but have been unable to fill their pasture with stock on account of a proverbial lack of funds. Now an arrangement has been made between the Indians and the government to permit the land to yield an income.

The initial herd has been paid for by the government. It will devolve upon the Indians to care for the stock. If they can sufficiently master the duties of roping, branding and the round-up, they will receive all of the profits derived. The government will only require the Indians to reimburse it for the purchase price of the stock, and this may be paid on the installment plan.

Through the assistance of the government an irrigation system has already been established on the reservation and much of the land suitable for fruit-raising has been planted in orchard.

IT IS NO PICNIC TO BE PENNILESS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ONTARIO, Aug. 19.—They are all hers and "it's no picnic!" Acquaintances of the woman here believe that Mrs. L. F. Pinney of this city qualified for a Carnegie hero medal today when, without a cent in her pocket, accompanied by her seven children, whose ages range from 1 to 14 years, and with hand baggage consisting of thirteen bundles, four pillows, a "telescope" and a bird cage, she set out to make the trip from Ontario to Big Bend, Kan., in a Southern Pacific day coach.

In Kansas Mrs. Pinney hopes to join her husband. With a little money sent by him and aided by local charitable institutions, the woman managed to scrape enough together for the purchase of transportation east. Sympathetic neighbors donated enough lunch to last the entire party on its trip, but it was not until Mrs. Pinney and her numerous offspring were boarding the train that the woman announced to a neighbor that she hadn't a penny with her, and then it was too late to remedy the trouble.

The Pinney children are: Edson, 14; Esther, 12; Mary, 10; Virgil, 8; Theodore Roosevelt, 5; Rosalie, 2, and John Craig, 1. They are making the trip by way of San Francisco and must change cars both in Los Angeles and the Bay City.

PACIFIC ELECTRIC IS BRANCHING OUT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Aug. 19.—President Shoup of the Pacific Electric Railway, F. W. Webster, manager of all the valley electric lines of the Southern Pacific Railroad, and W. P. Ballard, superintendent of the Visalia Electric Railway, accompanied by several leading business men of this city and section, have just completed a tour of the country surrounding this city, the admitted object of the trip being to ascertain the advisability of building more electric lines here.

In an interview Mr. Shoup said the Visalia Electric Company, which is now owned by the Pacific Electric, felt inclined to do extensive construction work here, and that whether it is done depends on the possibility of getting enough freight business. It was largely to estimate the probable tonnage that the trip was made.

Mr. Shoup said work was proceeding satisfactorily on the two new lines which the Visalia Electric is building here.

SPANISH ART AT RIVERSIDE.

Unique House Party Attends Society Function.

Castilian Entertainment Held at Mission Inn.

Fire Chiefs on Way to San Diego Convention.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

RIVERSIDE, Aug. 19.—Lovers of art from all portions of Southern California are assembling here for the unique house party arranged in honor of the first exhibition of Spanish art attempted by the recently-organized Spanish Arts Society of California.

The Ehrich collection of old Spanish masters, valued at more than $1,000,000 was made available for exhibition purposes this evening in the Spanish art gallery of the Mission Inn, selected by the society as the one ideal spot in the West for displaying this notable collection.

The guests began arriving early in the afternoon and met for the first time at dinner in the court dining-room, which had been transformed into a bit of old Castile. The menu included a great variety of Spanish dishes, while in the outer court Spanish dancers, in the brilliant costumes of the days of the Don, disported themselves in graceful evolutions to the witching airs played by the Glenwood troubadours.

After dinner the art gallery was thrown open to the guests and local members of the Spanish Arts Society. The Ehrich collection comprises thirty-one masterpieces, produced during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, the golden age of Spanish art. The collection is the greatest of the kind that has been exhibited in the West and was secured through the efforts of Frank A. Miller from the Ehrich galleries in New York.

As a means of further emphasizing the ideals of the Spanish Arts Society, the entertainment in the cloister music-room this evening was made essentially Castilian in character.

The songs and organ numbers were characteristically Spanish and the performers all appeared in costumes befitting old Spain. Several of the "Mission Play" troupe, including Miss Norma Gould and Senor Gonzales of San Diego, contributed a number of Spanish dances.

A large number of out-of-town guests are expected tomorrow. Among those registered at the Mission Inn tonight from Los Angeles are: Mr. and Mrs. J. Bond Francisco, R. F. Del Valle, Lucretia Del Valle, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Benton, Miss Edith Benton, Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Andrews and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Kanst, H. G. Valle, Lenwood Abbott, Mary H. Drew, Dorothy Johnson and Jack Lambert.

CHIEFS ENTERTAINED.

Delegates to the convention of the Pacific Coast Fire Chiefs' Association, which opens in San Diego on Tuesday, arrived in a Santa Fe special at 11:30 o'clock this morning and were the guests of Fire Chief Schneider of this city and the Chamber of Commerce until 4:30 o'clock, when the firemen's palatial train left for Los Angeles for the night.

The visitors were taken for an automobile trip over the official drive, lunched at the Mission Inn and spent the remainder of the afternoon in an inspection of the hotel and its curiosities.

BORDWELL'S NAME.

Judge Bordwell's name appears on the sample ballots being mailed out in this county, notwithstanding the decision of the State Supreme Court, rendered yesterday, ordering the elimination of the name.

It was stated at the County Clerk's office today that the decision comes too late to keep the candidate's name off the samples, but that it will not appear on the regular primary ballots.

RIVERSIDERS HONORED.

Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Roblee of this city have been honored by their selection as vice-presidents on the occasion of the big Hughes meeting to be held in Los Angeles on Monday. W. A. Purington and Frank A. Miller and their wives, all of whom are members of the Republican State Executive Committee, have received invitations to be present at the meeting.

HARBOR WAREHOUSE.

Walls of New Structure Completed. Big Demand for Floor Space Expected—New Church to be Dedicated This Morning.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, Aug. 19.—The walls for the new municipal warehouse in the outer harbor were completed today and work on the roof will be begun by pouring concrete for the roof. The new building is 480x152 feet, with seven floors, including the basement.

There are approximately 188,000 feet of floor space available for storage of freight and the latest labor-saving appliances will be installed to handle it.

It is expected that there will be a big demand for space in the new warehouse as soon as ships are available to bring freight from the Atlantic. Goods from the East can be brought from the Atlantic and foreign ports and stored at the harbor by Los Angeles jobbers for distribution to meet the competition of the jobbers in the Middle West who sell to Arizona and New Mexico.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

The first wing of the new $35,000 First Methodist Church of San Pedro will be dedicated tomorrow with impressive exercises. The first unit of the building will be used for services and the building completed later.

The dedicatory address will be delivered by Francis M. Larkin, D.D., editor of the California Christian Advocate. In the evening Harcourt W. Peck, D.D., will speak. There will be special music at both services and a large attendance is expected.

ANGLERS WIN PRIZES AT REDONDO BEACH.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDONDO BEACH, Aug. 19.—The first day of the fishing contest closed this evening with Mrs. John Kribbs of this city, winner of the first prize. Mrs. Kribbs caught forty-nine pounds of fish since 7 o'clock this morning. She was awarded $15.

The pier was crowded with enthusiasts who had journeyed to Redondo to participate in the novel fishing contest off the new pier.

Jack Dempsey of No. 318 East Ninth street, Los Angeles, caught forty-six pounds of fish and won the second prize of $10.

B. E. Martin of Riverside caught the largest fish, which weighed seven pounds, and received a $10 prize.

Mrs. A. C. Rorshand of this city caught a variety of fish weighing eight and one-half pounds, and received the $2.50 prize.

The same contest will be held tomorrow from the new pier.

LARGE STOCK ROOM.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

COLTON, Aug. 19.—Work on the largest stock room yet to be erected at the plant of the California-Portland Cement Company is well under way. The structure is to be of concrete, 80x250 feet, and will house more than 100,000 barrels of cement when completed. With the completion of the new office building at Third and Georgia streets and its occupancy by the auditing department, the old office building is being remodeled for the exclusive use of Supt. E. J. Strock's office force and a laboratory and office for W. C. Hanna, head of the chemical department.

Long Beach.

PLAN PROPOSED FOR A MERGER.

LONG BEACH BOOST BODIES TO BE CONSOLIDATED.

Chamber of Commerce and Ad Club may Start the Business. Beach Man off for Chicago to Protect Interests in Real Estate. Freight Rate Increase Deplored.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONG BEACH, Aug. 19.—A plan for the amalgamation of the two big boost bodies of the city, the Chamber of Commerce and the Ad Club, was proposed today. It is probable that, within the next month, the project will become a fact, and a strong, centralized organization result.

It is projected that the members of the Ad Club join the chamber in a body, with the understanding that some of the young blood which predominates in the Ad Club be elected to the directorate of the chamber. It is also proposed that a standing committee be elected by the chamber in case of such a merger, for the continuation of the successful luncheons of the Ad Club.

President E. J. Richards of the Ad Club, though having expressed himself favorably regarding such a merger on one occasion, was noncommittal on the subject, as were directors of the chamber.

CLAIM TO MILLIONS.

John J. Engledrum, No. 352 South Termino avenue, will, on Tuesday leave for Chicago to further his claim of a one-third interest in property in the Windy City said to be valued at $6,000,000.

The property comprises 512 lots on the lake front on which Capt. George Wellington Streeter squatted thirty years ago and which he still holds by power of possession. Mr. Engledrum claims that, twenty years ago, when Streeter was recuperating from his gruelling fight for possession of the "no-man's land," Streeter agreed to deed Engeldrum and E. J. Fogarty of South Bend, Ind., the lots. The litigation regarding the property is now reaching a culmination.

SHIPPING RATES.

No industrial concern in Southern California would be harmed more by the proposed increase in the railroad freight rates than the California Shipbuilding Company, according to officials of that concern. Freight rates on metal parts of the submarines and other vessels now building for the United States government at the yards would be increased about 60 per cent. The participation of this concern in bidding upon future government contracts in competition with eastern concerns would be nearly prohibitive.

The California Shipbuilding Company has sent a long message to the Interstate Commerce Commission protesting against the raise and showing how heavy the blow will fall on the local concern. Freight rates on iron to the Pacific Coast are $10 higher than on the Atlantic seaboard and the proposed increase would make the difference $6 more.

WANT BETTER LIGHT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FULLERTON, Aug. 19.—A number of property owners here have petitioned the City Trustees to install ornamental lights on both sides of Spadra street for a distance of several blocks. The cost to property holders will be about 60 cents a running foot. The matter will come up for action at the next meeting.

The Boy Problem

It is one of vital interest to every parent; it must be solved properly. His school life is one of the most important factors in a boy's proper development; it is the time that the man-to-be is being formed physically, mentally, morally. I honestly feel that aside from the sacred desk itself, that this work for boys, this life of service in building up the best in boys, is the greatest work in the world, fraught with the greatest possibilities—and this is the spirit back of The San Diego Army and Navy Academy. Its instruction is thorough; it has secured many of the highest recognitions possible from the government and from the universities; but the feature that should appeal most strongly to a thoughtful parent is its emphasis upon character training. None but Christian teachers are employed and its enrollments are being zealously guarded to prevent the admission of students whose influence should possibly prove hurtful.

From Keystone State.

The regular monthly meeting of the Pennsylvania Society will be held next Tuesday evening at Fraternal Brotherhood Hall, No. 845 South Figueroa street. There will be a box social and an entertainment. It is expected that the society will vote for another picnic for September instead of the usual meeting for that month.

A meeting of the Randall-Dale prohibitionists was held last night at the East First street school. The gathering was addressed by Lucius C. Dale, and Rev. E. W. Kinchin, pastor of the Wesley Chapel. The meeting was held in the interest of the State and national campaign.

NEBRASKANS PICNIC.

Celebrate with Oratory and Sport at Long Beach.

Former residents of Nebraska, numbering 1200, gathered at Long Beach yesterday in annual picnic, under the auspices of the Nebraska Society of Southern California. The Nebraskans met on the picnic deck of the auditorium to eat basket lunches, and listened to speeches and applauded sports in the afternoon.

R. W. Richardson, president of the society, welcomed the visitors in a short talk. Harry Riley, vice-Mayor, spoke on behalf of the city, Mayor Lisenby being ill. Other speakers were Superintendent of Schools W. L. Stephens, Reuben Graybill, Col. Rubles, Dr. W. O. Henry and William Madgett, Mayor of Hastings, Neb.

It was declared that more people came from Nebraska to Southern California during the last year than during any other similar period.

FEARLESS SLEEPERS.

Englishman Chose a Narrow Plank Hundred Feet Above Ground.

[Kansas City Journal:] A short time ago a man was discovered in his lunch hour fast asleep on a plank. His arms were hanging down, one on each side of the board, which was about a foot wide. He was snoring gloriously, and quite careless of the fact that if he turned over for greater comfort he would "tumble out of bed" 120 feet, for that plank was part of the scaffolding erected for the repair of a church spire.

A similar disregard for danger was reported lately during the erection of an electrical plant. One of the men engaged on the tall chimney, missing his mate at the lunch hour, went up the half-finished chimney to find him. He discovered him fast asleep on a narrow ledge of brick inside the shaft, a fall from which meant a drop of eighty feet.

The other week a circus arrived in a certain town, not 100 miles from London, at an early hour after a long journey and a performance the previous night. As a consequence, few of the company got any sleep. That day there was the usual procession and the afternoon performance. The lion tamer had had a very rough time because of the illness of one of his beasts, according to London Answers.

The evening performance arrived, and the man had to pretend to go to sleep with his head on the body of a couchant lion, finishing up the performance by springing up and putting his head in another lion's mouth.

But when the jumping up time came a gentle snore was heard. The man was fast asleep with his head pillowed on a lion.

Out-of-doors.

ADVERTISING CLUB HOLDS "HI JINKS."

PICNIC AND SPORT FILD DAY AT SELIG ZOO.

Texans Have Their Annual Outing in Sycamore Grove and Listen to Patriotic Speeches, and Canadians in Same Park Celebrate with Games and Eats.

The annual "Hi Jinks" of the Advertising Club were held at the Selig Zoo yesterday afternoon, with Harold Janss, president of the club, presiding. The affair started off with feeding the animals at the zoo. Several members, according to the testimony of the others, answered the animal keeper's call when he started to feed his charges.

"After that everything was lovely," said Secretary Raymond last night, "everything. There were 200 members and their wives present, and everybody wanted to run."

The races were exciting. They were of all kinds, including obstacle races, fat men's races, thin men's races, races for boys and races for girls. Then the women tired of sitting still and watching the men exert themselves and they raced.

Prizes for the races were donated by Barker Bros., the Southern California Edison Company, F. B. Silverwood, Kingsley, Mason & Collins, Parmelee-Dohrmann Company, Matthews Candy Company, the Broadway Department Store and Brock & Co.

There are two baseball teams in the Ad Club, one known as the "Has Beens" and the other bears the title of "Will Bes." The "Will Bes" "were" yesterday when they faced the "Has Beens." The former put one over on those of the past by smuggling two or three, according to several truthful members of the club, real ball players into their team. Anyway, the score was 16 to 4 in favor of the "Will Bes."

The refreshments were a minor quantity at the end of the session. A. W. Wilkins and Miss Ella Fish received a silver loving cup donated by Brock & Co., to be given the most graceful dancers.

The Texas State Society held a picnic at Sycamore Grove yesterday, at which former prominent residents of the Lone Star State delivered patriotic addresses.

The programme consisted of band music and instrumental solos. The affair was in the nature of a basket picnic with free coffee for all who wore badges.

Addresses were delivered by Dist.-Atty. Woolwine, Rufus C. Bowden, formerly of El Paso, and now a local candidate for Congress; Rufus C. Porter, formerly of Dallas, and Minor Moore, formerly of Waco. About 1100 Texans were present.

Sycamore Grove also was the scene of the picnic of the Canadian Society of Southern California, which held forth with a programme of sports and addresses also.

Dist.-Atty. Woolwine delivered the principal address and was loudly applauded. Among the sports were obstacle races, three-legged races, a tug-of-war, fat men's race and other features. Canadians from all over Southern California turned out for the event.

After the Honeymoon.

Hub—And what do I get for your doing the cooking—indigestion.

UNIONITES' PLAN TO SHACKLE FILM WORKERS FLAT FAILURE.

Seventeen Leading Producing Firms Pledge Themselves to the Open-shop Policy, Nipping Agitators' Scheme that would have Cramped Industries.

EFFORTS of union-labor agitators to unionize the film industry of Los Angeles and vicinity are a failure. Seventeen of the biggest concerns operating here have emphatically affirmed their intention of continuing to operate open-shop plants.

The union organizers planned to make their work so far-reaching that no supplies would be handled at the studios that had been secured through open-shop concerns. The attempt to organize is a dismal failure.

The concerns that have pledged themselves to the open-shop policy include the following large producers: Majestic, Universal, New York, Fine Arts, Bosworth, Morosco, Kystoe, Lasky, Balboa of Long Beach, Selig, American Film Company, National Drama, the Lubin at Coronado, Rolin, L. K. O., and the Christy.

Under the open-shop conditions the motion-picture industry here has developed to mammoth proportions within six years. It is conservatively estimated that the total expenditures from all sources of this industry in a year range from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000. The cost of erecting permanent buildings and the money invested in homes by persons connected with the industry will also run into millions. During a year's time fully 15,000 are given employment in the various branches of the work in this picture-making business.

Fully 75 per cent. of all the films made in the United States are manufactured in Los Angeles and vicinity. Every night in thousands of show houses all over the world the glories of Southern California scenery are displayed to fascinated watchers.

The industry is constantly growing, and Los Angeles, through the favorable condition it offers, has become the Capital of Filmdom.

Union-labor agitators have looked with greedy eyes upon the great motion-picture industry, our richest [illegible] told, and they have been reaching out their tentacles to seize and throttle it.

But the motion-picture industry, like other prosperous lines of work in Southern California, will remain "open shop." So seventeen of the largest concerns have firmly declared during the past week. They propose to stand together against any and all movements that would prevent free and independent artisans participating in the lines of industry affected by this wonderfully developing business.

In various guises the wily union-labor agitators have been approaching the managers of the film concerns, but they have been disconcerted by the outcome. Now they propose to take the matter up from other angles, but these, too, will be unavailing.

Jim Gray, notorious in Los Angeles as a union-labor agitator, at the meeting of the Central Council [illegible] announced the time was ripe for a new move on the motion-picture industry. He declared unionites have been making a general canvass of all the film concerns, have ascertained just what wages are paid to the workers in the various departments, the number of men and women employed, and how many union people there are in this number, who can act as a leaven to help carry out the proposed plans of the union.

GOMPERS IN ON IT.

He stated Sam Gompers has also pledged his personal work in the East to bring such pressure as is possible to bear upon the eastern capital used in the work here to force its holders to ask that unions be recognized in the Los Angeles picture-making industry. It was stated the threat of a boycott by 2,000,000 people, including union men and women of the United States, and those persons directly dependent upon them, will be used to try to enforce the union demands.

Managers of local film-making concerns have been fully aware of this menace, but the general public has not realized that the little clique of trouble-makers who work in the name of labor unionism has planned to make itself felt afar should it succeed in unionizing the plants here. The programme provides that should such an event occur—which in the face of the developments of the past few days now seems utterly improbable, they would demand that all materials used in the picture studios must be secured from unionized sources. They would refuse to allow the carpenters to handle any lumber that came from open-shop concerns; the same would apply to the painters, the costume-makers, and what-not.

Jim Gray told his hearers the other evening that Sam Gompers was in a position to put the pressure upon the eastern capitalists who have invested money in the industry here, and would show them what havoc could be wrought with the picture industry of the United States should the picture-makers not comply with union demands.

NUMBERS NEGLIGIBLE.

As a matter of fact, if every union-labor man and woman in Los Angeles should cease to visit the picture shows here the loss would be scarcely felt. The unions themselves claim not more than 12,000 members in Los Angeles county, and that figure is grossly exaggerated. They are so few in number now that they do not even dare to try to have a Labor Day parade.

In order to generally advance their interests, seventeen of the largest motion-picture concerns of Los Angeles have banded together as the Film Producers' Association. It is this body that stands firmly committed to the open-shop policy. Workmen and women are employed by these concerns solely on their merit and ability to perform certain lines of work, and the union card is not now and never will be a necessity here. This has been made plain and emphatic to union agitators within the past few days. The hopes of the union organizers now lie with action in the East.

There are several smaller concerns that are not affiliated with this Film Producers' Association, but they, too, will follow the open-shop policy.

The present movement of the union-labor agitators is to organize only the artisans. They have discovered that they have ninety-three union men and women in the regular staffs of the various companies. This, however, is a discouraging outlook when it is known that in these same lines of work, in the companies where the unionists are employed, there are 699 independent workmen who are well satisfied with existing conditions and who profit by the open-shop policy.

The industry gives employment here during the year to thousands of people, and it has attracted hither authors and playwriters of national fame, and actors and actresses of magnitude in the theatrical firmament.

Turning Aside the Path of the Floods.

Time for Decision.

DIVERSION DAM TO SAFEGUARD HARBORS IS PRESSING ISSUE.

Segregation of Silt Problem from Flood Control Programme Necessitated by Federal Action Calling for Quick Vote on Bonds—Contemplated Plans.

WHEN, as part of the Federal river and harbor appropriation, $500,000 was recently made available for the immediate construction of the proposed Dominguez diversion dam, the government placed squarely before the people of Los Angeles county a momentous issue, which, it is expected, they will decide at the polls in November.

On this decision, experts say, depends the future of Los Angeles Harbor, now always menaced by silt deposits and threatened periodically by floods that, in a few hours, do large damage to property and clog the channel with millions of cubic yards of sand and debris, which can later be removed only by dredging at heavy cost of time and money. On this decision also depends the fate of more than 10,000 acres of fertile land now of doubtful value because of frequent inundation, but which with proper protection afforded by the proposed diversion of flood waters will undoubtedly become in time part of a vast industrial and residence district.

The Dominguez diversion project, first seriously proposed ten years ago, has been regarded as an integral part of the $15,000,000 flood-control programme which the county hopes to carry out some day. The government's recent $500,000 appropripation, however, is conditional upon immediate action on the part of Los Angeles county in providing a right of way, building necessary bridges and settling damages resulting from the diversion of the river course.

SEPARATE ISSUE.

To do this the engineers estimate that $1,000,000 should be made available at once. As the county is not ready to go ahead with the remainder of its $15,000,000 programme, the request for immediate action necessities segregating the flood-control issues. The legality of such segregation is being studied by County Counsel Hill, who is expected to render an opinion within a few days. His opinion, which is expected to be favorable, will, under provisions of the Baker Act, pave the way for the Board of Supervisors to order the project placed on the ballot for action at the November election.

Briefly, the diversion project, if carried out, would protect the Long Beach and Los Angeles harbors from silt by preventing the waters of the Los Angeles and San Gabriel rivers and their connecting channel, the Rio Hondo, from entering. This would be done by constructing a dam extending from Dominguez Hill to the high land at Los Cerritos, north of Long Beach, and a channel thence to the ocean at Alamitos Bay.

This plan, proposed by the United States District Engineer and indorsed by civic organizations here and at Long Beach, has also been approved by the County Supervisors and a majority of the local board of engineers on flood control. It has been opposed, however, by residents of the Alamitos Bay district, who believe such diversion would flood the lowlands and result in deposit of debris in the bay and lagoons. The Chamber of Commerce of Compton and the Palos Verde Syndicate also object to the plan.

ROUTE VEXED QUESTION.

Most of the objections deal with the routing of the diverted waters from a point approximately one mile from the southern end of the proposed dam to the ocean. Independent surveys and reports made by the county flood-control engineers and men from the local district engineer's office coincide in suggesting the feasibility of an alternative route, which, although shorter, would necessitate additional excavation work.

Both plans are shown on the accompanying diagram. The final decision as to which of the proposed routes will be followed is said to depend largely upon difficulty encountered in obtaining the right of way, and will be made by the Secretary of War and the Chief of Engineers, U.S.A.

It is proposed to start the dam at a point about 1000 feet north of the old Dominguez ranch-house. The top of the dam, or dike, as local engineers designate it, would be at a constant elevation of sixty-three feet above mean sea level. At the starting point the dike would be but a few inches in height, gradually increasing as it crossed the lowlands until at its maximum point, where it would cross the present river-bed, it would be nineteen feet in height.

It would be constructed of rock and earth, thirty feet wide across the crown and with lateral slopes of one on three. It would be approximately three and a half miles in length and, according to the engineers' estimates, contain about 700,000 cubic yards of material. The estimated cost of construction is $134,042, with an additional $55,000 for securing right of way. The average height of the dike, according to the district engineer's statistics, would be fourteen feet.

MUST RAISE BOULEVARD.

The proposed dike, extending in a southeasterly direction, would cross the Long Beach boulevard approximately 1500 feet north of the present bridge across the Los Angeles River. At that point it would be eleven feet in height, necessitating a corresponding increase in the elevation of the roadbed for several hundred feet and the construction of a long bridge. It would cross the present river-bed approximately 1000 feet above the present bridge.

Flood water sweeping down the valley would be diverted by the dike at that point and turned across the lowlands toward the Salt Lake Railway, approximately two miles distant. Confined on one side by the dike and on the other by natural barriers, it would flow uninterrupted almost to the railroad embankment.

At that point, where the soil flattens out into a natural reservoir containing approximately 1000 acres, it is proposed to begin the "cut," or artificial channel, to lead to the ocean. The proposed cut, 600 feet wide and about four feet deep where it would pass under the Salt Lake tracks, would begin approximately 1200 feet west of the railroad embankment, which would have to be strengthened and raised about ten feet for several hundred yards in either direction.

GENTLE FALL.

Beyond the railroad the cut would have a fall of approximately ten inches to each 1000 feet. East of the railroad the cut would follow the lowest land for about one mile, at its maximum requiring an excavation of less than nine feet.

At the end of the mile, as may be noted on the map, the proposed routes to the sea begin to diverge.

If the longer route were followed the amount of excavation necessary would remain almost constant for approximately two miles and then decrease rapidly in the next half-mile until the cut would run out onto the lowlands, where the flow of water would be directed by levees on either side. These levees, approximately ten feet high, fifteen feet wide across the top and with lateral slopes one on three, would

In pictures Nos. 4 and 5 the culverts are to be replaced by a 600-foot tressel and the roadbed raised about six feet for several hundred feet on each side.

"MOVIES" MEAN MILLIONS TO US.

MILLIONS of dollars go into Southern California coffers yearly and an army of busy people finds employment because this is the world capital of motion pictures.

It is conservatively estimated that 15,000 people secure employment during the course of a year at the local studios. At times forces of more than 1000 persons are employed on a single picture. From $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 a year is the estimate that has been placed on the total expeditures that result from the various ramifications of the film industry in this locality. At present there are thirty-nine producing companies operating here. The motion-picture industry has developed to such large proportions that even people right in touch with the work scarcely realize its vast importance to Los Angeles. More than 100 companies of actresses and actors are working before the camera every day here. More than 1000 miles of negative film is produced in the year, and from this is printed not less than 40,000 miles of finished motion pictures that go out to the thousands of show houses of the world and spread the glories of Southern California. All this has been the development of the past six years.

The great variety of natural scenery available within a short distance of this city and the fact that practically every day is favorable for picture making has created here the center of filmdom.

The concerns now operating here include the following

LIMIT OF IRRIGATION WITHOUT CONSERVATION.

Government Report Says no More Land in the Colorado Basin Can be Watered Under Present Conditions and Shows How Control by Storage Would be Profitable in Creating Values and Removing Flood Menace.

THAT the irrigated area in the Colorado River basin cannot be greatly increased without storing the flood waters of the rivers for use in times of deficient flow is the conclusion reached by government engineers who have studied the situation for years and embodied in a recent report by E. C. La Rue of the United States Geological Survey entitled, "Colorado River and Its Utilization."

In view of the fact that 75,000 to 100,000 more acres are in cultivation in Imperial Valley this spring than ever before the unwisdom of extending the irrigating system under the conditions that now control the supply of water is clearly shown. The report further says, "The quantity of water available for the irrigation of lands in the basin of Colorado River will probably be reduced by the diversion of water from this basin to other drainage basins."

After saying that few if any of the irrigation projects will require a large amount of storage to insure a permanent water supply the report gives a great amount of data showing how profitable an investment a big conservation project would be.

"The present value of the irrigated lands and related industries below Virgin River," the report says, "is between $40,000,000 and $60,000,000. If all additional irrigable lands were supplied with water, the value of the property in the irrigated area would probably exceed $300,000,000."

Previous estimates of the cost of a complete storage and conservation system made by government engineers and others are from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000.

The report says that "about 367,000 acres were irrigated below Virgin River in 1913 directly from the Colorado River and additional areas aggregating approximately 2,367,000 acres are classed as irrigable.

NECESSITY OF STORAGE.

"To protect the property from the ravages of floods and to increase the irrigated area the flow of the Colorado must be regulated. The control of the river, if obtained by the use of storage reservoirs, will therefore serve a double purpose—it will protect the irrigated area from overflow and bank encroachment and it will increase the water supply available for the irrigation of new lands. The ideal end to be sought is the modification of the natural flow to conform to the demand for water for irrigation below Virgin River.

"By disregarding losses by evaporation, it is estimated that a uniform flow of about 21,800 second feet could be maintained at Hardyville or at Laguna dam with a storage of 25,000,000 acre feet. Such regulation of the flow is neither desired nor commercially feasible.

"During the period 1902 to 1914, inclusive, properly located storage reservoirs having an aggregate capacity of 6,300,000 acre feet would have been sufficient to maintain a flow at Yuma not exceeding 50,000 second feet. Such regulation, which would materially reduce the necessity for levee construction and minimize the cost and operation of other protective works, may prove desirable.

IRRIGATION POSSIBILITIES.

"On the assumption of no further increase in the irrigated area above and including Virgin River, all lands susceptible of irrigation below Virgin River could be irrigated if properly-located reservoirs with an aggregate capacity of 18,000,000 acre feet were constructed, even if the excessively dry period from 1902 to 1905 were to be repeated. The irrigated area above Virgin River will increase, however, and eventually there will not be sufficient water in the Lower Colorado to supply the demand for the reclamation of all the irrigable lands. This increase in the irrigated area on the headwaters will tend to equalize the flow on the lower Colorado and finally a storage of 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 acre feet may prove sufficient to maintain a flow of 50,000 second feet or less at gauge height of twenty-five feet at Yuma."

The following statistics of the Colorado River are given by Mr. La Rue: Total area of basin, 244,000 square miles; length, 1700 miles; total fall, source to mouth, 14,000 feet; irrigable area below Virgin River, 2,734,000 acres; area irrigated in 1913, 367,000 acres; mean annual run-off, 17,000,000 acre feet.

The report says that technically the Colorado is navigable from its mouth up to Laguna dam and above the dam as far as Needles. The navigability of the lower river was apparently recognized in the treaties with Mexico, but the current is so swift and the water over bars so shallow that there has been practically no commerce below Yuma since the Southern Pacific completed its track in 1876.

SIX OVERFLOW CHANNELS.

"The principal overflow channel on the east side," the report says, "is about forty miles long and joins the gulf about twenty miles southeast of the present mouth of the river. West there are five overflow channels: Alamo River, used as part of the Imperial Valley canal system; New River, which heads in Volcano Lake; a channel which distributes water in part to Volcano Lake and in part to New River; a channel which discharges into the west side of Volcano Lake and one which discharges into a network of channels south of the lake."

Irrigation in the delta is not new according to Mr. La Rue. The raising of crops by artificial application of water, he says, was first practiced by ancient peoples whose ditches and reservoirs were finished with hard linings of tamped or burnt clay. The ancient canals in Salt River Valley are at least 150 miles long and were sufficient to serve 150,000 acres of land, although it is is not likely that the whole of this area was ever watered at one time.

Concerning diversion the report says: "In 1914 about 1,900,000 acre feet of water was diverted through the Imperial Canal for lands in Imperial Valley in the United States and Mexico. The maximum quantity diverted was 4307 second feet in July, 1914. All lands under the Imperial Canal system in the United States and Mexico were, however, not under cultivation in 1914, and it appears probable that within a few years the total annual diversion through this canal may exceed 2,250,000 acre feet."

The maximum diversion through the Imperial Canal this year was nearly 6000 second feet.

The report describes exhaustive tests made by the government which show that the Colorado River annually carries a load of more than 60,000,000 tons of silt.

New Division Plan.

WOULD FORM COUNTY OF CITY AND BEACH TOWNS.

SUGGESTING the annexation of Santa Monica, Ocean Park and Venice, and then the formation of a city and county of Los Angeles, leaving the rest of the county to form a new one, Councilman Topham will tomorrow present to the City Council a resolution instructing the City Attorney to advise what steps are necessary to be taken.

Councilman Topham said the dual government which now exists here is cumbersome and burdensome on the taxpayers. He thinks the time is opportune for creating a new county to be known as the City and County of Los Angeles, thereby eleminating one of the two governments.

"The charter provides you can create a new county if you leave 5000 inhabitants in the section left out," he said. "About all the territory we now need to give us a good city and county is the Santa Monica Bay district, and then we can have a City and County of Los Angeles like the City and County of San Francisco.

"It would save the taxpayers of Los Angeles City about $3,000,000 a year. The city of Los Angeles pays approximately 65 per cent. of the county taxes. By the action proposed it would leave the rest of the county to form a new county. We would have to assume our share of the bonded indebtedness for good roads, but we could afford to do that."

Advice to Housewives.

SUGAR PRICE GOES DOWN; CAN CHEAP FRUITS NOW.

ALTHOUGH fully half the housewives in the country have canned no fruit this summer on account of the high price of sugar, there is yet time enough for them to prepare some of the "goodies" which are so appreciated in the winter months. Sugar prices in Los Angeles have been reduced 65 cents per 100 pounds since the first of the present month and there are some fresh fruits that are still rather plentiful and that can be purchased at cheap prices, such as quinces and crabapples.

Early in the season, the average housewife made up her mind that she would put up no fruits this summer, on accout of the price of sugar. She did not analyze the situation at all, and as a result, has not been able to take advantage of the fruits which sold so cheaply in the local market several months ago.

Most women use a maximum of a quarter to a third of a pound of sugar in each quart jar of canned fruit. During the entire summer, sugar has been not more than 3 cents a pound higher than in normal years. Figuring that a third of a pound of sugar is used in the preparation of one jar of canned fruit, the additional cost for canning brought about by the high price of sugar during the last two months, at the most, was not over 1 cent a quart jar.

The withdrawal of the demand on the part of housewives for fruit jars this summer has resulted in the stranding in the State of California alone of approximately 200 cars of jars. These jars can be bought at reasonable prices, and with sugar 65 cents per 100 pounds cheaper than it was a month ago, it is declared housewives should take advantage of the situation and should delay no longer in canning what fruit they will need for winter use.

Noted Democrat Seeks Wilson's Defeat

Former Circuit Judge F. B. Stuart,

Of Hawaii, who was so disgusted with the maladministration of island affairs by the Democratic administration that he resigned and will devote his energies to helping beat Wilson and elect Hughes.

Political Jugglery.

HAWAIIAN JUDGE SCORES WILSON'S ISLAND POLICY.

Resigns from Bench and in Vigorous Language Says He'll Work for Retirement of Present Head of Government—Says Administration has Connived at Overriding of Spirit and Letter of Organic Law of Territory.

SOME idea of the aims that animate the Wilson administration in its dealings with the inhabitants of Hawaii were related to The Times yesterday by a Wilson appointee, who left the bench in disgust, because of what he described as the flagrant political jugglery of justice and the open and tolerated violation of the organic laws of the territory, under Democratic administration of the island.

Judge F. B. Stuart, formerly of Denver, who up to August 1, 1916, was first circuit judge of the Circuit Court of Hawaii, has resigned and in tendering his resignation to President Wilson he severely criticises the administration of justice in the courts of the territory.

QUITS IN DISGUST.

Judge Stuart alleges that he is a good Democrat, but he says that the manner in which the law has been consistently violated in Hawaii by Democratic politicians, with the full knowledge, consent and approval of the administration, has so thoroughly disgusted him that he resigned from the bench and will devote his best energies toward defeating the Democrats and in electing Charles Evans Hughes.

In one paragraph of his letter of resignation to President Wilson, Judge Stuart says:

"With one or two exceptions the entire patronage of the island has been bestowed upon active opponents of the Democratic party. The recommendations of the leading Democrats and the Territorial Committee have been turned down and in all instances disregarded."

GRAVE CHARGES.

Judge Stuart charges that the appointment of L. E. Pinkham as Governor of the island over L. L. McCandless was a direct bait thrown to the Sugar Factors, an organization that controls the production and output of sugar in Hawaii. Gov. Pinkham, he alleges, is or has been an importer of peon labor and is under the influence of the sugar men.

The appointment of W. E. Robertson to the position of chief justice is also severely arraigned. Robertson is painted as a sugar man who has uniformly since his elevation to the head of the court rendered decisions that are not only unconstitutional, but that grossly violate the spirit and letter of the organic law which went into effect when Hawaii became a Territory of the United States.

The homestead acts and the laws abolishing peonage have, according to Judge Stuart, been ridden over roughshod. Every kind of technicality has been brought into play to enable the Sugar Factors to get around these solemn enactments of Congress, and this, too, with the knowledge, consent and approval of the President and the heads of the departments.

The decisions of the courts of Hawaii, says Judge Stuart, "have been as a whole more destructive to the principles of justice than the infamous Dred Scott decision, and the action of the Democratic administration, in tolerating such conditions, is indicative of what we would have to expect in the next four years should they, by any unfortunate accident, be returned to power."

El Dorado.

WILL SEEK THE PICTURED LAND.

GREAT EXODUS TO THE SOUTHLAND IS PREDICTED.

Head of Film Corporation Says Photoplays Produced Here and Reproduced on European Screens are Attracting and Influencing People of Many Countries.

Carl Laemmle, president and H. O. Davis, general manager of the Universal Film Corporation, have arrived in Los Angeles for an indefinite sojourn.

Mr. Laemmle made the following prophecy as to how the close of the European war will affect Los Angeles: "Streams of humanity will flow into Los Angeles immediately after the war and settle upon the peaceful slopes of the Southland."

This prediction is based on the fact that the motion pictures taken in Southern California and shown in the warring countries of Europe are creating in the hearts of hundreds of thousands of people a desire to flee from their war-ridden homes and find shelter, solace and opportunity amid the peaceful scenes depicted upon the screen.

"This great host will invade the Pacific Coast and Los Angeles will be their Mecca. Sturdy moujics from the Russian steppes, expert tillers from the fields of Bohemia, a new generation of artists and artisans from France, Spartan women and children, surcharged with the thought and idealism of Germany, the staunch sons of heroic fathers from Great Britain and from sunny Italy, the hardy peasantry of the Campagna—all to intermingle and intermarry and to fuse their blood and enrich by variety the independent manhood and womanhood that the free and boundless West has produced," he said.

"This result will be largely wrought through the influence of the click of the camera. Motion-picture offices have been deluged with inquiries regarding the location of the various scenes which form the setting for the dramas that are being produced here by the moving-picture companies."

Mr. Laemmle is of the opinion that those who come will not be the wrecks of the great struggle, but the strong, stout-hearted men and women who, because of their strength and courage, have survived the devastation and ruin wrought by the great war.

THREE-REEL CONFECTION.

Drug Company to Present History of Chocolate on Screen.

A. J. Neve, district manager of the Owl Drug Company, announced yesterday that the three-reel moving picture, entitled "A Trip Through Chocolate Town," had been secured by the company and would be shown free to the public all this week at the Owl building, No. 652 South Hill street. A free ticket will be given to each customer who makes a purchase at any of the Owl Drug Stores during the week.

The film is instructive and entertaining and will enable the housewife and all consumers of chocolate to study the history of the chocolate industry from the date of discovery of the chocolate bean by Montezuma down to the present time.

EMPLOYEES WANT TIME EXTENSION.

FURTHER PERIOD IN WHICH TO COME IN CITY ASKED.

Limit Expires at End of Month, but a Number of Men Say They Have been Unable to Arrange to Comply with Rule—Council will Consider Request.

Employees of the city who live outside the limits and who were given until September 1 to come in petioned the Board of Works yesterday for an extension of time. Some stated they had bought property and had been unable to sell it.

Commissioner O'Brien said the employees had had a year in which to come into the city. He believed that no man who was not living in the city should be permitted to work for the city.

President Hanley said he believed in the principle that every employee should live in the city, but a number of these men stated that they had the permission of the Civil Service Commission to live in the county.

"The Civil Service Commission had no right to give such permission," declared Commissioner O'Brien.

"It is overstepping its authority," asserted Commissioner McAleer.

President Handley said the fact they were up against was that these people had been allowed to go outside the city, had acquired property and could not sell it and several were in a very unfortunate situation.

The matter is to be inquired into further both by the Board of Public Works, the Council, and the Civil Service Commission.

WILD INVESTIGATE ERROR.

A thorough investigation is to be made by the Board of Public Works to find out who was responsible for the error in regard to the Florence-avenue sewer district notices, whereby reposting is necessary. President Handley said yesterday it may have been due to a printer's error and not have been a mistake on the part of anyone in the City Engineer's office. Members of the board spoke in favor of the proposed rule for making employees responsible for mistakes pay for them, but they wanted to be sure it was an employee who was at fault.

CANNOT APPROVE IT.

President Handley of the Board of Public Works said yesterday that the pavement being laid on Malabar street from Evergreen avenue to 125 feet east of Fresno street, does not in his judgment meet the specifications, although the contractor has done very careful work thereon. He announced he could not approve it as it stands. This statement followed the receipt from City Engineer Hamlin of a statement that he had heard the macadam pavement will be completed by using materials and methods not in accordance with the specifications.

CITY HALL NOTES.

The Rindge estate has agreed to deed the city ten acres of right of way needed to extend Jefferson street through to Culver City, provided there is no assessment against its property for improving the street.

Three of the six new detective sergeants will receive salaries of $125 a month each and the other three will get $100 a month. The Council yesterday appropriated the additional $500 necessary.

The cost of abating the mosquito nuisance at the harbor, on the plan suggested by the health commissioner, will be $300, the Board of Public Works reported yesterday. It is planned to spread 1200 gallons of distillate on the breeding grounds. The board recommended that the edge of the west basin be sprayed with a whitewash spraying outfit and the marshy ponds not bordered by a wagon road be sprayed by hand sprayers operated by city employees.

SAYS GOOD NAME WAS ATTACKED.

ONE WOMAN SUES ANOTHER FOR ALLEGED SLANDER.

Husbands are Joined in the Action — Plaintiff Accuses Defendant of Having Classed Her as an Undesirable Citizen—Damages of $10,000 Asked.

Statements alleged to be a reflection on her god name as a wife are the basis of a slander suit for $10,000 damages, filed yesterday by Mrs. Lottie Yates against Mrs. H. D. Rosebrook. Their husbands are joined in the action. Mrs. Yates complains through Attorney Raymond E. Hoyt that July 17, last, Mrs. Rosebrook made a false accusation with reference to men going to her house. On the same date she is alleged to have said to Charles E. Yates, the husband: "You are undesirable citizens; I shall have you put out of your house."

Because of the humiliation and shame she suffered by reason of these and other remarks made in the presence of Ruth Mears, Mrs. Yates asks damages.

IN AND OUT ABOUT THE COURTS.

FISHING TRIP. Three doughty men left the Courthouse yesterday afternoon to join Attorney D. H. Laubersheimer and his brother, Dr. Laubersheimer, to do or die on the raging Catalina main. They were Andy C. Robertson, Schuyler Cole and William Ward, who embarked on the yacht Royal at San Pedro for a fishing bout. They also held invitations to be the guests of the Tuna Club of Avalon.

MARRIED IN CHAMBERS. Judge Wellborn had a pleasant task yesterday when he joined in marriage Miss Frances Catherine Pearson, 21, and Cornelius Kelly, 24, in his chambers. Court attaches were spectators. After tieing the knot, Judge Wellborn impressed on the happy groom and the blushing bride that the ceremony in chambers was just as solemn and as binding as a church marriage. He hoped Mr. and Mrs. Kelly would be happy.

It is essential to note that the garments being shown by the Ville lack entirely the whimsicality of the first designs of a new season, but rather are characterized by the finish of heighth of season creations.

This preliminary fashion showing will prove of especial interest tomorrow and all during the week following because our display at this time is exceptionally complete. 1st floor

THE PROPOSED WALL AROUND GERMANY.

The German papers refuse to take seriously the action of the Paris conference threatening Germany with economic strangulation after the war. They say that an impassable customs wall cannot be erected around the central empires because the German market is as important for England as vice versa.

Germany has, during two years of war, abundantly demonstrated the ability of her people to produce within her borders every commodity necessary for their comfort and luxury, and when peace comes and the seas are once more open to her for trade with America, Asia and Africa, it is a question whether her exclusion as a buyer and seller from the markets of the allied powers might not benefit rather than injure her.

THE CHANGED BROTHERHOODS.

Twenty-three years ago the United States passed through a nationwide railroad strike conducted by the American Railway Union, headed by Eugene Debs. The story of how promptly the disturbance was suppressed by President Cleveland we all know.

At the time of this big strike the four railroad brotherhoods, especially the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, made a record for conservatism, observance of law and order and for strict compliance with their contracts with the employers. At that time the chief of the engineers was the late Peter A. Arthur, a leader of labor who stands out in bold relief as an exponent of the best possible in unionism. Under his leadership the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers assumed a place peculiarly its own in labor-unionism; it was for years in a class by itself.

Now all this has changed. When Grand Chief Arthur passed away signs of new and deteriorating leadership began to appear. Threats of strikes, hints of possible co-operation and affiliation with the element of unionism led by Gompers were heard from time to time. Those who knew and admired the record made by the organization in Arthur's time were incredulous; they thought their senses must be deceiving them, that the stories that crept into print must be prompted by enemies of the brotherhood who sought to discredit it for their own reasons. But now they see it is only too true. The spirit of the best for which the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers once stood lies buried with its late chief, Arthur, in the grave; the lawless element which he fought and vanquished before has triumphed over his dead body.

The threatened strike may be averted by the action of President Wilson, but whether it is or not, the crisis through which the railroads and the country have passed has shown the people how the best in unionism has fallen to the level of the worst, and how the influence of Gompers and his ilk has spread to the railroad orders and to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers that once stood for something better.

TAXPAYERS' ASSOCIATION.

Los Angeles County at present enjoys the unenviable distinction of paying the highest per capita tax of any county in the Union. Our people who also enjoy a reputation for intelligence second to none on earth have come to the natural conclusion that this calls for immediate remedy. Having arrived at this conclusion they are taking prompt steps to render it effective. Hence the birth of the Taxpayers' Association.

This is already backed by influential citizens. The appeal, moreover, is one that the smallest taxpayer can appreciate. So the association is certain to have a favorable influence in regulating our State and county finances.

Its objects are plain. It is entirely nonpolitical in its scope. Its aim is to promote efficiency and economy in government, to furnish correct information as to how public money is spent, to co-operate with public officials for better service and to use all legitimate means to rectify the present tax situation.

The headquarters of the association are in San Francisco, but a branch office will be established in Los Angeles as soon as the movement gathers momentum. Beyond the shadow of a doubt the ball will be kept rolling since it deals with a subject of prime importance to all solid citizens.

Investigation, pitiless publicity, are the advance steps in establishing an economical system for the spending of large sums of money. When the people of California know exactly how their funds are being spent, those to whom this expenditure is intrusted will be careful that no tax money is wasted on profitless experiments. Through the association the whole body of taxpayers can constitute itself an auditing committee to keep close tab on receipts and disbursements. But to make the work effective every county in the State must whole-heartedly second the efforts of the association. That our people in their own interests will do so, and that our tax bills will by more efficient administration be in consequence reduced to normal we confidently predict.

A LOS ANGELES WELCOME.

Hail and welcome to you, Charles Evans Hughes! Nowhere in all this mighty nation, from the eastern to the western sea, have the hearts of the people gone out to you more cordially than in this great city of the sunset land which this morning is honored by your presence.

In November the California Republicans will vote for you; the California Progressives—returned and unreturned—will vote for you, and thousands of patriotic, clear-headed Democrats will vote for you.

All of the people of Los Angeles welcome you today, regardless of party affiliations, because you represent principles, the secure establishment of which will restore prosperity to California and the nation.

The farmers welcome you because your election will mean a re-establishment of protection to the product of their toil in their orchards and fields, and not compel them to compete with the growers of Sicilian lemons and producers of Argentine wool, and of the grains and vegetables of other lands. The workers in factory and foundry and shop welcome you, because the restoration of the doctrine of protection to American industry, of which you are the champion, will rekindle furnace fires now extinguished and start again turbines which Democratic folly has caused to be covered with moss, and cause the hum of well paid and contented industry to once more make music for the workers' homes. Americans welcome you because you will vitalize the doctrine of protection to American life and property. On land and sea, at home and abroad, on every ocean and in every country, and you will do the things you say instead of saying much and doing nothing.

And we welcome you not only because you represent principles and policies of government we long to see restored, but because you are a MAN—God bless you—whose record is one of uprightness, and wisdom, and courage, and oh, how we need a man instead of a mountebank in the White House.

And more warmly than all others the Old Guard welcomes you because of the memories of the past which you evoke. They hear and read your candid, uncompromising and fearless utterances. Again they see Farragut lashed to the maintop and sailing into the flames; again they see Sheridan thundering down from Winchester to whirl retreating bayonets into an irresistible column of advancing steel; again they see Sherman writing history with his sword point upon American soil and punctuating his sentences with victories all the way from Atlanta to the sea; again they see Grant—

"Patient of toil, serene amid alarms, Inflexible in faith, invincible in arms."

Again they see Lincoln, the Liberator, taking advantage of the hour to write the death sentence of human slavery, and now, without malice toward those with whom their fathers fought, but with charity and love for all who now look up in pride to the flag of eight and forty stars, the old boys give greeting to you and your beloved wife.

NEPOTISM AND PORK.

"I believe in the application of the old Republican principles. I believe in a protective tariff. I believe in national preparedness in peace and war; I believe in the elimination of waste and extravagance, in the appointment to the public service of men qualified for office; I believe in equal suffrage; I am a strong party man."

These affirmative extracts from the public addresses of Charles Evans Hughes, the Republican candidate for President, furnish of themselves the most striking rejoinder to the carping criticism of his opponents that his policies "are not constructive but destructive," that he is condemning defects in the present Democratic administration without suggesting adequate remedies.

Mr. Hughes is only destructive in his politics in the same sense that a contractor is destructive when he clears away the debris of the old building to lay the foundation for the new. Much which has been done in the last four years must be undone before our governmental superstructure is placed again on a firm foundation. Nepotism flourishes like the traditional green bay tree in the public service. In this respect the whole Democratic administration has shown itself to be without shame.

About half the names in the list of attachees of the House of Representatives are related by blood or marriage to Democratic Congressmen. President Wilson set the example by providing public places for his daughter's husband. One of the first official acts of William Jennings Bryan when he became Secretary of State was to provide jobs for his son and son-in-law. Speaker Champ Clark has three near relatives on the Congressional pay roll. There are forty-six Democratic Congressmen who have either a wife or a child feeding at the government trough.

In fact, when one reads the exposes of Democratic nepotism one begins to realize that it enroaches on the frontiers of our own paternalistic State government. The only difference is that in addition to wives and children the administration members of the California Legislature—twenty-two of them—get fat salaried positions in their own name. This whole disgraceful system must be wiped out of the Federal service; the "poor relations" of Democracy must be replaced by men and women qualified not by blood or marriage but by ability to hold public office.

Then there is a "pork barrel" that is very likely to have both heads caved in when the G.O.P. comes marching home again. To quote the words of Mr. Hughes in his Coeur D'Alene address: "We have poured too much money into streams a few inches deep and have nothing to show for it."

In the same Coeur D'Alene address Mr. Hughes outlined his views in relation to American business:

"I do not believe that the American business man is a rogue. I do not believe that the American business man is unworthy of confidence. I do not believe in trying to deride America's success and the men in America who have been successful."

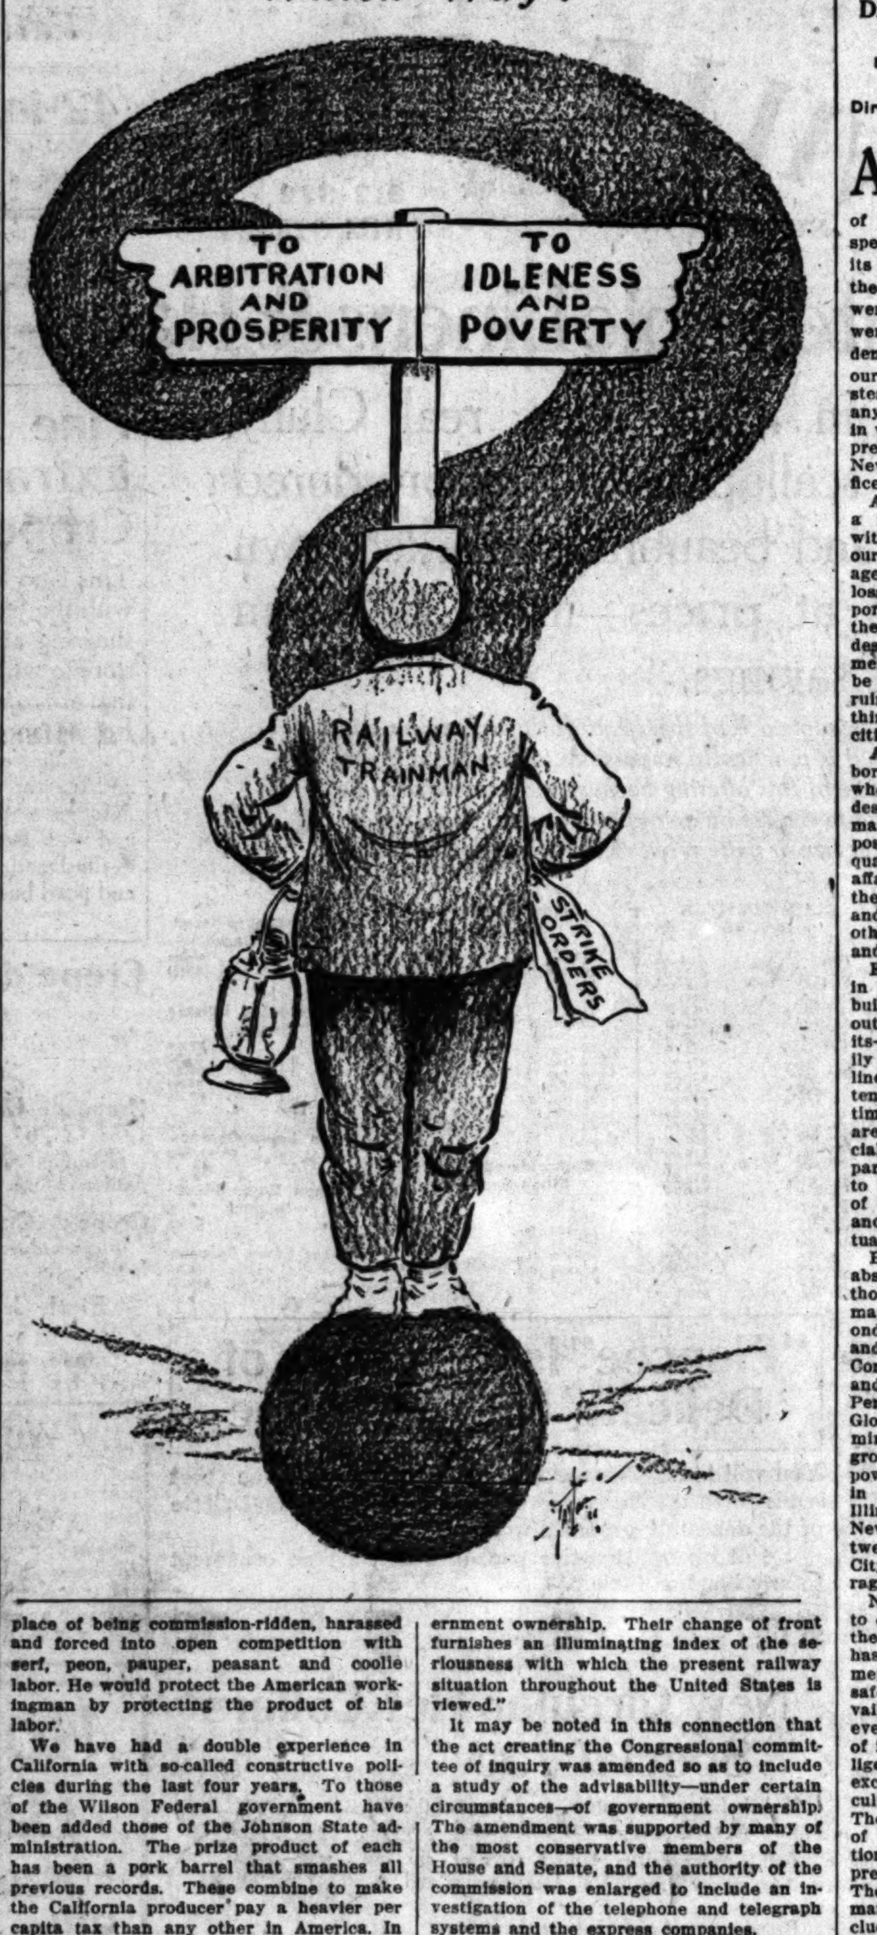
In his Chicago address Mr. Hughes made it plain that he believes a malady of our government is excessive legislation and defective administration. He is not an advocate of government by commission; he believes that American business should be stimulated, encouraged and protected in place of being commission-ridden, harassed and forced into open competition with serf, peon, pauper, peasant and coolie labor. He would protect the American workingman by protecting the product of his labor.

We have had a double experience in California with so-called constructive policies during the last four years. To those of the Wilson Federal government have been added those of the Johnson State administration. The prize product of each has been a pork barrel that smashes all previous records. These combine to make the California producer pay a heavier per capita tax than any other in America. In the State and the nation we have a war budget in time of peace.

Republican administrations have always been constructive administrations. Prosperity has been their password and their motto has been, "America first." There has not been a piece of great constructive legislation passed in fifty years that was not written in essence in a Republican platform before it became a law of the nation.

Mr. Hughes proves by his public utterances that he measures up to the standard of the illustrious Republican Presidents who have preceded him. There is nothing inflammatory, anarchistic or socialistic in his policies. The destructiveness of which he is accused is the old Republican policy of destroying the weeds and protecting the growing corn.

Which Way?



THE RAILROAD PROBLEM.

The threatened railroad strike has called attention to the fact that, at the suggestion of President Wilson, made two years ago, and more recently reiterated, a joint Congressional committee was created by the present Congress to inquire into the various phases of the railway problem and report such legislation as might be necessary to solve it, whether by further government regulation or complete government ownership of railways.

One of the complaints of the railroad corporations is the multiplicity and variety of State laws regulating railways, many of them inconsistent with each other, if not absolutely conflicting. It is not to be denied that some of these laws have impeded "the proper development of the transportation facilities of the country to a point where the rail carriers are falling far behind the normal industrial development."

To accommodate the growing business of the country the construction of short lines to feed trunk lines, the acquisition of more rolling stock and an increase and enlargement of terminal facilities are needed. To finance these improvements requires large sums of money, and there is a growing reluctance of capitalists to placing money where its productiveness, if not its safety, may be impaired by State or Federal laws. The Cleveland Plain Dealer says editorially: "There are authorities, both in and out of the government service, who take the rather pessimistic view that the handling of the railway problem by government regulation has broken down. Many of these authorities profess to see no alternative save government ownership. It is important to note, in this connection, that many of these men are of a class hitherto extremely hostile to any suggestion of government ownership. Their change of front furnishes an illuminating index of the seriousness with which the present railway situation throughout the United States is viewed."

It may be noted in this connection that the act creating the Congressional committee of inquiry was amended so as to include a study of the advisability—under certain circumstances—of government ownership. The amendment was supported by many of the most conservative members of the House and Senate, and the authority of the commission was enlarged to include an investigation of the telephone and telegraph systems and the express companies.

This commission has thus far paid but slight attention to the performance of the duties intrusted to it. The events of the last week will probably stimulate it to activity, and, instead of confining its labors to formulating legislation amplifying regulation of railroads, it may and probably will consider the grave basic change of substituting government ownership for government regulation.

The railway situation presents many problems besides that of dealing with the menaced strike of a minority of employees. One of these problems is that of empowering the corporations to finance expansions to accommodate growing commercial necessities, without increasing the charges for freight and passenger transportation. Another problem is "to get away from the conflict, sectional discrimination and other embarrassments that flow from the divided control of national and State governments—in other words the abolishment of the existing State railway commissions." Such abolition would meet with vigorous opposition from the members of forty-nine State railroad commissions and their employees and hangers-on.

The proposition to substitute government ownership for government control has suddenly assumed importance. It bids fair to overshadow all other issues.

RESTS ON THE SABBATH.

Mr. Hughes is, without making any fuss about it, omitting Sunday from his programme both as a speechmaking day and a day for traveling. He was not born in a Baptist minister's parsonage nor sent regularly to Sunday-school when a boy to now forget his early training because of the exigencies of a political campaign, and he does not mean that in the observance of the second commandment President Wilson shall make any points on him. When it comes to old-fashioned New England reverence for the Lord's day, our Republican leader has not become ashamed of giving politics as well as himself a rest.

Progress in Iloilo.

[Indianapolis News:] Commendable progress toward the best modern ideals is indicated by the announcement from the police of Iloilo, Island of Zamboango, Philippine Islands, that unnecessary cruelty to horses and cattle driven through the public streets will not be tolerated. Especially noteworthy as a sidelight is the following and last sentence: "This applies to Americans as well as others. In fact, this department knows no favorites in the strict enforcement of its duties; please observe this carefully."

DANGEROUS NEIGHBORS OF GREAT CITIES.

[CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES]

BY WILLIAM H. WILSON,
Director of Public Safety, Philadelphia.

AT LAST, after numerous and oftentimes deadly premonitory warnings, an age old problem of our American life, local in its specific applications yet national in its scope, has thundered its way into the popular consciousness. If we were not growing so rapidly, if we were not still making our own precedents, if we were given to regulating our lives strictly upon principles instead of at the behest of expediency, any one of the destructions which, in various parts of the country, have preceded the immense disaster of New York's harbor must have sufficed to prevent it.

As it is, we have had to wait for a man-made earthquake combined with a terrifying bombardment of our greatest port of entry, with damage amounting to $20,000,000 and a loss of life happily lacking in proportion to the danger, to serve as the object lesson which, truly, we desperately need. Even yet, commentary on the explosion seems to be halting at Jersey City, as if the ruinous, appalling thing were something essentially a tale of those two cities.

As concerns the New York Harbor disaster, the actual origin—whether it prove one of accident or design—affects in no way the ultimate cause, which was municipal possession of power without adequate responsibility, a condition of affairs that is no more peculiar to the relations between Jersey City and New York than it is to scores of other American communities, large and small.

Every great center of population in the United States inevitably builds up lesser communities just outside of its own municipal limits—frequently, indeed, a whole family of suburbs which, where county lines are the only dividing bounds, tend to be absorbed in course of time into the municipality. They are dependent on it; they are, socially and economically, integral parts of it. The dangers incident to the propinquity are, ordinarily, of minor moment and are overbalanced by advantages that are mutual.

But wherever State lines divide, absorption remains impossible, although identification of interests may make the primary and the secondary populations, to all intents and purposes, an amalgamation. Conspicuous examples are New York and Jersey City; Philadelphia, in Pennsylvania, and Camden and Gloucester, in New Jersey; Wilmington, in Delaware, and Penngrove, in New Jersey, where great powder plants are located; St. Louis, in Missouri, and East St. Louis, in Illinois; Cincinnati, in Ohio, and Newport, in Kentucky, where only twenty-four hours later than Jersey City's conflagration a great fire raged.

New York, cradling and rearing to exceptional population and riches the northern section of New Jersey, has been all along completely at the mercy of any and every laxity as to safety regulations which might prevail in Jersey City. Potentially, every great center lies at the mercy of its small neighbor's laxity or negligence, and vice versa. Only in exceptional instances does this peculiar risk of explosions prevail. The material common danger is one of conflagrations which the partitioning stream may not stay in the presence of unusually high winds. The moral dangers, now coming markedly into public notice, may include drunkenness, gambling and the social evil.

As a matter of plain, unsensational fact, these dangers are of appreciably larger importance precisely because they are so commonplace and so chronic. They are all the more urgent because the persistent tendency is towards closer identification of the interests of such neighboring communities, while jealousy of corporate independence increases with the recognition of mutual economic dependence.

It will be noted that this problem, simple in its essential difficulty, presents several developments, all different in their nature and, apparently, susceptible of no one, common solution. Nevertheless, if it take the combined wisdom and experience of the urban communities of this country it is becoming imperative that effective solutions be provided. They should by no means prove impossible.

RIPPLING RHYMES.

SALESMEN.

Throughout the town my wares I holler, and try to sell a new gold dollar for sixty-seven cents; in vain, alas, are all my yellings; in vain I haunt your shops and dwellings, your woodsheds and your tents. No man will buy my handsome money; men seem to think it must be phony, because I'd sell it cheap; so all day long I seek a market, display my coin and boost and bark it, and then break down and weep. But now comes Nestor Newton Neuter, who deals in dollars made of pewter, alloyed with lead and tin; he seems to loaf while I am sweating, and yet men's bundles he is getting, he rakes the greenbacks in. One man has got the trick of selling; he needs to do no frantic yelling to gather in the plunk; he just leans back, his system sunning, and all the people come a-running, to buy his blooming junk. The other fellow strives and labors to sell good plunder to his neighbors, and never gets the kale; no scraps of business can be rake up; there's something lacking in his make-up, he cannot make a sale.

WALT MASON.

[Birmingham Age-Herald:] "The lovely defendant says she shot in self-defense." "But she further avers that the man she killed had never raised his hand against her. "True, but something told her that he might do that any day."

Con Cuchillo.

CHILE CON CARNAGE.

BEING THE PARTICULAR PEPPER IN SOME PERSONAL OPINIONS

Of Don yo de Chiltepin.

Talleyrand and Fouche may fight it out, over Yonder, as to which really did say first: "A Crime? Worse, it was a Blunder!" Whichever the author, the epigram is an immortal tenet of statecraft. No nation can be a criminal—as Burke said: "You cannot indict a People." But any nation that feels that way can be a blithering Blunderer. And the surest bait the Fool-catcher can dangle for suckers is a Blue Funk. Even brave people will swallow that, sometimes; and when they do, good-by to sanity and sense.

The worst blunder we made in all our Revolutionary war was to hang Major Andre, the British Spy. He was a gentleman and a hero every inch. If he were back in the flesh, there isn't an American girl but could give him her heart, nor American mother but would "Bless you, my children." If we had just put him in the calaboose, like a common disturber of the peace, until after Lord Cornwallis had passed his tin sword, handle first, to a Virginia farmer whose initials were Father of his Country—it would have been much better all around.

But we were young and few and "worked up;" and nervous about the overwhelming odds sent against us by the only George of England that ever did have starch enough in his neck to hold a king's head up against the world and his ministers. And so we hanged Andre. And as a result he figures in the heart of our Revolutionary Romance as a Hero among our very own.

But England seems always to have had this deadly seriousness, and not to be recovering even yet unto the blessed convalescence of a Sense of Humor. The history of her throne is an endless chain of prisons, scaffolds and the Block—for kings, queens, pretenders, rivals, statesmen, Cavaliers. In fact, "Alice in Blunderland," has it down pat—and by an Englishman, Lewis Carroll. "The Queen," you remember, when anyone sneezed, yawned or looked aside, would scream: "Off with his head!"

To this day, Great Britain seems to have learned no other way of dealing with anyone ahead of her conservative creep. Yet really she could have made far better use of Mary of the Scots, and Walter Raleigh and Robert Emmet and a thousand more, than to murder them under (aniline) color of law.

If "Good" Queen Bess had taken her lover by the ear and said to him: "Walter, you let these other cats alone, or I'll take your Purse! They may discommode me as to face and figure; but kindly remember that I am the Keeper of the Axe!" (And Elizabeth often spoke more indelicately.) Why, the chances are that the Princely Pirate of the South Seas would have kept that handsome curly head comfortably next to those sturdy shoulders instead of having it tumbled into a basket of sawdust. There might even have been a change in the succession and one of Raleigh blood might have sat upon the throne which is no stranger to bastards.

Why is it that even a slow-witted folk like the British will never learn that you cannot squelch a people by hanging their heroes? That "the Blood of the Martyrs is the Seed of the Church"—as the apostles knew and said eighteen centuries ago? That you cannot make a patriot a criminal by treating him as one? That the surest way to make a minority strong is to Persecute it?

Is anyone fool enough to fancy that 100,000 men would march and sing in Unison "John Brown's Body"—as I heard them in Philadelphia in 1876, and the very buildings quavered to that incomparable chorus—do you think they would have sung for John Brown if he hadn't been martyred? Would the world thrill to Joan of Arc if she had been sent not to the stake but to the asylum?

Nay! Is it conceivable that the civilized world would today look up as it does to the Carpenter of Nazareth if Pontius Pilate instead of crucifying Him had remanded Him to a home for the Feeble-Minded? Of course not! Else God didn't know His Business—for the Cross was ordained to be, as it still is, the master key to the sympathy of mankind.

No, if you would kill a man's influence, don't kill the man. Laugh at him, pity him, caricature him, tap your forehead at mention of his name, even shut him up as an imbecile or a madman. Nast's cartoons did more to break Boss Tweed than all the deadly serious thunders of the Righteous. It was not editorials or sermons that beat Blaine for the presidency, but Keppler's caricatures of "the Tattooed Man."

That Roger Casement was a patriot, no sane man questions. That he was boyishly impulsive, mistaken and impractical as Emmet or Wolf Tone or our own beloved John Boyle O'Reilly, Fenian, is as obvious. But he gave his life for his Cause. He lived a knight, and died one; and his speech before the unimaginative high court of England will live wherever else men have imagination. Too bad England was so scared—even of his bones! But the very quicklime that ate those bones means more Sir Rogers. Martyrs beget their kind, even after death. Casement is a greater danger to England today than if she had let him run foot loose as a wilful child.

God send the flustered old country a Sense of Humor!

Wilson and His Promises.

[Omaha Bee:] Of course President Wilson has a perfect right to change his mind as often as he pleases, but that is quite different from repudiating distinct promises made to get votes. If the pledges on which he rode into the White House have proved worthless because he changed his mind, what faith is to be put in the pledges he is now making in his appeal for re-election?

SEATTLE CRITICS SPLIT ON DRY LAW'S EFFECTS.

Article in "The Times" Rouses Controversy in Puget Sound City and Evokes Violently Contradictory Statements as to What Prohibition Really has Done—What Factions Have to Say.

SHARP controversy has followed the appearance, in The Times of July 30, of an article that related to conditions in Seattle since the advent of prohibition there. That article was written by a thoroughly experienced and capable journalist of the northern city and was published as he wrote it. It has evoked criticism and also commendation, by telegram and letter from Seattle, the whole correspondence embracing a mass of documents formidable in bulk and violently contradictory in statement. In the interest of absolute fairness, the two sides to the controversy, as presented by their Seattle champions, are given herewith.

The article that appeared in The Times was to the effect that business in Seattle had suffered because of prohibition and business men of the northwestern city privately said panic would have ensued there but for the return to normal of the great lumber industry; that realty values went down, rents dropped, taxes rose, new capital was timid, and the tourist traffic had slackened, and to offset the business loss, there has been no moral gain—that the prohibition law does not prohibit, as Seattle merely drinks a cheaper and more harmful brand of intoxicants, sold for the most part by drug stores and professional bootleggers.

THE "DRY" VIEW.

This caused the controversy. The prohibition side thereof is championed by C. B. Blethen, editor of the Seattle Times, who characterizes the article as "false as a whole and false in every particular." In reply to it he cites matter that appeared in his own paper of May 21, written in answer to a published letter of the Missouri Liquor Dealers' Association. Mr. Blethen takes the ground that drunkenness has decreased to a marked extent in Seattle since the advent of prohibition; that the drug-store evil has been misrepresented and that business has not suffered, but has made forward strides.

Of the amount of drunkenness his article says:

"In March, 1915, only such 'drunks' were recorded on the police blotter as caused disturbances warranting trial and punishment. Every man discovered by the police under the influence of liquor in March, 1916, was arrested and recorded on the police blotter for punishment, and the old habit of letting more than one-half of the total number of 'drunks' taken in, out of jail on sobering up the next day having been abandoned.

"The total arrests for crimes, growing out of the sale of liquor as recorded on the police blotter, were for March, 1915, 1679, for March, 1916, 1088. From the 1916 arrests should be deducted, to secure the correct point of view, forty-nine arrests of liquor people for violations of the dry law. This leaves March only 1039 arrests upon which a comparison can be based. If then we add only 300 arrests for drunkenness in March, 1915, which did not get to the police blotter, then the total for March, 1915, is raised to 1979. March of this year was then marked by almost 1000 fewer arrests than March, 1915, under the wet law. In the first three months of 1915, 5265 persons were taken to the City Jail as a result of misuse of liquor. In the same period in 1916 under the dry law, and including the violations of that law by the liquor people themselves, only 2554 arrests were made, but these figures do not take into consideration at least 1000 persons arrested in the three-month period of 1915, whose names did not get to the police blotter."

ABOUT "HOME DRINKERS."

Mr. Blethen, in this answer, admits the correctness of figures quoted by the Missouri Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association to prove "home-drinking is on the increase" in Seattle. These statistics are taken from the official records of permits issued for the importation of liquors—2117 of them in January, this year, 4269 in February and 6250 in March.

But, says Mr. Blethen, "the figures relative to the number of permits . . . are used by the liquor dealers to draw a false inference. It was natural that the number of permits under a law permitting the importation of liquor should increase as private supplies holding over from the wet period ran out."

Continuing his answer, he says:

"The fourth paragraph speaks of an increase in the number of drug stores. It is perfectly true that this did occur, but the liquor dealers failed to state that the most of these drug stores were started up by ex-saloonkeepers, who hoped thereby to beat the law. Nor does the Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association tell you that several score of arrests have been made among these new drug stores, and that latterly, many of them have been completely wrecked by raiding squads as summary punishment."

BUSINESS CONDITIONS.

Under the caption, "Business has Increased," he says:

"Now, instead of suffering greatly financially, Seattle in bank clearings, bank deposits and volume of business of every kind, excepting the handling of liquor, has vastly increased since the coming of the dry regime, January 1, of this year. I am not attempting to say that the dry law caused these things. I am merely stating it has happened.

"No stores whatever have been vacated as a result of the dry law. Somewhat more than 300 saloons were closed and all but a very few of the locations occupied by these have since been occupied by entirely new business houses. Naturally the rent which a shoe store, a candy store or a specialty shop can pay in an old saloon location is less than could be afforded by the displaced bar. No other rentals in Seattle were reduced by the disappearance of the saloons. In fact there are many instances of increases in rentals of business locations and on the main retail street of Seattle, within the last few weeks, the highest price ever paid for business real estate was recorded on the purchase of one lot by a dry goods house."

Mr. Blethen also gives out the following summary of figures recently published in his paper:

"New savings accounts opened in Seattle since January 1, 7165.

"Gain in bank deposits, first four months 1915, $2,236,259.

"Gain in bank deposits, first four months 1916, $5,694,858.

"Net increase in aggregate of savings deposits, first six months of 1916, as compared with same period of 1915, $650,000.

"Increase in bank clearings over 1915, $53,851,865.

"Suicides and murders have decreased one-half.

"Collections have wonderfully improved, being called by certain authorities 50 per cent. better than 1915.

"Real estate transfers have increased and prices paid are higher."

OPPOSITE SIDE OF IT.

The other side of this controversy is represented by a number of Seattle residents who have declared the article published in The Times is a true representation of conditions, though the qualification is sometimes made that matters are even worse than set forth in The Times.

Among these correspondents is E. F. Sweeney, Hotel Butler, Seattle, who writes: "Seattle is in a more deplorable and worse condition than mentioned in your last Sunday's edition." He adds: "I am a large taxpayer and an old citizen here and one of the trustees of the Chamber of Commerce and a trustee of the National Bank of Commerce of this city, and, therefore, am interested in the welfare and uplift of our city."

DRINKING STATISTICS.

To support his case Mr. Sweeney cites, among other things, headlines and extracts from Seattle newspapers. Here are a few bearing on the question of the prevalence of drunkenness:

"Arrests, April, 1915, for drunkenness, when saloons were running, average, twelve per day; Saturday, April 8, last, twenty-three were arrested and booked for drunkenness." (Identified as a statement from police headquarters.)

"Records at police headquarters for March, 1915, showed 368 arrests for drunkenness.

"During March, 1916 (under so-called prohibition) there were 331 drunken persons arrested on the streets of Seattle, including boys under 21 years of age.

"What do the well-meaning mothers of Washington who voted for prohibition in the belief that it would "save the boys" and remove them from temptation, think of these figures?

"Will they consent to the continuance of a condition which makes these things possible or do they prefer a regulation of the traffic that will exclude their boys from places where liquor is sold? Under present conditions the police are powerless to prevent—under rational regulation bootleggers and blind-piggers would have no opportunity to dispense it." (From a statement of the Washington State Hotel Association, printed as such in the Seattle Sunday Times, April 9, 1916.)

"All records for drunkenness arrests this year were shattered over Saturday night and Sunday, sixty-one drunks faced Judge Gordon Monday morning and were fined from $10 to $25 each. The highest previous number of arrests for intoxication in one day was forty-two." (Seattle Star, May 8, 1916.

"One-third of the persons arrested in April were for drunkenness." (Seattle Star, May 6, 1916.)

"DOES NOT PROHIBIT."

As to the effectiveness of the prohibition law:

The newspapers published a statement made at a Municipal League luncheon, April 25, by Alfred E. Lundin, the prosecuting attorney at Seattle and regarded as an out-and-out "dry." Mr. Lundin is quoted as saying: "Prohibition does not prohibit." And again: "Juries do not convict bootleggers; hence, there is no co-operation by the people." He recommended the formation of a vigilance committee.

Mr. Sweeney, commenting on general business conditions, makes the point that the business effects of prohibition have not been in part offset only by the revival in the lumber trade. The shipbuilding industry has gone ahead there, as elsewhere, with $11,000,000 in contracts in the shipyards at one time, and the imports and exports have shown large gains, due to general commercial conditions. These gains for the first three months of this year were $37,100,150 over the figures of the corresponding months last year. All this business, incidental to war-made changes affecting the whole country and the world, has helped gloss over the real workings of prohibition on Seattle's commercial life, it is declared.

ILLICIT GAINS.

Of the drug-store evil the Washington State Hotel Association's statement, published in the Seattle Times, says:

"It is a matter of common knowledge that since January 1 a certain class of drug stores in Seattle and other cities throughout Washington are open both day and night—blind pigs and bootleggers are conservatively estimated to have sold double the amount which was lawfully imported into the State. In other words, Seattle inherits all of the evils but retains none of the revenues under the workings of the present prohibition measure."

There is also a protest raised against the tactics of the Seattle authorities in enforcing the dry law. Mr. Sweeney cites some instances of destruction of property, "without any decree of law or order of court," incidental to liquor raids, and cites this from the Seattle Post-Intelligencer of March 14, 1916:

"The home of Rabbi Benjamin Cohen, of the Bellingham Jewish Synagogue, was raided by the police for having some wine in his home; he admitted he had, and stated it was for sacramental purposes (being orthodox.)"

Editor Los Angeles Times.

Dear Sir: I want to thank you for the article in your paper of July 30 on the so-called prohibition law of Seattle. You were right, only things were not represented as half so bad as they are. There was no truth in the Seattle Times article which answered you. I hope you will keep up the fight and hope no such curse will fall on the beautiful State of California.

Editor Los Angeles Times.

Dear Sir: A few days ago I noticed in the Seattle Daily Times an article on prohibition, which the Seattle Times claims was published in your columns. The Seattle Times wants to contradict you. I myself agree with you on everything that you published about this city. As I have been a saloonman I know what I am talking about. If you would send one of your reporters to see me I could give him a story that could easily be entitled "Seattle's Chief of Police Leads Band of Burglars." I have been one of the unfortunate ones and have had my place wrecked by the dry squad. I could give you a good account of everything. I have twenty witnesses to back up everything I say, and anything that I say I will swear to before a notary public.

You people of Los Angeles have no idea of what is going on in this city. I sincerely hope that the city of Los Angeles will never be in such a position as Seattle now is.

BLAMES OFFICIALS.

SEATTLE, Aug. 9, 1916.
To the Editor of the Los Angeles Times.

I was reading in the Seattle Times of August 4 about "Los Angeles Paper Shedding Tears Over Seattle," in regard to the dry law.

Well, I have lived in Seattle over ten years and I have not seen any prosperity yet, and prohibition has about finished the place. We have all the troubles that come with the dry law. Seattle is a fine city, but we have not the right people in office. We have more preachers and reformers, talking politics and siding in with a Mayor who is nothing more in the estimation of many people than an I.W.W. destroying property. This will not stop drinking. I think the State that cannot regulate the liquor question is a weakling, and sooner or later will fail.

Everywhere you go in the city of Seattle today you see the sign, "For Rent." Any person seeing so many signs can come to one conclusion—that something is wrong.

Tourists are not very many this year and they make connections so closely that Seattle does not see them. Many go by way of Vancouver to Alaska and return home by way of Canada.

It would pay you to visit Seattle and see the empty stores. On First avenue I think everyone is selling out. Second avenue has plenty, too; plenty of offices to rent, also, and houses. You get tired of counting them.

Thousands of people have left Seattle; had to leave; could not get any work, as the work was taken from them. Times are dull and taxes are awful. I know, as I own property. I have advised many of my friends in the East not to think of coming to Seattle at the present time. Seattle is a big blow town, and the drinking is going on just the same. Prohibition is a farce, and I hope the people of California will keep their minds and will not bring poverty on their heads and have to go to another State to make a living. I know as soon as I can sell what I have I will go back to Detroit. Warn the people!

Goya's painting of Queen Maria Louisa of Parma,

FORTUNE IN SPAIN'S OLD MASTERS ON EXHIBITION.

ONE MILLION and a half dollars' worth of old Spanish masters from the Ehrich galleries in New York were placed on exhibition yesterday by the Spanish Art Society at the Riverside Mission Inn, under the direction of Mrs. Miguel Estudillo, president of that organization.

This is the first time that such a collection of masters has been shown west of New York City, and was sent to Southern California, as this district is rapidly becoming known as an art center of the United States, particularly since such men as Hovsep Pushman and Richard Miller have made Southern California their headquarters.

The present exhibition is regarded as important because, while many people are fairly well acquainted with some of the fruits of Spain's artistic genius as found in public and private galleries in Europe and the United States, a vast number of art students have never seen with their own eyes the original works of the great Spanish painters of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

One of the principal pictures in the collection is Francisco Jose de Goya y Lucientes's painting of Queen Maria Louisa of Parma, which is insured for $45,000. Maria Louisa was born at Vienna and was one of the descendants of the great Austrian house of Hapsburg, which dominated the Spanish throne for four centuries. The predominant feature of this family is the heavy underlip, which is plainly seen in this portrait of the famous queen. Though Goya found it impossible to flatter the features of this woman, he amply made up for it in the treatment of his draperies and gorgeous lace appointments.

The exhibition will continue for two months and was opened last night by a dinner and ball at the Mission Inn.

ANTI-"DRY" SONG.

San Diego Woman Dedicates Verses to California Prosperity League to be Sung in Campaign Against the Prohibition Amendments.

A campaign song to be used by the California Prosperity League and its many friends in combatting the attack of the "drys" has just been written by Mrs. Lucy Long of San Diego. The song, entitled "God Save Our Fruitful State," is to be sung to the tune of "America." The title page is to display a picture of growing grapes. The words follow:

Vote for each vineyard's fame
Enchanting valley's claim,
  With sovereign power.
Confound "dry" politics,
Frustrate their selfish kicks,
Vote down such knavish tricks,
  God save the State.

Should hostile votes ensnare,
Danger to millions care,
  Show freedom's right.
Proclaim sweet liberty,
Sing voice of loyalty,
Help wage from poverty,
  God save the State.

Amend the weaker band,
By kindly strength of hand,
  In faithful trust.
Creator's law fulfill,
That wine all lands distill,
Vote heart and soul at will,
  God save the State.

HOW PROHIBITION FAILS TO PROHIBIT IN IDAHO

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POCATELLO (Idaho) Aug. 16.—That prohibition does not prohibit is conclusively shown, so far as the experience of this city is concerned. Pocatello is a "dry" town, technically, and was "dry" long before Statewide prohibition was voted in last year. But if a town's "dryness" or "wetness" is to be judged by the quantity of bad red liquor sold within its confines then Pocatello will qualify as a very "wet" town. It remained "wet" under local option, and though Statewide prohibition carried by a comfortable majority in Idaho, Pocatello is still "wet."

In witness whereof the police court records of Pocatello, which is a railroad town of some 16,000 population, have for several months during the past year shown that there are more cases of "drunks" registered on the police blotter than in the city of Salt Lake, which has a population of 125,000.

Bootlegging is one of the principal occupations of the residents of the so-called Greek colony, and thousands of cases of exceedingly bad whisky are monthly imported and disposed of at exorbitant prices, ranging from $1.50 to $3 per pint, depending on the degree of thirst exhibited by the purchaser.

The cost to the city and county for policing the district is entirely out of proportion to the population of the community, and the traffic

Politics.

BOOTH WILL RENEW HIS CAMPAIGNING IN SOUTH.

Only Republican Candidate for United States Senator is Due Here Tomorrow—Will be Accorded Reception at Luncheon of the Woman's City Club and Later Speak at Beach Towns.

RETURNING tomorrow morning from a speech-making tour of the coast cities between here and San Francisco, Willis H. Booth, the only Republican candidate for United States Senator, will immediately renew his vigorous campaign in the south. He will meet Charles Evans Hughes at Shrine Auditorium and hear him speak, after which he will go to Bakersfield.

Elaborate arrangements are being made to give Mr. Booth a splendid reception at the regular luncheon of the Woman's City Club tomorrow noon at Blanchard Hall. Mrs. Clarence von Graham, first vice-president of the Woman's City Club, will preside.

Mr. Booth, who is a staunch supporter of national equal suffrage, has made a good impression among the representative women of the State and a large crowd is expected to hear him tomorrow.

Following the luncheon, Mr. Booth will be escorted by a score or more of automobiles of the Business Men's Booth Club to Wilmington, San Pedro, Redondo Beach, Hermosa Beach and El Segundo. An itinerary has been so arranged that Mr. Booth will make a short speech at each of these places. The business men of the various towns have made arrangements to accord Mr. Booth a grand reception upon his arrival in each of the towns. The escort of Mr. Booth will be accompanied by a fife-and-drum corps.

GIVEN WIDE SUPPORT.

Reports received here during the past week by the Business Men's Booth Club, from the hundreds of business men's and women's organizations throughout the southern part of the State that are supporting Mr. Booth, indicate that he has almost the solid backing of the business men and women.

"Not only are the big business men supporting Mr. Booth, but the men and women with small businesses and capital are supporting him," declared F. B. McComas, president of the Business Men's Booth-for-Senator Club. "They are urging Mr. Booth's nomination and election solely upon the ground that he is a business man, keen and wideawake to the legislative needs of California; has never held public office, and is not a professional politician.

"He has made a thorough study of the commercial situation in China and the Orient; he has studied the trade conditions in South America and the economic conditions in Europe; he has fought for California's best interest at every recent session of Congress and will, if elected, make an ideal representative in the national Senate."

LONG BEACH MEETING.

One of the biggest meetings during the last days of the campaign in the interest of Mr. Booth will be held at the Long Beach Auditorium next Friday evening. Mr. Booth, who will be the principal speaker and guest of honor will be escorted to Long Beach from Los Angeles by a dozen automobiles filled with representative business men.

Mrs. Jefferson D. Gibbs, No. 357 South Occidental boulevard, will give a reception Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in honor of Mr. Booth. At 2:30 o'clock the same afternoon, Mrs. F. P. Otis will give a lawn party at her residence, No. 2421 Folsom street. Mrs. R. W. Richardson, president of the Woman's Republican League of Los Angeles County, and Attorney Frank Belcher will be the speakers.

Indorsements for Prince.

George W. Prince, a Republican candidate for Congress in the Tenth District, is meeting encouragement everywhere, according to those interested in his campaign. He is making from two to six speeches daily and is rapidly gaining formidable strength. He has communicated with the 1500 members of the Illinois State Society and many of them are working night and day for him. Other strong organizations have indorsed him. He is standing upon his record of eighteen years in Congress, during which he served on the most important committees of the lower House. His friends believe he would be able to do many big things for California. In a speech made last night Mr. Prince said:

"If I am elected to Congress, the first step I will take, aside from work for a tariff that will protect our products and the dinner pail of our workingmen, will be to secure a reorganization for the plan of training the State Naval Militia. I believe that the best plan of training State Naval Militiamen is to give them the actual practice alongside of the regulars. I believe it is better for the men and better for others they would train later if they could be sent in detachments to serve for thirty days aboard the battleships on target practice in these waters. If every battleship or gunboat that pulled out of Los Angeles Harbor for target practice carried a detachment of the California Naval Militia we would soon have a reserve that would be the equal of any in the world."

Unterrified Ones Busy.

The first of a series of Woodrow Wilson Democratic clubs designed to cover Los Angeles county was organized Friday at Pomona. K. K. Fritz was elected president.

William H. Joyce will retire from the chairmanship of the Democratic County Central Committee immediately after the primary election, when the new committee will be selected. W. M. Humphries and Ben Grove have both been suggested to succeed Mr. Joyce, but Mr. Grove has become so fond of the duties of secretary, his present office, the higher place has no attraction for him, and he probably will ask the leaders of the unterrified to leave him in that office.

POLITICS

The American Game.

THE WATCHMAN.

TREND OF CURRENT POLITICAL THOUGHT AND ACTION.

Gov. Johnson and his unscrupulous machine received another solar plexus Friday when the Supreme Court ruled that the name of Walter Bordwell shall not appear on the ballot as a candidate for United States Senator. The decision was a terrific blow to the publicity organs of the administration, too. They shot fun and severe criticism at County Counsel Hill when he made the announcement that it is the prerogative of a candidate to decide whether his name shall appear on a ballot. His judgment must have been based on a correct conception of the law when the highest tribunal of the State after mature deliberation sustained his opinion.

What the Johnsonites wanted, of course, was to confuse the voters. They are eternally ranting about their wish to give the people a fair deal and arrange political affairs so the people can rule but their frantic efforts to deceive them in this instance, is proof enough of their devilish inconsistency. It is well known that many voters go to the polls without having studied the relative merits of candidates and too frequently vote for the first name they see. The Johnson gang, realizing that Bordwell's name would head the Senatorial ticket, gleefully anticipated that a substantial number of regular Republicans would cast their votes for him, thereby diminishing the vote that belongs to Willis H. Booth. They had no fear of the same rule being applied to the cocksure Progressive candidate, who, though registered as a Bull Mooser, is running on the Republican ticket. He has sent the word down the line to his henchmen that his defeat means the cutting off of their bread and butter and they have made it a point to disseminate the instructions. So naturally the followers of High Ram will see no name but his. Now that the Supreme Court has eliminated all chance of confusion, Mr. Booth will unquestionably have the support of all true Republicans and Johnson will be buried under a landslide of Republican votes.

Word comes from the North that a couple of county clerks who are holding their jobs through the influence of Johnson are going to ignore the ruling of the Supreme Court and print Bordwell's name on the ballot despite the warning against it. Such an attitude is to be expected by men who obey the mandates of the Governor. They have no regard for the law and nothing is too reprehensible for them to do if they can get away with it. This is one time it can not be put over. Let them rant and threaten. The name will not be printed on the official ballots and all they say and do cannot save Hire'em at the election.

Not satisfied with the machine that has been built through ingenious disbursement of State funds, the Johnsonites now are attempting to use election officials, who have been appointed to serve at the polls on the 29th inst. Many of these officials have been named through the efforts of Supervisor Snorton, who, of course, took care to see that they are "right." During the past week they have received letters demanding that they report to headquarters. Upon their arrival they have been informed that "you are expected to get out in your district and work for the Johnson ticket." One woman, who had the temerity to ask if she would be paid for her services, declares she was asked, "Aren't you satisfied with the money you will get for your services at the polls?" When she said she was not she was warned that "you had better get busy or we will have another officer in your place next time." Another proof of the depth to which a renegade will stoop to get votes and another reason the people will grasp the opportunity to get Californio from the clutches of this mendacious machine.

Reams of literature are being sent through the mails from the Johnson forces. Pathetic appeals are being made to secure support for the Progressive candidate and much is said of his six years of mis-rule. Not once is he referred to as the Republican candidate. Not one word is said of his Republicanism. This omission is not surprising to the people who know Johnson—and thank the good Lord about all of them are next to him by this time. However, the literature says just as little about his Progressive affiliation and the reason is obvious. He intends that the issue should be clouded, and simply begs that you vote for him regardless of his politics. There is no middle ground in the United State Senate. There is the Republican wing and the Democratic wing. Progressives will be like fish out of water, and Californians, who need the Republican party a great deal more than it needs California, may be depended upon to see that Willis H. Booth, the only Republican candidate, shall be their representative in Washington.

The situation in the Tenth Congress District is changing. Stanley Benedict, the Earl-Lissner renegade, who tried to beat W. D. Stephens to the chair of Lieutenant-Governor and failed, is hopelessly lost. He is admitting it and so are his friends. One of them said yesterday that Benedict is frowned upon by the men who would have supported Stephens and he does not know which way to turn for succor. With him eliminated, the fight is between George W. Prince and Capt. H. Z. Osborne, both Republicans. During the past ten days Mr. Prince has developed surprising strength. It is the opinion of election experts that the total Republican vote in the district will not exceed 40,000 and will be nearer 35,000. They say the man who receives 15,000 votes will win by a handsome majority. Friends of Mr. Prince declare he will get approximately 20,000 votes. Friends of Capt. Osborne are enthusiastic over his chance and are predicting that he will head the ticket. Arguments advanced by the Prince supporters are based largely upon his eighteen years' service in Congress and that he will be well fitted to secure appointments to important committees immediately upon his arrival in Washington. Capt. Osborne's strength lies with his long acquaintance, having many personal followers.

The race in the Ninth Congress District is admittedly between E. D. Hahn of Pasadena and L. L. Lostutter of Pomona. C. H. Randall, the incumbent, is not expected to draw support from the Republican party, his main strength resting with the Prohibitionists. Messrs. Hahn and Lostutter are good Republicans and have many friends in all parties. Both are waging an active campaign, but the Pomona man appears to be making the best headway. He has demonstrated several times his exceptional ability in getting votes and his ardent supporters say it is only fair that the honor be bestowed upon a candidate from the Pomona-Long Beach district. Pasadena has furnished the Congressman for fourteen years and Lostutter's district is getting jealous.

When the word reached California that Chesty Rowell had been appointed a member of the National Republican Campaign Committee, Republicans threw up their hands in horror. They did not know what sort of misrepresentations had been made to the national committee to get him there. They did know that he would be like a bull in a china shop, however, and his actions during the past week were the natural course for him to pursue. He went far out of his way to get the patient ear of Charles Evans Hughes and then unfolded to the standard bearer an awful tale of woe. It was like pouring water on a duck's back. Mr. Hughes listened respectfully, but said nothing. This hurt Chesty. He said so. He expected Mr. Hughes to plead with him. But Mr. Hughes kept his silence and the Fresno ranter went back to Johnson with the report that the Republican candidate is a Republican and would not compromise himself or his party to further the interests of Hire'm.

Francisco Working Hard.

A. W. Francisco, a Republican candidate for State Senator in the Thirty-seventh District, declares he is making a thorough campaign and is being cordially received everywhere. He is making a number of speeches every day. A campaign committee comprising 100 prominent citizens of his district has taken up the fight in his behalf and much enthusiasm is being shown for him.

Home Town for Him.

Charles Kerr, Republican candidate for the Assembly in the Seventy-fifth District, stands as well in his home town as he does here. The following nice paragraph appeared in the Register of San Jacinto, where Mr. Kerr spent many years of his early life: We are quite sure that we voice the sentiment of all his old-time friends and a host of new ones which he has made during his recent visits with us, in wishing Charley a "walkover" for the nomination, and the same success in the general election in November.

These are sad days at the Chaplin studio. The cleverest of all Charlie's imitators, and the one nearest the comedian's own heart, is on the sick list, and all because he was trying to imitate some of Chaplin's new trick steps.

This is Billy, the gray goat, who cavorts gaily about the studio, and who has been the graveyard of many a venturesome golf ball knocked about the vacant lots in the neighborhood of the studio in recreation hours by Chaplin and his assistants.

Billy fell into a set yesterday while doing a Chaplin slide to get away from the studio bull pup, and broke his hind leg. First aid was administered by Tom Harrington, Chaplin's secretary, and later treatment by a neighboring veterinarian.

Billy is now recovering nicely, but has given up his aspirations as a screen star temporarily.

Riches of the Land.

WAR HAS NOT DEPLETED CALIFORNIA OF HORSES.

Number in State Little Changed After Drain of Two Years for European Service—Agricultural Board Reports Higher Prices for Products of the Soil, Which More than Makes up for Shorter Crops.

THE statistical report of the California State Board of Agriculture, just issued, shows that, despite the constant drain on the State's supply of draught and saddle horses, occasioned by the European war, the number reported on the farms and ranges within the State remains practically the same as before the war.

In 1914 the number reported was 503,000, while the present figures show 493,000. The average value of the horses in the State is given at $108, or a total value of $53,444,000.

The decline in the number of mules is also very slight. There were 74,000 in 1914 and 70,000 reported in 1915. The average value per head fell off from $120 to $110, a condition which is hard to account for as the market for mules has been strong the last two years.

Cattle increased from 1,480,000 to 1,554,000, but the average price declined from $39.30 to $36.30. The largest falling off of any class of farm animal was in that of sheep, a loss of 50,000, in face of the fact that the number exported in 1915 was only 40,000, as against 78,000 the previous year. The only satisfactory explanation is that the heavy demand for mutton and the resultant high price has caused sheep men to send their animals to market rather than hold them for the wool cut, and this, too, despite the high price of wool.

HIGHER PRICES.

In the matter of crops there is a slight decline in gross production, but better prices have prevailed in the main. Barley, a crop in which California usually leads, showed a falling off that enabled North Dakota and Minnesota to outstrip this State.

The acreage in barley decreased from 1,402,000 in 1914 to 1,360,000 in 1915, and the production fell one bushel per acre, but the price more than compensated for the loss, as 62 cents was secured in 1915 as against 59 cents in 1914. Corn showed a slight increase in acreage and a considerable increase in the number of bushels per acre produced, being an average of five bushels, while the price was 88 cents as against 87 cents the previous year. The production of winter wheat shows a considerable increase in both acreage and volume, but the number of bushels to the acre declined from seventeen to sixteen and the price from $1.04 to 95 cents, leaving the value of the crop about stationary.

There was a falling off in hay in acreage, average production per acre and in the total produced, but higher prices evened up the score, as the average price per ton at the farm was $11.20 in 1915 as against $8.20 in 1914.

RICE A STABLE CROP.

A coincidence occurs in the figures concerning the production of rice. This industry is making rapid progress and the quality of the product is staple. The peculiar fact develops that there were 16,000 acres of rice in 1914, which produced 444,000 sacks, and 32,000 acres in 1915 produced exactly double that number, or 888,000 sacks.

The production of sugar beets increases apace and the price continues to increase.

Turkish tobacco, while as yet in its infancy as a California product, and while the growers have been much discouraged by the poor price their crop has so far brought, is a crop of much promise. Great hopes are entertained for a carload recently shipped to Australia, as an experiment, which should it prove satisfactory to the antipodean manufacturers would at once create a market that would foster and develop the industry.

The olive growers are not overly prosperous, as the price received for their fruit has declined steadily, though the production of oil and the market has increased.

FRUIT AND RAISINS.

Citrus men have done well, the increased demand for lemons having more than compensated for the loss on oranges. The raisin crop, however, has beaten all previous records in the amount produced and the price received.

An interesting fact in connection with the present political situation is that should California go dry, the rest of the United States would be hard put for sweet wine, for of the 17,168,000 gallons produced in this country California vineyards raise the grapes and California wineries press and bottle 16,868,000 gallons.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS.

LOCAL RIVERS' HISTORY RECORD OF DESTRUCTION

Government records show that from the time of the occupation of California by the Spaniards until 1867 the San Gabriel River ebptied into San Pedro Bay, occupying in its lower course about the same channel as the Los Angeles River now occupies. In the winter of 1867-68, at a point near Potrero Chico, where the channel swerved sharply to the west, the river broke out to the south and formed a new channel which carried virtually the entire flow of the river into Alamitos Bay. The new channel was called New River, but is now commonly called the San Gabriel.

In the early '70s a ditch heading below Duarte broke out and the ditch became what is now known as Lexington wash, and a large portion of the flow of the San Gabriel River was diverted into its former channel, now Los Angeles River. In 1884 the Santa Fe Railroad Company built diversion works to confine the flow to the easterly (new river) channel, but in 1891, during a high flow, the water again broke into the Lexington wash and since that time the Lexington wash and its continuation, the Rio Hondo, have been carrying a large but varying portion of the flow of the San Gabriel.

The flood of February, 1914, deposited in the harbors about 4,000,000 cubic yards of silt. The channel owned by the Consolidated Lumber Company was shoaled about eighteen feet for its full length. Its usefulness was entirely destroyed and its large commerce has had to find accommodation elsewhere in the harbor at an increased cost. The government channel in the east basin, 200 feet wide at bottom and twenty feet deep, was filled to a depth almost as great, leaving a depth available for navigation of from two to four feet. The channel leading from the east basin to the turning basin was also badly shoaled.

The turning basin, just completed to a depth of thirty-one feet, was badly shoaled, the deposit varying from about ten feet in thickn extend about six and a half miles.

If the shorter route should be taken the volume of excavation necessary would increase sharply for approximately a mile and a half and then drop off gradually in the next half-mile until the diverted waters would flow out onto the lowlands and be restrained by levees for about two and a half miles, when another cut would be necessary to conduct the water across the ridge near the intersection of Anaheim road and Nimeno street, Long Beach. This latter cut would be approximately three-quarters of a mile in length, with an average excavation of seven feet. From the end of this proposed cut it is about one and three-quarters miles to the ocean. Restraining levees would be built for that distance.

CLASH OVER A JOB.

Police Judge Dislikes Failure of Civil Service Commission to Certify Applicant; Gives out Another Berth to Disappointed One.

Resenting the action of the Civil Service Commission in refusing to certify Thomas V. King to the Chief of Police for appointment as probation officer in the City Police Court, Presiding Police Judge White yesterday advised the City Council he had appointed Mr. King an extra bailiff. He also will ask the Chief of Police not to make any appointment to the position of probation officer, as he expects the Civil Service Commission will see fit to transfer the appropriation made for the payment of that officer to the credit of the department of the presiding judge of the Police Court, said fund to be utilized in paying Mr. King's salary as extra bailiff.

Police Judge White says Mr. King took the examination last January and was rated third on the eligible list. Only two names were certified by the commission for the appointment, although under the charter, three could have been. The commission was asked to certify the third name, but refused.

Thus, says Judge White, a man with eighteen months' experience, who had been found efficient and successful, was ruled out and the police judges would have to break in a new man.

Mr. Brown proved that blasting pays

This shows part of the 18-year-old orchard of George W. Brown of Mount Cory. Trees at left were planted in ordinary dug holes; those at right in blasted beds.

The trees in blasted beds now average 25 feet high with trunk girths of 42 inches. Those not in blasted soil average 18 feet high, with trunk girths of 27 inches.

Plant your fruit trees in beds blasted with and you will find, as Experiment Stations have found, that "trees planted in blasted holes develop deeper and stronger root systems than trees planted in spade-dug holes," and will bear earlier and yield larger crops.

The two Giant Farm Powders are made especially to suit western farm conditions. They pulverize the soil instead of packing it. Ask your dealer for either of them—Giant Stumping Powder or Eureka Stumping Powder—and for other Giant blasting supplies. Be sure to get the genuine. If your dealer has only ordinary dynamites, we will see that you are supplied with the real Giant Powders.

Beneath the Mask.

WITTY, WISTFUL, SERIOUS IS THE REAL CHARLIE CHAPLIN.

Drollery Replaces Splashing Pies in His Repartee and He Finds Being Funny is World's Saddest Business. Aspires to High Comedy on the Stage.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

TO INTERVIEW a man whose idea of repartee might consist in throwing a pie—who might, as a proof of his wit, offer to hurl you over a cliff—how exciting!

However, there weren't any pies around the Charlie Chaplin stage the other day. There was only a billiard-room "set" used by the comedian in his latest picture, "The Count," with its comedy furniture lying around in dejected attitudes, as if comedy were indeed a sad business.

Which, take it from Charlie Chaplin, it is—the saddest business in the world.

Charlie himself, arrayed in a natty summer suit, with a day off from work, was practicing golf strokes out on the grass plot in front of his studio, with Billie, the mascot goat of the studio, as principal hazard and sometimes caddy.

Away from the Cooper-Hewitts it's a very human, natural, lovable Charlie that greets you. A Charlie with flashes of drollery, and moments of wistfulness, too, such as you see in the pictures. A Charlie of unexpected vanities, and of equally big humilities concerning himself and his achievements. A shrewd Charlie, who is saving his money toward the time when he may do big things. And a Charlie, above all, who takes life and himself seriously, and wants you to take them seriously, too.

THANKS TO THE DOG.

Maybe it's the background of the poorhouse that makes him serious. You know, when he was a little boy Chaplin, his brother and mother were thrust into an English workhouse. If it hadn't been for the poorhouse, and certainly if it hadn't been for a certain large curly dog, maybe there never would have been anybody in the world earning $670,000 a year and the world would have been out a lot of laughs besides. It was the big curly dog of Chaplin's workhouse period that pulled Charlie out of the river one day when the embryo comedian was in bathing, and had got beyond his depth.

Chaplin's present ambition—that for which he is saving? Nothing less than appearing in high comedy on the speaking stage—comedy as high as Pinero or Shaw or Wilde.

One believes that he will achieve it, too, even though you smile at the idea that, in the very midst of a funny fall, Charlie may be delivering a Shaw epigram, or that he may be murmuring a Wilde bon mot all the while he is kicking the fat man!

"When I arrive in the morning I'm usually gloomy," said Charlie, as he led us out on the big stage, "especially when I haven't any idea of what I'm going to do in a scene, as is often the case. Tears bedew my eyes as I put on my make-up, and I weep sadly as I step out on the stage. And as for these gray hairs"—indicating those about his temple over his right ear"—I got them all the other day trying to be funny in a ballroom scene. I think any comedian who started out to be funny in a ballroom would have his career blighted at the outset."

Chaplin has his comedy "locations" down fine. It's easy to be funny in a billiard-room or a bakery, he says; a bathroom is inherently humorous; one chuckles even at thought of a taxidermist's shop; a taxicab, facetiously nicknamed "the robber's delight," is potentially funny, but a ballroom and a horse and buggy are synonymous for sighs.

FUN AND SORE FEET.

"How did I acquire my walk? Well, sore feet are always funny to me—I mean, of course, other people's. Mostly, somehow, they are owned by people with no sense of humor, or maybe a person's sense of humor is in abeyance when he has sore feet. Anyway, it was a funny little old public-house keeper in London, who habitually had sore feet and groaned over them, from whom I learned that walk."

"How about the athletic work you do, that we hear so much about?"

"No, ma'am. Don't you believe that. Why should a man exert himself needlessly that way? Don't I go to work every morning with my dinner pail, like a stevedore? Why should I swing dumbells when I have to throw people around so as to break things with them every day? Why should I wrestle, when I have to kick people for a living? And as for hanging to swinging bars, I call a chandelier my second name. I love walking. I walk in crowds, downtown, and think out my plots. People are so sad and so funny, so pathetic and so absurd. I like to frequent parks and cafeterias and other places where crowds go."

Charlie Chaplin calls his funny clothes his "salary." And as for his first comedy boots, they were a pair of old ones belonging to Ford Sterling. So that Chaplin both literally and figuratively stepped into Sterling's shoes.

LOW-COMEDY AUTO.

"No, I don't own a car. I rent one when I need it. When I was over at the Keystone I bought a car. The first day I ran it it went on a gasoline jag. First it playfully climbed a telephone pole, then it bit me when I tried to fix the speedometer, and lastly, when I got out and tried to pry the darn thing loose from a house it had run into, it jammed me up against a wall and wouldn't let me go.

"Concerning my imitators—yes, I have had some funny experiences with them. I met a man the other day, fresh from some place where they don't have any Charlie Chaplin imitators, apparently. He had just seen me an hour before, he said, out in front of one of the theaters.

"'Why do you do it?' he asked. 'I think you lose prestige that way—cheapen yourself!'

"'Oh, I don't know,' I told him, 'I hardly know myself why I do it. It just helps keep me busy—that's all—helps pass the time away!'"

Back in New York, on Charlie's recent trip, he was standing in a crowd watching an imitation of himself, when a small boy came up and tried to push him out of the way.

"What's the matter?" demanded Chaplin.

"Oh, git outa me way," said the urchin, "I wanta see Charlie Chaplin. Whada you care about seein' him? Youse guys always gets in a kid's way!"

At another time Charlie had been doing a scene in an alley, and the rest of the company had gone on, while Chaplin stopped to watch a bunch of newsboys shooting craps. Along came a policeman.

"Move on!" he commanded.

"I'm Charlie Chaplin, and I've been working here!" exclaimed the comedian.

"You Charlie Chaplin!" laughed the policeman. "Huh, I guess I know Charlie Chaplin when I see him. You're just one of his bum imitators. Get out!"

AS A SLUMMER.

Chaplin is given to spells of moody melancholy. One night he was particularly low-spirited, and when he chanced to meet the joyous Tom Meighan, the latter proposed a slumming party to chase away the glooms. They went down to the old "Mug" saloon on Winston street.

"The proprietor was suspicious of us from the beginning," said Chaplin. "Maybe our clothes were too good. He asked all sorts of questions. 'Do you work on the docks at San Pedro?' 'No, not at San Pedro,' I assured him. After we had spent upwards of 30 cents buying him drinks, he openly voiced the opinion we weren't there for any good. Finally our evidence of overwhelming wealth—we had spent six bits by that time—caused him to decide that such reckless spenders must be from Alaska. After a while, though, he began to look at me closely. A look of amazement stole over his face. 'You ain't—it can't be Charlie Chaplin!' he cried. 'Pshaw,' I answered, 'of course not. I'm a traveling man.' 'I'll bet you you are Charlie Chaplin!' he insisted. But when I coyly admitted I was indeed that very person—

"'Aw, no you aint,' he veered around. 'No man that made $670,000 a year would come to a dump like this!' And no amount of persuasion or proof could convince him."

Chaplin has been much taken up by society of late. He admits he rather likes dancing and the role of cozycorner fusser.

"But I think," he said slowly and a little sadly, "I think perhaps those people could be very cruel, if——" Did that "if" mean, if one lost one's vogue, his money, his power? Shrewd Charlie.

"Anyhow, my work's the thing. Yes, I admit that sometimes I use other people's ideas." Chaplin grinned. "But, oh, the irony of fate! Once last year I made a picture filled with no less than ten masterpieces of other people's creation—and the exhibitors sent it back. Said it was rotten!"

Chaplin has a secretary to answer his letters, of which he receives sometimes as many as 100 a day. And his letters are graded and filed! What do you think of that? If you write him an A No. 1 love letter, for instance, or one that's extremely interesting, or one so badly composed that it's funny, that letter goes into a certain pigeonhole and to be kept and taken out and read over again by Charlie at some future day. But if you write only the common or garden variety of love letter, or any other ordinary sort, it is filed in the regular letter file, and after a while is destroyed. He gets letters from everywhere in the world, and is an especial favorite in China and Japan.

Following is a postcard which he received the other day from an admirer in Tokio: "Dear Mr. Chapline: Dear Sir: Your kind favour with a pretty photo of you was duly to hand for which I was enormously delighted. Expecting that your work in the M. F. Company will please us more than I saw before, Yours truly, ———."

Oftentimes he goes to the theater to listen to comments of his audiences.

"And when I hear some of the criticisms, I walk off quickly," he says.

For, strange as it may seem, as sensitive to criticism as a child is this famous comedian, who has created a guffaw that is heard around the world, a ripple of laughter that ceaselessly encircles the globe.

MAKES CROESUS SEEM A PAUPER.

More than Half Million Paid to Charlie Chaplin in "Movie" Salaries.

The total income of Charlie Chaplin from his work in pictures, based on figures made public concerning his salaries with the three companies with which he has worked, exceeds $500,000 to date. He averaged better than $200 a week with the Keystone company, and toward the close of his engagement his salary is said to have been nearly $1000.

With the Essanay company his salary was $1200, while he received a bonus of $10,000 for each picture made, it is stated. His present salary is reported to be in excess of $600,000 a year. Even discounting the inflation that is to be anticipated in such cases, it is safe to say that Croesus would be a little envious of the financial success of the popular screen comedian.

There's a Reason.

WORK WITH ZOO INMATES? NOT FOR COMEDY KING!

BEASTS of the field have no chance for fat contracts in Charlie Chaplin's "movie" company. His experience with children of the wild has been confined to a serious-minded lion and a tipsy baboon, but he says the experience has been ample. Here is his own version of it:

"Do I want to work with wild animals? So you think a lion would be funny, do you? Well, I tried working with a lion in 'The Vagabond,' but finally gave it up, and cut the scene out. Judging from the lions I have met, they have no real sense of humor. The lion we used tried to eat up all the expensive comedians and passed up the dollar-a-day men.

"They had fed him up well that day, and his keeper was with him. The lion came out and looked around. Then he caught sight of my pants, and at once registered disapproval. He glared and switched his tail. I was used to having those pants admired, not to say applauded, but there was no convincing that lion. I told him they were considered funny in the very best circles. But he was a strong-minded lion, and my arguments had no effect. He roared—but not, I am convinced, with mirth. It was some other emotion entirely. There was that about those pants which seemed to arouse every evil impulse in him. I tried to explain to him that those were not my Sunday pants, that they were only a joke, and that really, between him and me, I didn't approve of those pants myself, but he refused to see the point, and I reached my dressing-room just three jumps ahead of him. Finally his keeper got him calmed down, and we went on with the scene. I told Miss Purviance to 'register fear.' She did. I never saw anything more convincing than the way that girl registered fear. I told one of the extra men to distract the lion's attention, but the man was strangely averse to doing so, and muttered something about not being willing to be butchered for no measly old dollar a dap.

"Plainly that lion was hurt. He had expected to appear in something dignified, where he could devour a lovely, tender maiden, or crack a hard-shell warrior with armor on; and here he was, expected to play in a picture with a guy who wore pants like that! We finally gave it up. There was a strange apathy among my fellow-actors, and I got no support. And I'm about discouraged regarding the wild animal stuff."

GUEST OF GROCERS.

Willis H. Booth, Only Republican Candidate for the United States Senate, will Address Retailers' Association at Annual Picnic.

Willis H. Booth, the only Republican candidate for the United States Senate, is to be the special guest of honor at the third annual picnic of the Southern California Retail Grocers' Association at Ocean Park Thursday, the 31st inst.

Mr. Booth has been asked to speak on the necessity of merchants' taking more interest in politics, so that their representatives will be able to obtain protective legislation, which will help not only the retailers, but all their patrons, and to ward off injurious legislation, which does no one any good and serves but to handicap business.

Mr. Booth will speak as a business man and his reception will be nonpartisan. He was selected as the speaker of the day because he is Southern California's choice for the highest office to which a Californian may aspire at the November election.

The Programme Committee of the association, appointed by President M. A. Odenthal and headed by Secretary Neal P. Olsen, is arranging several novel features, one of which will be a parade in the streets of the city on Tuesday, the 29th inst, election day, in which a surprise will be sprung.

There will also be sports on the Ocean Park pier the day of the picnic, for which many prizes have been provided. Contests in the water will be part of the day's fun. A big basket dinner will be served, provisions being made on the pier for those who have forgotten their baskets.

YAWN UNHINGES JAW.

Mrs. Mary Stanovich, 25 years old, suffered with a toothache all Friday night. Early yesterday morning she left her home at the Harbor and came uptown to visit the dentist. The dentist pulled the tooth and Mrs. Stanovich yawned. The yawn dislocated her jaw and she was in a worse condition than ever before. The refractory jaw was put back in place at the Receiving Hospital.

Supervisors' Announcement.

RETRENCHMENT CRUX OF COUNTY'S ROAD POLICY.

THE general road construction policy of the Board of Supervisors was announced yesterday and a trend toward retrenchment was definitely shown. Instead of the building of numerous additional roads under the general county tax levy system, the board will encourage the building of local roads on the percentage basis, the property owners to be benefited paying for the work, while the county will furnish the rock, cement and oil.

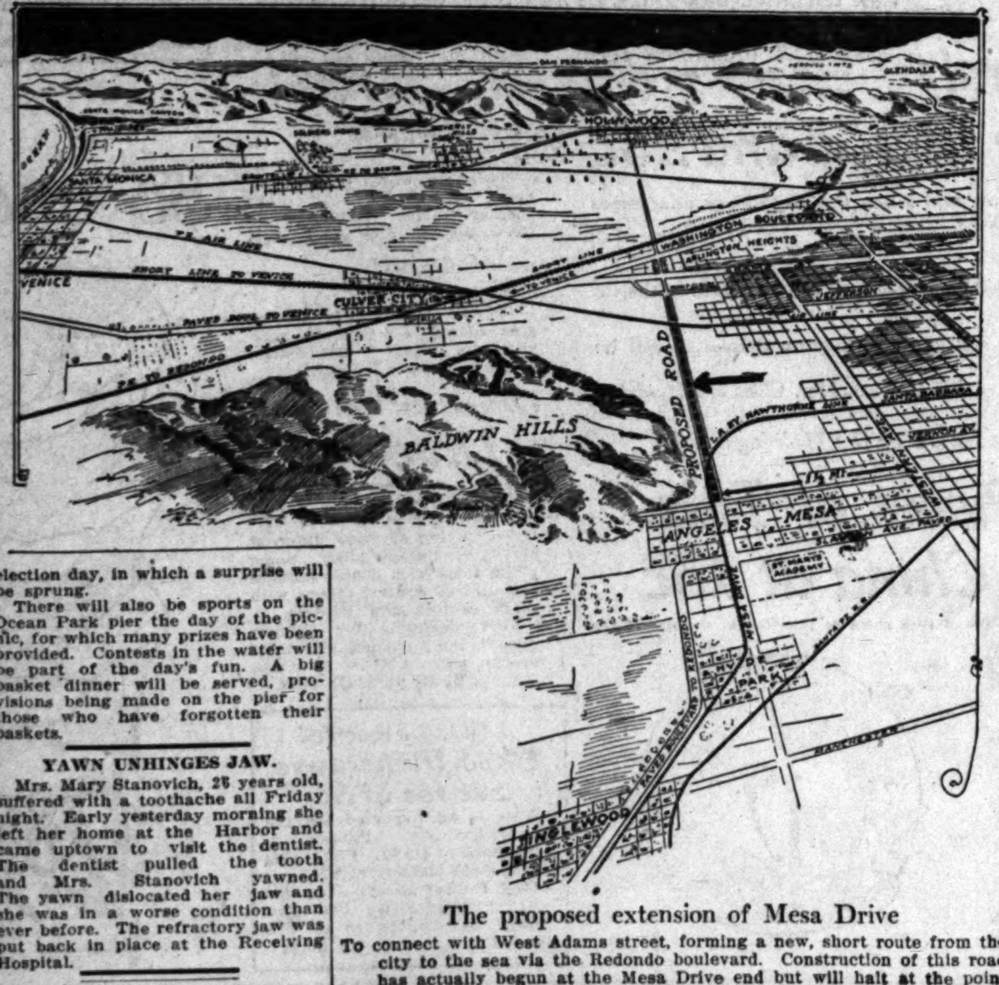
The county's share of the State vehicle tax is to be devoted for the next four years to the completion of the originally planned system of highways. This calls for the finishing of the Mint Canyon road, the Harbor boulevard and truck road, the Brea Canyon connection with the Orange county highway system on the basis already agreed upon, the Castaic connection with the Ventura county system, the San Gabriel Canyon road and the Covina-to-Walnut connection with the Brea Canyon road.

Any balance left each year after a reasonable allotment of funds on these main projects is to be devoted to highways of general value to the entire county, and particularly to canyon roads. In this connection the board will insist that the State Highway Commission construct the Arroyo Seco road at the earliest practical time, from the proceeds of the proposed State bond issue.

After the road district improvements now definitely projected are finally completed, only such roads as the board shall by resolution declare necessary parts of the county system, shall be constructed with county aid in cement, rock and oil.

In the future, when the county furnishes materials up to 50 per cent. of the cost plan, the tax levy on the road must be reduced to a maximum of 4 cents on the $100. The Monolith cement plant is to continue operations in order to furnish the cement for such projects.

Maintenance of dirt roads is to be charged as heretofore, to the several road districts in which they are located and preference in maintenance is to be given those roads which lead to packing plans, industrial centers of other kinds and the seats of greatest population. The road foremen are instructed, however, that they must keep all roads in their districts in safe and passable conditions.



The proposed extension of Mesa Drive

To connect with West Adams street, forming a new, short route from the city to the sea via the Redondo boulevard. Construction of this road has actually begun at the Mesa Drive end but will halt at the point indicated by the arrow unless the city, which recently annexed part of the traversed territory, will assist in completing it.

Short Cut.

ROAD PROJECT IS IN PERIL.

City's Taking in of the Palms District Spoils Plan.

County Cannot Help Highway Within Municipality.

Only Chance is for Council to Provide Funds.

Unless the city of Los Angeles proposes to pay a part of the cost of building an extension of Mesa drive from Slauson avenue north to Adams street at Crenshaw boulevard, the project may have to be abandoned and thousands of dollars will be lost by property owners who worked for more than a year on plans for the construction of the road.

In 1915 a deed to a 60-foot right of way from Slauson avenue to Adams street was obtained from property owners interested in the project and filed with the county, with the understanding that a county road improvement district would be formed to work in behalf of the movement, and that the county would furnish rock and oil free, which would amount to about one-third of the cost of building the road.

Steps were taken to form this district, but before the plans were completed a portion of the road included in the Palms district was annexed to the city. In accordance with the law governing road improvement districts, it became necessary to exclude this portion of the road from the original plans.

County officials declared they could not appropriate funds to pay any part of the cost of the road within the city limits. Therefore, if some plan is not adopted by the city whereby it will assume part of the cost of the improvement the project will be abandoned and the road will terminate in a cabbage patch near the city line.

In reply to a communication from the property owners in the district asking for the assistance of the Board of Public Works in completing the project, the City Engineer stated in a recent report that the city would have to appropriate approximately $8000, on the basis of the first estimate, if it proposed to assume part of the cost of the improvement.

The report of the City Engineer to the Board of Public Works is, in part:

"Mesa drive is sixty feet wide and extends from Adams street at Crenshaw boulevard south to Mesa drive, extending southerly from Slauson avenue. Plans and specifications have been drawn by the county for this improvement, extending from Slauson avenue to the south boundary line of the city of Los Angeles.

"This portion of the road is 2.08 miles long and a 20-foot strip is to be paved with five inches of concrete and a coat of oil and rock screenings, together with two-foot shoulders of disintegrated granite. The county estimates that this will cost $29,526.87, of which they are to furnish the materials, amounting to $14,899.40, or about 50.5 per cent. of the total cost. The work is now being advertised and the bids will shortly be received for this work.

"The portion of the street within the limits of the city is approximately 5225 feet long. I have made a preliminary estimate of the cost of this improvement within the city. This estimate is approximate only, as we have not at present any profile of this street and have not made a study of the grades.

THE TOTAL COST.

"This estimate is based on the following assumptions: 1. That the grade will fit the existing ground surface as closely as possible, making an average cut of one foot, the ground being low and flat.

(2.) The pavement is to be twenty feet wide and to consist of 5-inch concrete base, an asphaltic cement paint binder, and a 2-inch asphalt wearing surface, at a cost of 12 cents per square foot.

(3.) Two-foot shoulders to be made of macadam at a cost of 8 cents per square foot. The estimate for the work would be about $16,090. As the country is low it might be advisable to raise the roadway one foot above the surrounding country. This would cost another $2500, making the total cost of $18,590."

It was pointed out in a report of the property owners in the district that a road connecting the West Adams street boulevard at about Tenth avenue with the Slauson avenue-Redondo boulevard at Mesa drive would save three miles over the nearest through road (Western avenue) and five miles over the nearest paved road (Vermont avenue) between Arlington Heights, Venice, Santa Monica, Beverly, Hollywood and other points on the north, and Angeles Mesa, St. Mary's Academy, Hyde Park, Inglewood, Redondo and other points to the south.

It is stated in the report that this is the farthest point to the west for the construction of a boulevard over reasonable grades, because of the Baldwin Hills. The road is in a direct line south of Cahuenga Pass, Hollywood, the entrance to the San Fernando Valley and the State highway north.

What Hiram has Done.

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] We had the privilege last Tuesday evening of listening to Hiram; he was at his best and made the best talk he could, for Hiram. His speech was more remarkable for what he did not than for what he did say. He assured us that he was going to vote for Hughes, but it was evident that it was a bitter pill. He also assured us that if we sent him to Washington he would strive to do for the nation what he had done for the State.

Four years ago a Senator, who was also a deputy labor commissioner, introduced and got passed a bill that raised his own salary as labor commissioner, and Hiram signed the bill. And two years later the same Senator repeated the dose (he believed it to be a good thing for him,) and Hiram signed the bill. He had learned in Sabbath-school: "For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance; but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath." Matt. 25:29.

And the same idea (not quite so rank) has permeated our State government for the last six years. In 1910 the Railroad Commission cost the State $33,715.74. For the year ending June 30, 1916, the same commission cost the State $670,000. We have it on paper that they did a whole lot of things, but nobody has been able to perceive at any time during the last six years that the cost of living has been reduced. But we can see that the governing class has been benefited to the extent of several million dollars per year. And the ultimate payment of all taxes is labor.

There are many wrongs in California that need righting. Hiram should not jump his job unless he is tired of being good. Our State Tax Commission is complaining that land-hogs are holding millions of acres of land from use and retarding the growth (progress) of the State, and asking for suggestions. There is a chance for Hiram to show his statesmanship and love for humanity. Will he do it? "A statesman desires to do things for the people. A politician desires the people to do things for him." One can usually tell which class a candidate is in.

GROWTH IN SCHOOLS.

Assistant Superintendent's Report Shows Expected Rise in Fall Enrollment, Indicative of Prosperity and Gain in Population.

Los Angeles county will have to supply school facilities for 143,017 children in the city and county this fall, according to a report made yesterday by Assistant County Superintendent of Schools Wheat, who has been investigating the matter. The opening date is September 11.

The enrollment in the high schools of Los Angeles city is expected to exceed that of last year by more than 6000. At the end of the last school period the enrollment was 20,185. It is estimated that at least 26,211 pupils will be found in the secondary educational ranks the ensuing year.

The enrollment in the elementary public schools will be about 67,250, as against 74,350 last year. It is expected the slight decrease estimated at this time may be fully made up and the record of last year at least equaled, if not surpassed.

Taking into consideration the entire county, the enrollment of pupils this year, it is estimated, will exceed that of last by approximately 13,594. According to Asst. Supt. Wheat, the increase will slightly exceed 4 per cent., which is a normal and healthy growth, indicative of increase in population and prosperity of the county and city.

IMITATORS GALORE.

Doing Charlie Chaplin Stuff is a Disease that Sometimes Grips Whole Towns and has Even Been the Cause of a Riot in Ireland.

Charlie Chaplin is the most mimicked man in existence. Imitating Chaplin is a disease that for its contagious qualities takes rank with infantile paralysis, although not as fatal. Diagnosticians estimate that the number of cases has exceeded 1,200,000 since the first Chaplin pictures were shown. Persons of all ages have caught the contagion.

There have been whole towns which have become infected with this disease. There is said to be one in Wisconsin where nearly everybody is a Chaplin imitator. In Ireland a certain theater manager who sent out a call for Chaplin imitators had so many applicants that a riot resulted.

What to Use and Avoid On Faces that Perspire

Skin, to be healthy, must breathe. It also must perspire—must expel, through the pores, its share of the body's waste material. Certain creams and powders clog the pores, interfering both with elimination and breathing, especially during the heated period. If more women understood this, there would be fewer self-ruined complexions. If they would use ordinary mercolized wax they would have healthy complexions. This remarkable substance actually absorbs a bad skin, also unclogging the pores. Result: The fresher, younger under-skin is permitted to breathe and to show itself. The exquisite new complexion gradually peeps out, one free from any appearance of artificiality. Obtain an ounce of mercolized wax from your druggist and try it. Apply nightly like cold cream, for a week or two, washing it off mornings.

To remove wrinkles, here's a marvelously effective treatment, which also acts naturally and harmlessly: Dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel and use as a wash lotion.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo.

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

GUARD CITY'S MILK SUPPLY.

Health Department Prepares to Meet New Law.

Veterinarian to Study Eastern Dairy Conditions.

Closer Inspection of Plants Made Necessary.

Dr. George H. Hart, city veterinarian, is to make an investigation of the control of milk supply in eastern cities, with special reference to grading which will be required under the new State law which goes into effect on October 1. The City Council has granted Dr. Hart thirty days leave of absence. He will attend the convention of the American Veterinary Association in Detroit, of which he is a member of the Executive Committee, and will visit other large cities.

In the annual report of Dr. L. M. Powers, health commissioner, submitted to the Mayor last week, it is stated that though the new law does not become operative for more than two months, a vast amount of good in a purely educational manner, already has been accomplished.

The new law provides for the grading of milk, based on bacterial count, and sets bacterial standards both before and after Pasteurization.

LAW REQUIRES TESTS.

"To enforce these provisions it will be necessary for this division to get many hundred more samples of milk each month for bacterial count," says Dr. Powers, "and will require added work in the bacteriological division to make these counts."

The new law will also put more work on Dr. Hart's department, because of its tuberculin test provisions for all cows supplying milk. The veterinarians will be required to test 3500 head of cattle twice yearly, unless State assistance can be obtained.

There are 1339 dairies, containing 28,183 cows, sending their output to the city for consumption as milk or cream. The daily receipts amount to approximately 40,983 gallons of milk and 1510 gallons of heavy cream. Compared with one year ago the number of dairies has fallen off 129, but the total number of cows has remained stationary. The production of cream increased 120 gallons and of milk 3500 gallons.

DAIRIES ENLARGE.

"This is favorable to improved dairy conditions," says Dr. Hart. "The same number of cows being maintained on 129 less dairies shows that the dairies have tended to increase in size. We still, however, have ninety-two wholesale dairies of five cows or less and forty-two retail dairies of from two to five cows.

"Generally speaking, the milk supply is easier to safeguard and control from the public health standpoint when the dairies are small in total number and comparatively large in individual number of cows. Small dairies require almost the same amount of time from the inspection force as large dairies producing many times as much milk. It frequently happens that the product from the small dairy is inferior because the owners do not depend for a livelihood from the dairy alone, and thus it is given secondary consideration to some other pursuit.

COWS IN THE CITY.

"Ten hundred and sixty-six of the total number of dairies are in Los Angeles county. Four hundred of these are one-cow dairies within the city limits, which are really family cows; excess milk being sold to a few neighboring families. One hundred and fifty-six constitute our retail dairies selling raw milk direct from the cow to the consumer. They contain a total of 3550 cows, and produce 8147 gallons of milk, which, with the product of the one-cow dairies, constitute the 20 per cent. of our total supply which is delivered raw.

"Five hundred and ten are wholesale dairies disposing of their product, amounting to 23,388 gallons, in bulk, to the Pasteurizing plants in the city, which handle the remaining 80 per cent. of our total supply.

"In Orange county there are ninety-eight dairies, in Riverside county seventeen dairies; sending a total of 6498 gallons wholesale to the Pasteurizing plants.

"The cream supply comes mainly from sixty-seven dairies in Kings county and sixty dairies in Tulare county, containing 7780 cows and producing 1500 gallons of heavy cream and 250 gallons of fresh milk daily. In Kern county we have one dairy supplying the railroad restaurant in one of our city depots. This San Joaquin Valley product at the present time is all being Pasteurized at point of origin.

UNDER CONTROL.

"We continue to maintain inspection over all dairies delivering to Pasteurizing plants, the output of which goes mainly to Long Beach and Pasadena, but which at the same time regularly dispose of part of their product in the city.

"During the year the minimum standard score required for all dairies to reach or be shut out of the city has been raised from 50 to 55 points, with very gratifying results. The average score of our dairies at the present time is 60.2, an increase of over 4 points."

COSTS A FORTUNE TO CHANGE NAME.

TO SAVE CONFUSION ROAD CUTS OFF "SAN PEDRO."

Relettering Rolling Stock and Signs to Read "Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad" Alone Entails Thousands of Expense—All Advertising Must be Made Over.

Changing the name of the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railway Company to the Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad Company, which was done at a meeting of the stockholders at Salt Lake City last Wednesday, will cost the company approximately $90,000 for the relettering of its name on the rolling stock and the agencies and stations in the various cities and along its route.

This does not include the legal expenses and fees paid to the State of Utah. The latter will be based on the capitalization of the company. Nor does it take into account the company's advertising matter, stationery and other printed forms which will have to be either destroyed or changed with a rubber stamp, the purchase of which will involve a considerable outlay.

"The change was made," said H. C. Nutt, general manager, "because the name contained three double names and the initials 'S. P.' have caused considerable confusion in the routing of freight.

"The legend, 'Salt Lake Route,' will be retained, but the rolling stock, motive-power units and stations and agencies and all advertising and printed matter will be changed to carry the new name as soon as possible."

Douglas White, industrial agent of the road, said: "The expense in making the road's advertising matter conform to the new name will run into thousands of dollars, the bulk of which will be spent right here in Los Angeles."

The car accounting department states that there are 3000 freight cars, 200 passenger coaches and 250 locomotives, the lettering on which will have to be changed. The following is a table of the cost of relettering:

3000 freight cars, $15 each	$45,000
200 passenger coaches, $125 each	25,000
250 locomotives, $50 each	12,500
75 agencies, stations, $100 each	7,500
Total	$90,000

The change will go into effect in about two weeks, or as soon as the certificate, which must be granted by the Secretary of State of Utah, reaches the general offices of the company.

The regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the company will be held Tuesday, September 5, at which time arrangements will be made for putting the change into effect.

Only Fun.

PROMISE HOT SPORT AT ANNUAL FROLIC.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WILL HOLD A BARBECUE.

Members will Lay Aside Cares of Business and Concerns of State and Nation and Put in Next Saturday Afternoon at Play at Exposition Park.

With a programme jammed full of fun making stunts, the annual frolic of the Chamber of Commerce will be held next Saturday afternoon, the 26th inst., at Exposition Park.

The formal announcements being sent out to members tell only a small part of the big story. They merely state that the fun will begin at 2 p.m., and that the Spanish barbecue dinner will be served at 4:30 o'clock.

What really will happen besides that will be well worth the price of admission to the best show on earth. For instance, the fattest men among the 3000 members of the chamber will amble gently along in a foot race. They also will play a game of baseball in which the thinnest men of the chamber will be on the opposing team.

A fierce combat is expected when the married men meet the single ones in a game for blood with a box of cigars as a prize. Already considerable feel has been aroused over this event, as there is an inclination on the part of the married contingent to show the matrimonial slackers that they are a poor lot.

There will be a lot of other contests for the men, and the ladies will not be neglected. Dainty prizes are to be offered them.

It is promised that the dinner will be the genuine old-mission day Spanish cooking, famed throughout the ages. Of course, there will be music and incidentals that fill every odd minute of the afternoon.

BADGERS WILL PICNIC.

Pie-eating Contest will be Lively Among Wisconsin Folks.

Loganberry pie has been selected by the Arrangements Committee as most suitable for the contest of members of the Wisconsin Association of Southern California for the title of the association pie-eating championship. The contest will be a feature of the Wisconsin picnic on Saturday, the 26th inst., in Sycamore Grove. Secretary T. L. O'Brien says that several well-known members of the association have sent warning that the committee must have an ample supply of pies, as they expect to enter the contest.

It is claimed there are at least 50,000 former residents of Wisconsin now making their homes in Southern California—and more coming every day—and a very large part of them will attend the picnic, the secretary declares. Every county of Wisconsin will have a separate register, which will make it easy for old neighbors to find each other.

The picnic and reunion will last all day. Both red and yellow street cars pass the grove, and the Pacific Electric has promised to run as many extra cars as may be needed to handle the crowd.

London's Underground Lines.

[Electric Railways Journal:] The various electric railways controlled by the Underground Electric Railways of London were forced by the war to contend with difficulties, problems and requisitions which disturbed their operations. Before the outbreak of war they employed approximately 27,500 men; of these 7700 are enlisted and 6300 attested, representing approximately 50 per cent. of the staff. Nevertheless, each of the railways thus showed substantial improvements in its earnings, and, although the operating costs increased, the margin available for dividends was larger, and each company was consequently able to pay larger dividends than in 1914.

LOS ANGELES AEROPLANE SQUAD SEEKS SERVICE.

Company Here and One at Berkeley, Already Grounded in Theory and Practice of Army Aviation, are Offered to War Department, as Pioneers of Forthcoming Volunteer Reserve Corps.

LOS ANGELES is probably to have the first company of the first Reserve Aero Squadron formed under the provisions of the Army Reorganization Bill. That is to say, this city will almost surely have the pioneer body of military fliers, supported by the government and subject to the first call in case of war.

At the Monterey Military Training Camp, alone of all such encampments in the United States, instruction in aviation was given. In view of the results achieved, Earle Remington, president of the Aeronautical Society of California, yesterday dispatched to Secretary of War Baker a letter outlining what has been done, and making practical application for Federal recognition of the First Squadron, Volunteer Aero Reserve.

It was due to efforts of Mr. Remington and the society he heads that aviation work was included in the curriculum at Monterey. The work done, the interest manifested and the proficiency attained by the recruits in this department of service impressed observing officers, including Maj.-Gen. J. Franklin Bell, commanding the Western Department of the United States Army. Certificates of proficiency were issued to the men, in accordance with the work they had done and markings received in a competitive examination. Actual instruction in flying, shop work and theory was given them in as much detail as was possible during their condensed course of training. War conditions were approximated as nearly as possible and met as efficiently as might be.

MATERIAL IS HERE.

The result is Los Angeles has the nucleus and a major part of the personnel of the first citizen-soldier aviation squadron ever developed in America. The fact is here; Federal recognition is now sought.

All this is pointed out in Mr. Remington's letter to Secretary Baker, in whose discretion the formation of reserve aeroplane squadrons rests. Mr. Remington's letter says, in part:

"At the camp at Monterey the men actually constructed under field conditions the parts for four military type tractor biplanes, and these planes will be completely assembled within the next sixty days. For the full particulars regarding the course of training received at Monterey and the advisability of the War Department affording financial assistance for the continuance of this work we would refer you to Maj.-Gen. J. Franklin Bell, commanding the Western Department of the Army, who is personally familiar with the matter.

"The training of this squadron at Monterey was made possible by the Aeronautical Society of California, which defrayed all operating expenses, furnished the aeroplanes and material for the four planes now under construction. Should the Secretary of War see fit to give official recognition to this organization we are of the opinion that local financial assistance can be secured sufficient to purchase the necessary equipment, if assurance were given that the Federal government within a reasonable length of time would undertake the maintenance and upkeep of same."

ENVOY TO WASHINGTON.

This application to Secretary Baker will be further pressed home in the near future by Charles F. O'Brien, vice-president of the Aeronautical Society of California, who will go to Washington and personally see the head of the War Department.

The proposed squadron comprises about sixty men, with the four machines now building. Mr. Remington has been selected for the post of major commanding the squadron, H. Albert de Wit for adjutant and Lyman Farwell for quartermaster. The organization would comprise Co. A of Los Angeles and Co. B of Berkeley, and for commanders of these Tod Ford, the noted polo player, and W. Mayer of Berkeley have been selected. Willie Ritchie, the former lightweight champion pugilist of the world; Billy Taylor, the automobile racing driver, and a number of other celebrities are in the squadron's personnel. Ritchie, whose real name is G. A. Steffan, has been selected for first sergeant of Co. B.

In a bulletin addressed to the members of the Aeronautical Society, President Remington says of the prospects:

"It is earnestly requested that every member of the Aeronautical Society and affiliated committees become thoroughly acquainted with what has been done at this camp (Monterey,) and that they will give their utmost efforts to help to maintain the Volunteer Aero Squadron, considering the four weeks of training that have been given simply as a foundation on which to build aerial defenses for California. With this nucleus of the squadron as a starter there is no reason why next year four complete squadrons should not be trained, and this would provide men enough to man approximately fifty aeroplanes under present war conditions.

"If the above were done in accordance with the present organization tables laid down by the War Department, it would afford to California enough aeroplanes to suitably patrol our coast, to spot the artillery fire of the fortifications within the boundaries of this State, and to man combat planes and reconnaissance planes in accordance with the best practice as developed by the present war in Europe."

Considering the length of time necessary to develop a good flying corps and the comparatively small expense involved, officers of the society state, it is hoped the people of California will not withhold financial support.

Meantime the big question rests with Secretary Baker.

PATENTS GRANTED BY EVERY COUNTRY.

LOS ANGELES INVENTOR HAS A WORLD RECORD.

In Two Places His is First Right Ever Recorded and Ninety-three Nations Have Legally Protected the Use of His Petroleum Refining Process.

A Los Angeles inventor, Milton J. Trumble, has the distinction of having had his inventions patented in every country granting patents. Mr. Trumble lives at Alhambra. He is the inventor of a very widely-adopted process of refining petroleum oil and has found it necessary to protect his rights all over the world. He holds patent No. 1 in Grenada and St. Vincent, no other inventor ever having applied before Mr. Trumble for any sort of a patent. The Leeward Islands patent is No. 3 and that in Trinidad is No. 4. Perak, wherever that may be, is a little more active, with nine prior inventors, the Trumble patent in these countries being No. 10.

In contrast, a recent United States patent granted the same inventor is numbered 1,182,601.

Graham and Harris, who prepared and handled these foreign patents, state that there are now ninety-three countries granting patents and the cost of one patent in all the countries is over $20,000.

Swerving suddenly to the right as he was riding along Long Beach boulevard on his bicycle yesterday afternoon, Joe Grandino, 8 years old, of No. 4356 Santa Fe avenue, slid in front of a swiftly-moving motorcycle. The lad was hurled fifty feet, but the motorcycle rider did not stop.

County Road Foreman Davidson, who passed a few minutes later in his automobile, hurried the injured boy to the County Hospital, where physicians said he may die. His skull is fractured and many bones broken.

FEEDING AND CLOTHING TROOPS ENORMOUS JOB.

Seventh Regiment Consumes Three Thousand Pounds of Ice per Day, Two Tons of Beef per Week and Twenty-four Thousand Pounds of Potatoes a Month. How Men are Dressed.

BY HENRY L. MARSHALL,

With the Seventh California Infantry at Nogales, Ariz.

UNDER the wild walnut tree at regimental headquarters hangs a huge canvas olla, filled with ice water. Faucets depend from its oval bottom, giving it something of the appearance of the udder of a prize Holstein, and all day around it, in this blazing Arizona midsummer, sounds the tinkle of tin cups. Like the nineteenth hole of every well-regulated golf course, this oasis beneath the tree is the place for rallying spirits after guard-mount, when the eyes are blinded by streaming sweat and the olive-drab shirt sops against the shoulder blades.

To cool these ollas in every company street, and to refrigerate the meats in the company kitchens, calls for 3000 pounds of ice each day, and six other regiments are making similar demands on the ice plant at Nogales, in addition to which the government must be supplied with three tons for the big warehouse where the meats are inspected.

To cater to the ordinary needs of 1000 men every day and do it without confusion, is a task for experts. In the case of Pancho Villa's army it is simpler than with an organization like the Seventh Regiment from California. Villa's men rustle their own beef in the careless manner of the outlaw, and in the absence of beef, the army will march all day on the doughy tortillas prepared by the camp women. The American soldier expects more, and gets it.

The Seventh Regiment consumes two tons of beef each week. Each company is a separate organization on the books of the commissary department, and every pound of food issued is checked out against the account of the organization. The company has a food allowance which must not be exceeded, and if, through some inadvertence, the account is exceeded, the overdraught is withheld from the company captain's pay.

WHAT THEY EAT.

Beef and potatoes are the largest items checked out of the commissary. The Seventh Regiment uses 100 pounds of potatoes per company per day, making a total of 8000 pounds for the regiment every ten days, or 24,000 pounds per month.

The commissary cannot always issue butter, for on the border the butter supply is very uncertain, but it appears about a half-dozen times a week. The companies are allowed sixty pounds each per month.

Canned milk is in evidence three times a day, and is served with the oatmeal or cream of wheat, and in the coffee. The regiment uses a little less than 2000 pint cans per month. Every company is issued 300 pounds of bacon per month.

It takes 600 pounds of bread each day to satisfy the regiment, and this is all drawn fresh from the regimental field oven every day. This is heavier and more wholesome than the ordinary commercial bread, containing two pounds of flour in each loaf. It comes from the oven in sheets of six loaves, weighing twelve pounds. In addition to this amount, the company cooks very often bake biscuits, corn bread or graham bread. The daily bill-of-fare generally includes either California prunes or dried apples, and California peaches and raisins appear often in the form of pies. There is an option to be had in pineapples, but these are not so popular as the California fruits.

During the month of July it cost 29½ cents per man per day to victual the regiment. Nearly every month is the same, varying perhaps about 1 cent. The cost per man is figured by taking the wholesale cost of the food plus its freight and dividing it equally among the number of men fed. The quartermaster's department has agents at work in every part of the country, constantly buying food supplies, which, in the case of the border troops, are shipped to huge warehouses in El Paso and distributed from that point.

NO GROUND FOR KICKS.

The daily rations at the Nogales camps are much more wholesome and diversified than is the case when the troops are actually in the field. The regiment is being served with garrison rations, because of its proximity to the army base of supplies. In the field and on the march the beef ration would disappear, and hard bread take the place of the leavened loaf.

Under the present food issue, there is no chance for a legitimate kick on the manner in which the soldiers are being fed, unless it may happen that a company is cursed with a poor cook. The care with which every parcel and package of food is inspected before it reaches the regiment precludes any chance of spoiled consignments, and if any part of a box of milk or fruits is unavailable, the cook has the right to fire it back to the quartermaster, and the quartermaster shunts it on to the buyers for the government.

The first year of a soldier's service in the organized militia he is allowed $67.85 worth of clothes. In four years he may be issued clothing to the amount of $142.35. While this clothing is furnished without any charge, the amount that the soldier can draw is limited to his actual needs. He draws heaviest on this clothing allowance during the first three and six months.

During the first three months he is issued three pairs of shoes. These are made under strict governmental contract and the ones now being issued are from Boston contractors, made in Brockton, Mass., and also from a San Francisco concern. Those who remember some of the consignments of shoes furnished during the Spanish War look upon the shoes now being worn by the Seventh Regiment as a result of the rigid inquiry that followed the exposure of graft at that time. The heavy oak and hemlock tan shoes the army now wears will cost the civilian $5 and $6 in the shoe stores. Every man is fitted by foot measure.

WHAT HE WEARS.

On the border the soldier is issued two pairs of the peg-topped kahki trousers with the close-fitting laced legs. For winter he is issued later a similar garment of wool. He has shirts to match, and two pairs of leggins. He has four suits of two-piece underclothes, four pairs of socks, two service hats, belts, cords and other miscellaneous articles that turn him out in proper form.

The civilian who wants to buy an army outfit to wear in the mountains will pay $5 apiece for woolen olive-drab trousers and shirts, but the government charges the soldier $2.31 for trousers and $2.38 for shirts. Every other article is charged at least at a half-rate of the commercial price. And if the soldier is careful of his outfit he may not use his alloted amount and will have a balance at the end of his enlistment period, which will be given him in cash. If he exceeds his amount the overdraft is deducted from his pay. When he is ready to go home the clothing belongs to him.

It used to be that the soldier was charged with his tent and bunk equipment, but this is now issued "on memorandum," and the soldier is only responsible for the safe custody of it. This includes two woolen blankets, a rubber poncho which serves as a rubber coat and as a rubber tent shelter in the field; a "shelter-half," which is one-half of what is known as a field dog tent, the other half being in the custody of his bunk mate; a woolen sweater and a field overcoat. There are other minor articles. These do not belong to him when he leaves the service.

ORANGES FROM HOME.

It should not be forgotten, in enumerating the articles of the soldier's mess, that the people of California have been very kind to the boys of the Seventh Regiment. Just as this article is being written a carload of Valencia oranges, redolent of the foothill groves of the homeland, are being distributed from tent to tent. They come to us on one of Arizona's hottest afternoons, when the air is dead with sullen heat, just before the evening display of lightning, thunder and rushing rain. Officially, the people of California will be thanked for this handsome remembrance, but it should also be written here that the boys are deeply and most genuinely grateful, not only for these fine oranges, but for the many and frequent shipments of fruits and delicacies from the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, from lodges and other organizations, and from the cities of Southern California whose boys are represented in companies of the Seventh California.

Within a few days the regiment will be moved to higher ground near the present camping place. The storms of these Arizona mountains are fierce, sudden and accompanied by a rush of flood water. The regiment has once been confronted by a real danger from an overflowing creek and the change of location is to be partly on account of this fact, and also to make better all matters of sanitation and drainage.

Some time in September the entire regiment is scheduled for a sixty-five-mile hike. Ninety days from the time of arriving in camp will probably be the time for the return of the regiment to California, unless some one of the many Mexican factions takes a notion to start more border raiding. In the meantime the boys are drilling hard and this particular regiment has every chance to rank among the highest in efficiency among all the contingents of the organized militia.

PERJURY IS ALLEGED.

Theatrical Manager Charged with Embezzlement Seeks Complaint for Dancer on Alleged False Testimony—Aid is Offered.

Attorney Bagley and client, Richard Bennett, the theatrical manager who is charged with embezzling $250 from the Russian Ballet, sought yesterday to have a complaint charging perjury issued against Theodore Kosloff, the ballet leader. Deputy District Attorney Claire Woolwine took the matter under advisement.

In Justice Summerfield's court yesterday there came a ray of sunshine. A radiant young woman, timidly entering, glided swiftly to the side of Mr. Bennett. He looked in astonishment at the sparkling apparition.

It was Mildred Pitts of Long Beach, known to Mr. Bennett when she was a pupil at a French school. She came with an offer of assistance to the young man. It was for the sake of the old days in Paris when no cloud threatened. They parted in Paris before the great war broke out. Miss Pitts returned to Albany, N. Y. She is at Long Beach with her family.

Attorney Bagley alleges that Theodore Kosloff committed perjury when he swore a civil action had not been instituted against him in San Francisco and that he had not assigned the salary of the company to Mr. Bennett, when the records of the San Francisco courts, Attorney Bagley says, show this to be the case.

REGULAR POST FOR CALEXICO?

Activities Indicate Troops will Remain There.

Government Leases Site for Service Buildings.

Gossip from Camp of Second Washington Infantry.

That Calexico will be a busy military post for some time to come is indicated in the leasing by the War Department of property adjacent to the Southern Pacific tracks in the industrial district there for the construction of warehouses and stables. Other action taken by the military officials in connection with the camping of the soldiers there is taken to indicate a permanent camp at this point of at least a part of the 3500 troops at present stationed along the border. According to officers, the Second Washington Infantry, commanded by Col. William M. Inglis of Seattle, has drawn provisions from the government storehouses to last the regiment eight months.

The health of the men encamped there has been remarkably good, according to the reports of the Medical Corps. There has been only one death since the camp was established in May—that of a regular private cavalryman, who committed suicide last month when his fiancee returned his ring and married another.

A regimental exchange has been established in the camp of the Second Washington Infantry. Tobacco and soft drinks may be purchased there by soldiers, who are provided with coupons, the cost of which is extracted from their pay. The profits of the exchange are turned into the mess fund, in this way providing extras for the table that are not furnished by Uncle Sam. The exchange is in charge of Lieut. R. E. Todd of Co. M.

Civic Outlook Club.

The executive board of the Civic Outlook Club of Redondo Beach met last Thursday afternoon to arrange the programme and plan of work for the year. The board includes: President, Mrs. W. A. Galentine; vice-president, Mrs. E. J. Scott; secretary, Mrs. W. L. Adkins; treasurer, Mrs. Gabriel Johnston; and chairmen of the following departments: Education, Miss Lola Gitt; health, Dr. Ree W. Meyer; history, Mrs. John Ray; hospitality, Miss Lucy Whichelo; legislation, Miss Nellie E. Rhodes; federation secretary, Mrs. J. C. Fowler.

Plans were made for a dinner and supper to be given September 4 in a tent at the beach, the proceeds to be used for the scholarship fund.

The first meeting of the club will be September 22, when the executive board will be hostesses at a reception in honor of new members.

Monrovia Club Plans.

The Monrovia Women's Club is arranging some instructive programmes for the coming club year, under the supervision of Mrs. Edward Scott, general curator. A new scheme under which each section will undertake the accomplishment of some particular line of work and be disbanded after achievement will be among the innovations. The sections include domestic science, travel, music and Shakespeare.

Domestic science will embrace instruction in the art of preparing dishes, and discriminate buying of provisions.

Miss Luella Keller, pianiste and composer, will have charge of the music section.

The travel section will undertake the study of Boston, Washington, New Orleans and the national parks.

Following is the programme as outlined by the president, Mrs. H. E. Kirschner, for the first half-year: October 4, anniversary day and open meeting; October 18, Kittie Richards Foote; November 1, Dr. Freeman; November 15, musical programme; November 29, social day; December 4, Rev. James K. Booth.

College Women's Club.

The College Women's Club will occupy its new quarters at the Brack-Shops tomorrow under the guidance of Mrs. A. L. Cavanagh, chairman of the house committee.

The club will use the large auditorium on the top floor for its monthly meetings. A kitchenette has been installed for hospitality purposes.

In the absence of the president, Miss Anne Mumford, Miss Lucy Lambdin, first vice-president, is undertaking many of the responsibilities and labors of installation in the new location.

Numerous innovations are contemplated for the new club year. The social activities will be increased, and the addition of card tables indicates one form they will take. Dancing, too, will not be neglected.

The vocational bureau, which has proved so advantageous a part of the club's more serious activities, will extend its scope and special quarters have been provided for it through the generosity of Mrs. Johnson of the Booklover's Library. Sixty positions were found for members during the past season.

Rosecrans Study Club.

The executive board of the Rosecrans Club held a mid-term meeting last Monday when all the officers attended. Plans for the coming season beginning in October were discussed and formulated.

Mrs. Jessie Kitchin entertained the club on its last social day with cards, music and other diversions. Mrs. Edward Haff won the first card prize, and Mrs. M. P. Brooks the second.

Business Women's Civic Club.

At last Monday night's meeting, the Business Woman's Civic Club listened to several speakers on political subjects. Rufus Bowdin, Democratic candidate for Congress from the Tenth district, was heard in the interest of President Wilson and of George Patton, Democratic candidate for the United States Senatorship. Mrs. James Scherfee and Marshall Stimson represented the Progressive candidates and Judge Berdwell spoke for Willis Booth. Mrs. Clara Snell Wolfe spoke of the work of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage.

To give the members an opportunity to hear Mr. Hughes there will be no meeting of the Business Woman's Civic Club next Monday.

Woman's Press Club.

The Executive Committee meeting of the Southern California Woman's Press Club, which was called by the president, Miss Rose Ellerbe, last Monday night at the public library, heard the reports of heads of departments, and plans for the coming season were discussed. The club proposes to remove its headquarters to the Brack-Shops.

Mrs. Bertha Lincoln Heustis has been appointed chairman of the Banqueting Committee. A prize contest is to be offered for a one-act play. There is also to be a stricter ruling in the matter of visitors to the club meetings and diners, and closer construction of qualifications for membership.

The organization of a drama section is also being undertaken by Mrs. Emma S. Marshall, a meeting for which is called for 3 o'clock this afternoon at her home, No. 517 Lake Shore avenue, near Temple street. All forms of dramatic writing will be studied in this section.

The Masque at Del Mar.

Many people are congregated at Del Mar for the opening of the Stratford Theater, the open-air auditorium where Madame Schumann-Heink will grace the initial event on September 23, next.

Capt. Peyton of San Francisco, traveling in a private car with a party of friends, has been on the scene, lending his enthusiasm and encouragement to the venture, likewise Havrah Hubbard of operalogue fame, the Carle Triestes, Claude Golthelf, F. G. Walker, and a party of New York people.

The title of the masque, written by Susanna Ott, has not been fully decided upon, but will probably be "The Best in the World." Madame Schumann-Heink, who takes a deep interest in the outdoor theater idea and the Stratford Theater in particular, will sing "Siegfried," and the masque is said to teem with the spirit of spring, nymphs, dryads and woodland fairies. Little Miss Florence Brown, who achieved success in the local Shakespearean pageant, will be solo dancer.

The play will be produced under the direction of Mrs. Lillian Goldsmith, and mothered by Mrs. Kate Vaughan Bury.

Antique.

FLOOD UNEARTHS DINNER BOWL OF STONE-AGE MAN.

INTEREST of archaeologists has been roused by the discovery on the property of D. J. Tripp of Riverside county of a large stone bowl which, according to all indications, is a product of the Stone Age. The curio is now in the possession of ex-Justice George W. Glover of South Pasadena.

The bowl was found thirty-five feet below the surface of the Tripp ranch on a large boulder bed uncovered when the Temescal River during the storms of last winter washed away an abutting bank for seventy-five feet inland. Two other curios of the same rock material, a stone hammer and a stone axe, both of equally apparent antiquity, were discovered at the same time. Unfortunately, however, strangers carried off the latter two pieces and the bowl is all that remains of the set.

This bowl is eleven inches high and eighteen inches across, with a thickness of three inches. It weighs eighty-seven pounds and was wrought from a peculiarly hard slate-gray granite never before seen in this section. Around the edge, apparently to facilitate its removal from place to place, a distinct hand-hold was hollowed out. On the edge and sides of the bowl marks made by the cutting instrument used in hollowing it from its original boulder form are clearly discernible. This antique cutting tool had but one point, while the modern stone-carving knife is of many points. A long crack in the side of the bowl is all that disturbs its barbaric perfection of contour.

Several things indicate this bowl as a relic of the Stone Age. Coahilla Indians of Riverside county, to whom it was shown, emphatically stated it was made long before the time of their people. These Indians say they have found at various times many instruments similar to the Glover curio and that their forefathers vainly searched the surrounding hills for years in the hope of finding an equally hard granite with which to make their own tools. The Indian tools of the last four or five centuries, of which thousand have been picked up in Southern California, are all of a granite many degrees softer and lighter of shade than the supposed Stone Age specimen. Moreover, no Indian curio ever found has been of the extreme massiveness of this bowl—one of the largest and heaviest relics ever found in Southern California.

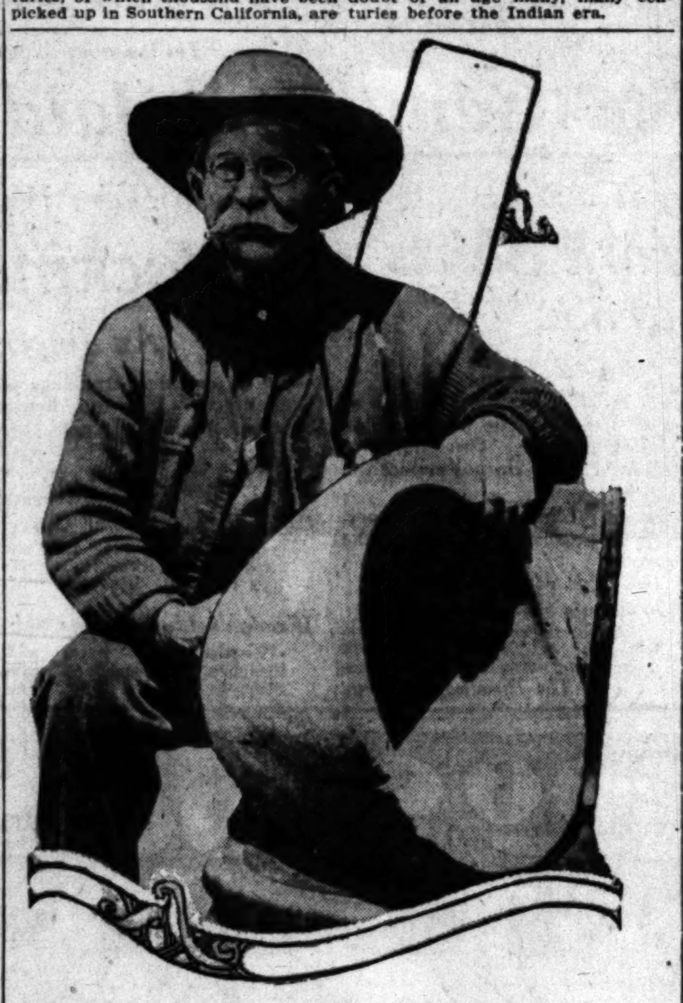
Mr. Glover's theory is that the bowl and its companion axe and hammer were brought to Southern California by a glacier. The ex-justice, who has studied geology and geological formations extensively, states that the boulder bed on which the curios were found has the appearance of being the tail of a glacial moraine. On the boulder bed were several stones of this same strange gray granite of which the bowl is made—a granite apparently absolutely foreign to Southern California. Another point, which according to Mr. Glover tends to prove the antiquity of the find is that it was absolutely separate from any human remains. In the case of Indian relics it is said to be an almost invariable rule that they will be found with bones, as the Indians had a habit of burying household utensils with the dead.

It is not believed the bowl was used for meal-grinding purposes, as the bottom shows none of the wear characteristic of such use. That it was a family eating bowl into which all members of the family dipped their hands to secure their rations is the assumption of those archaeologists who have examined it.

Mr. Glover esteems it a great misfortune that the stone axe and hammer found with the bowl have been lost and hopes that the unknown persons who carried these relics away from the Tripp Riverside ranch may be found.

Mr. Glover is one of Southern California's old-time residents, having lived in this vicinity nearly forty years, and but few men are better acquainted with early conditions in Southern California.

A life-long student of early California Indian life, Mr. Glover is well-equipped to pass on the archaelogical value of the bowl, which he declares is without the shadow of a doubt of an age many, many centuries before the Indian era.



George W. Glover and his bowl.

The stone vessel, uncovered by the wash of a swollen river in Riverside county, is of a hard, dark granite foreign to Southern California and is believed to be a relic of dim ages, transported here by a long-vanished ice stream.

Centralize.

WOULD UNITE 'EM.

Councilmen Favor Consolidation of Dozen Testing Offices and Formation of a Municipal Bureau of Standards, Thus Saving Money.

With a view to economy it is proposed to consolidate the various testing departments of the city and have one bureau of standards, the same as some eastern cities. The idea originated with the efficiency department, but even Councilman Topham, who has headed the fight against Director Burks, favors it. He said yesterday that such a bureau would mean having one set of apparatus, one set of men and would stop duplicating.

At the present time there are about a dozen different places where testing of materials and supplies is done, including the oil inspector's office and the bureau in the engineer's office. The establishment of a municipal bureau of standards would mean a centralizing of the work and it would be performed independent of the heads of the other departments. Councilmen believe this would result in better and more impartial work than is sometimes done now.

WILD TOUR ORIENT.

A party of Angelenos will leave here next Thursday and sail from San Francisco Saturday on the Tenyo Maru, for a tour that will include a motor trip through Japan, and a swing through Korea and Manchuria to Pekin, thence down the Yangtze River to Shanghai, to Hong Kong and to the Philippines. The party includes: George I. Cochran, president of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company, and Mrs. Cochran; W. H. Davis, vice-president of the same company, and Mrs. Davis; Edward J. Loeb, F. B. Church, K. I. Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cook and family; J. D. Benning, Mrs. C. A. Thompson, Mrs. Bessie E. Long, Mrs. Mary L. Clark, Mrs. Wellington Vannatta, Mrs. C. E. Hackney, Miss M. A. Keith, Paul Kirkpatrick, Roland Bristol and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Ross. Several of the travelers will proceed from Hong Kong to Java, the Strait Settlements, Australia and New Zealand. The tour is under direction of D. F. Robertson, California Savings Bank.

ASK FOR DRIVEWAY.

The City Council yesterday referred to the engineer a petition that that official define the most satisfactory route for a driveway from Avenue Fifty and Pasadena avenue to Eagle Rock City.

FACES DEPORTATION.

Mrs. Mary Lucile Purroy, who is alleged to have conducted a disorderly house at No. 320½ South Main street, was taken into custody yesterday by Immigration Inspector Nardini and Police Detective Mann. Mrs. Purroy, who is a native of France, came to this country about twelve years ago and never having taken out citizenship papers may be deported as an undesirable alien.

Nature Often Needs Help to Hold Health

The first requirement is to offer something that will not harm the sufferer by poisoning the system or creating a habit-appetite that may lead to a worse condition.

That is one reason why Eckman's Alterative, for more than twenty years a successful treatment in pulmonary, asthmatic and bronchial troubles, has attained success.

It is absolutely safe to take. It contains nothing to poison one or induce a habit. Yet its combitation of calcium chlorid is such that most persons can assimilate it easily.

If you are suffering from the serious effects of a neglected cold or in the grip of deepseated pulmonary infection, a trial is worth while.

and all other Rectal Diseases
WITHOUT OPERATION

I cure without surgery. My patients are not confined in bed and they do not lose a moment's time from their business.

My method is not a "home cure," or a "correspondence treatment," but it is an application of skilled treatments administered under the most rigid antiseptic conditions in my office.

WELL-KNOWN SANTA MONICA MINISTER CURED.

This is to certify that Dr. C. H. White has cured me of a distressing hemorrhoidal ailment of 25 years' duration. His method of treatment is effective, but not severe. He has the appliances, the knowledge and the skill born of many years of specialization in this fruitful source of physical disease. He accomplishes all he claims in his advertising, and at reasonable expense.

I take pleasure in heartily recommending the man and his methods.

Bumper Grain Crops
Good Markets — High Prices
Prizes Awarded to Western Canada for Wheat, Oats, Barley, Alfalfa and Grasses

The winnings of Western Canada at the Soil Products Exposition at Denver were easily made. The list comprised Wheat, Oats, Barley and Grasses, the most important being the prizes for Wheat and Oats and sweep stake on Alfalfa.

No less important than the splendid quality of Western Canada's wheat and other grains, is the excellence of the cattle fed and fattened on the grasses of that country. A recent shipment of cattle to Chicago topped the market in that city for quality and price.

Western Canada produced in 1915 one-third as much wheat as all of the United States, or over 300,000,000 bushels.

Canada in proportion to population has a greater exportable surplus of wheat this year than any country in the world, and at present prices you can figure out the revenue for the producer. In Western Canada you will find good markets, splendid schools, exceptional social conditions, perfect climate, and other great attractions. There is no war tax on land and no conscription.

SPOT ON LIMB ITCHED UNBEARABLY

Had Pimply Appearance. Skin Would Scale Off and It Was Red and Inflamed. Completely

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"For more than a year I had a small itching spot on my right limb which annoyed me terribly especially when coming in contact with any object. It itched so unbearably that at times I could not refrain from scratching, and my whole limb would ache to the bone. The breaking out had a pimply appearance, and the skin would scale off like bran, and it was red and inflamed.

"I tried —— and other kinds of salves and powders, but to no avail. Then I got Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The spot gradually got smaller and it was not very long before I was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. C. R. McLaughlin, Denair, Calif., Mar. 6, '16.

Train Your Hair as an Actress Does

No class of people devotes as much time to beauty as do actresses, and naturally no class must be more careful to retain and develop their charms. Inquiry among them develops the information that in hair care they find it dangerous to shampoo with any makeshift hair cleanser. Instead they have studied to find the finest preparation made for shampooing and bringing out the beauty of the hair. The majority of them say that to enjoy the best hair wash and scalp stimulator that is known, get a package of canthrox from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. It costs less than three cents for this amount. After its use the hair dries rapidly, with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.

Why Society Women Wash Their Own Hair

Few realize how many society women now wash their own hair, not because it is a fad, but because they wish to obtain the greatest possible hair beauty and be sure they are not using anything harmful. The thousands who have found that in washing the hair it is never wise to use a makeshift but is always advisable to use a preparation made for shampooing only, say they get the best results from a simple home-made canthrox mixture. You can enjoy this, the best that is known, for about three cents a shampoo by getting some canthrox from your druggist, and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. Your shampoo is now ready. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.

CLUB IS EXPANDING.

ORPHEUS TO HAVE A HUNDRED VOICES THIS SEASON.

The Orpheus Club is to celebrate the opening of its twelfth season by increasing its membership from eighty to 100 voices. A try-out of the new members is to be held beginning tomorrow night, the first rehearsal of the regular season.

Under the able direction of J. P. Dupuy this club has been steadily adding to its prestige during recent years. One of its most significant accomplishments was the winning of the Eistedfod prize at the San Francisco exposition.

It is the club's custom to allow only younger men to be active members of the organization, the age limit being 35 years.

About twenty works new to this city are to be presented by the club this season. Mr. Dupuy and the club's accompanist, Will Garroway, have spent much time during the past two months making selections for the coming concerts, and have picked out an exceedingly high-class list.

Bright Opera Star.

Anna Fitziu, who created the leading soprano role in the premiere of "Goyescas" last year at the Metropolitan Operahouse, has been engaged to appear with the Bracale Opera Company, which is to tour this coast and the south during the fall and winter.

There is also a rumor in New York that Giorgio Polacco, conductor of the Metropolitan Operahouse, who left rather unexpectedly for Europe a short time ago, is to be leading conductor with the new opera company.

The organization is scheduled to appear at the Mason Operahouse in November or December.

Likes Our State.

Mrs. H. H. A. Beach has left California for New Hampshire, but not for long, for the noted woman composer has gained a real affection for the Golden State during the past several years. She finds the climate and colorful and varied beauties of California a rare source of inspiration in her work. She first came here preceding the music festival last year, and was so impressed then with the attractions of the State that she decided to return again during the past season.

Mrs. Beach's work is drawing to her an ever-widening circle of admirers. There are few composers in the country who have won their position through more solid attainments and more persistent effort. The note of greatness pervades nearly everything she writes, and it is a pity that some of her larger works are not presented oftener.

Filming Operas.

Motion pictures and music have lately been touching hands in a new manner. This consists in the filming of operatic stories. The World Film Corporation presented a picturization of Puccini's immortal tragedy, "La Boheme," and is now engaged on the filming of "Thais."

A version of "Lohengrin" is also being made by a film company abroad. The subject affords opportunities for the spectacular which should suit well to the screen.

It is believed that there are a number of stories of sufficient dramatic intensity that would suit the screen in a very satisfactory manner, not only among the more familiar works but even those that are rarely presented upon the stage.

Exposition Park Band.

A programme of very pleasing type will be given by the Los Angeles County Band under the direction of W. F. Arend this afternoon at Exposition Park. Following is the programme: "Traumerei" (Schumann,) march, "The Headliner" (Masterman,) "Shadowland" (Gilbert,) "Soldier Boy" (Morse,) overture, "Poet and Peasant" (Suppe,) gavotte, "First Heart Throbs" (Eilenberg,) celebrated minuet (Paderewski,) medley of Remick's hits (Lampe,) "Pretty Baby" and march (new,) "Maiden America;" vocal solo, baritone, Thomas Price, "Ireland Must be Heaven, for My Mother Came from There" (Fischer) and "You're a Dangerous Girl" (Monaco;) cornet solo, B. J. Teazle, "Love, Here is My Heart" (Silesu) and "Auf Wiedersehen" (Romberg;) selection, "La Boheme" (Puccini,) by request; "Humoresque" (Dvorak,) and "Star Spangled Banner."

VISION OF THE DYING.

The Pathological Clarity of Sudermann's Diagnosis of Evil—Lord Dunsany's Fine Inspiration.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

LOS ANGELES is not really a sinful city, but it is truly a southern one. A few generations hence when we are a little further removed from Iowa, Missouri and New England, we will be a southern people. We shall be very artistic, high tempered—when our laziness will permit—and shall live riotously in the senses.

Very sensitive persons who have been here for as much as five years find themselves in danger of such delightful moral disintegration, or such a spiritual transformation, that, in either event, they could wish for wings. In the first case, they need them for volplaning, and in the other for sustained upward flight. There is something in the wine and warmth of this enflowered land which works a subtle change in personality that affects us in every particular from our manners to the very timbre of our voices. Out here, you may look the same as you ever did, but you will never act like it again.

Anything can happen to the stage in a country like this and by the time your future Angeleno has become a Greek for beauty, an Italian in temperament and a Hawaiian islander for music, it probably will. For the present, none of us dares to sin and enjoy it; and we still wear clothes, and make a pretense at politeness.

It will not hurt us, therefore, to see wicked plays in which the sinful are always punished.

We have many playwrights who dare to deal, or rather, who care to deal with vice that is robbed of the charm of a warm and delicate lure, but we have no playwright yet bold enough to dispute that the wages of sin is death and none without the conscience to show us the measure of hell that is meted out to those who transgress beyond the point of reasonable reformation.

Of all authors who understand sin in the abstract and who treat with it in the concrete, none is more bitterly severe than Hermann Sudermann. The wicked in his plays never reform and they are never forgiven. They sin and they die, and that is the end of them. They are usually sordid about it and they are pitilessly exposed.

"A Song of Songs," which is to be presented at the Morosco next Sunday, is a good example as a novel of what Sudermann knows about the evil in the world and of what he considers a fair price to pay for that sort of living. As the novel was first translated into English, and then adapted in play form by another author, it would be unfair to predict what the result will be.

Sudermann has an objectionable way of taking the most lovely title and using it as a mask for hideous revelations. "A Song of Songs" sounds like melody, but it has within it only the cry of a broken life.

Nothing Sudermann ever did, as far as I have read him, equals "Sodom's Ende," one of his early plays. It probably belongs to his age of intimation and inspiration, rather than to any nearer approach to realization. In it he gave himself up to all that he felt, and was more concerned with the joy of creation than with those considerations which sometime affect maturity. Nevertheless he saw clearly and he gave us an astounding work of unpleasant conclusion.

Sudermann could not drag a man through four acts of utter license and then consign him to paths of peace. I have often wondered what has happened to the soul of this man that he looks upon life with the dreadsome clarity of one about to die and who holds power in such awe that he will neither withhold a grim situation nor divert its logical climax. I believe that he looks too long upon the evil and so gets a needlessly base aspect of everything. There are two ways of wisdom. The truth is known of both, but one is seen through an iceberg and the other through flames.

Two men may observe your faults with precisely the same clarity, yet one will tell you the truth about yourself and hurt you, while the other will speak only to help you. One man has love and the other is without feeling. Sudermann is without charity. He does not love his sinners. If he hated sin and loved the sinner we might forgive him for so much grovelling.

I started to speak of "Sodom's End" because there came to me last week the first English translation of this work and it is still unpublished. It represents the intelligent labor of Charles Swickard, who directed "The Captive God," a recent Ince release of success shown at the Palace Theater on West Seventh street.

Mr. Swickard has given America and England many authoritative translations of choice German and Austrian plays which otherwise might have been delayed in reaching this wide audience. Among his best-known published translations are "Taps" and "The Fires of St. John." He calls his latest Sudermann translation "His Masterpiece."

This play is in four acts and five scenes and contains a remarkable analysis of the young artist who has entered decay through the indulgence of a sick passion. Its big lesson is that out of innocence only proceeds peace of mind and fine endeavor; and that the danger of sin lies in the fact that, through it, men forget the right approach to innocence. They reach a point where all that they touch turns to ashes in their grasp.

The principal character in this play follows his downward course to ruin, but in the work there is one man stands for soundness and right living and this man says that even the sinning heart will move with inspiration toward peace and joy when once it makes an honorable approach toward chastity. He says to the artist who has become as one dead, "You seek to rest, if only for once, in two chaste arms, and you will see what a perfect flood of purity and peace and happiness will permeate your soul."

Mr. Swickard has done nothing of truer service to the united world than this translation and the play will add a volume of permanence to English letters.

It is interesting to note that at the neighborhood playhouse, conducted on the east side of New York, in conjunction with the Henry-street Settlement, a new unpublished play by Alfred Dunsany, called "A Night in an Inn," has just been given. I wonder if any man ever lived who dared to say more or who so completely escaped censorship? Lord Dunsany knows the poetry of revolt, and he knows the long cry of

LIGHT SHOWS LEAD.

IDEAL SEASONAL BILLS AT THE LOCAL THEATERS.

Ideal summer time entertainment will prevail at the various theaters this week. "A Pair of Sixes" is to continue, and Clyde Fitch's "The Blue Mouse," promises additional amusement. All the vaudeville shops promise unusually pleasing bills. Anna Wheaton and Rita Gould, well known musical comedy stars, are among the chief attractions, and other acts from illusion and from magic to the veriest realism assure variety.

Burbank.

Clyde Fitch's great comedy, "The Blue Mouse," is to be presented at the Burbank, beginning tomorrow night. This play will offer Edith Lyle one of the best opportunities since her arrival here, in the name role of the comedy. The story of "The Blue Mouse" deals with a pretty girl who leads an extremely exciting existence of dual character.

Warner Baxter and Frank Darien have the leading male roles, and the brilliant lines of the play will give large opportunity to the excellent Burbank company.

Orpheum.

Anna Wheaton, charming musical comedy star, formerly with De Wolf Hopper and Sam Bernard, and Harry Carroll, who probably has more popular songs to his credit than any other song writer in the world, will headline the new Orpheum bill which opens tomorrow afternoon. Miss Wheaton has a delightful voice, a piquant personality, and she is said to wear some of the most stunning gowns ever shown on the vaudeville stage.

Others on the bill will be Mrs. Leah Herz and company in a comedy entitled "I Wish I Knew," which has musical features, giving Mrs. Herz an opportunity to display her rich voice; Mae Melville, of the former team of Melville and Higgins, in a monologue; Lou Holtz, billed as "father's joy boy;" and the holdovers, including Alexander Carr and company, in "An April Shower;" G. Aldo Randegger, in a new piano repertoire; Jim and Betty Morgan, in new songs and dances, and Martinetti and Sylvesteras, with their trick chairs.

Morosco.

"A Pair of Sixes" is getting a laugh a minute at every performance at the Morosco, and will continue doing so during the present week. Probably no game of poker ever played yielded such amusing results.

This is the first time that the popular farce has ever been seen here at popular prices, and the excellent Morosco company is making a big hit.

This is the last week of the popular leading woman, Mary Servoss, in Los Angeles, as she will leave for New York next week to appear in "Upstairs and Down."

Hippodrome.

A long list of feature attractions is promised for the new show coming to the Hippodrome tomorrow.

Topping the bill will be the Herr-Jansen company, illusionists and transformists, with a bewildering array of legerdemain.

Others will be Rose Lewellyn, the southern songbird; the four Valdares, three pretty girls and a comedian, in a cycling act; Eastman and Moore, in "His Gypsy Sweetheart;" the Jim Black duo, the male member of which is without legs; Ray L. Royce, character delineator, and Willard Hutchinson and Dorothea Saddler, in "The Man from the Hat Shop."

Pantages.

With two special stars illuminating the vaudeville firmament at Pantages next week, the bill, one of excellent variety, is expected to be particularly attractive. Rita Gould, musical comedy favorite, and Leila Shaw, in her clever sketch, "The Truthful Liar," are the headliners, and they are said to be supported by a programme of real merit.

Miss Gould, "the girl of the gladsome personality," lives up to every bit of her title. She is best known as the star of "Maid in America."

Others on the bill will be Lipinski's Dog Comedians, in their one-act pantomime, "Every day Life in Dogtown;" Mme. Lilyan and Martha Boggs, presenting a series of six out-of-the-ordinary dances, staged in a dainty manner; Gardner and Revere, in "Odd Vaudeville Bits;" Rio and Norman, and Danny Simmons, besides the thirteenth chapter of "Gloria's Romance," featuring Billie Burke.

Republic.

San Francisco's picturesque underworld will be pictured at the Republic this week in the dramatic sketch, "The Passing of the Barbary Coast," that comes as the headline vaudeville attraction. There is a cast of twenty people.

The film headliner for the week will be "Shoes," a problem photodrama, starring clever little Mary MacLaren, whose sole claim to fame is her surpassing work in this picture.

Other notable acts on the vaudeville bill include Ardo, the human frog; George and Vestino, singing, talking and character comedians, La Vere and Grimm, who bill themselves as "musicologists supreme;" Cook and Oatman, in a comedy talking act, and Chesty Cox, the well-known big league baseball player, who tells funny stories of his days on the diamond.

GAIL KANE'S VACATION.

Gail Kane, the World Film actress who is soon to be seen in "The Velvet Paw," "Paying the Price" and "The Heart of a Hero," on the screen, is to have a brief respite from film work. Early in the fall she will become leading woman for John Drew and will be seen in a new play at the Empire Theater, New York. Miss Kane will undoubtedly divide her time between the studio and the theater. She did this while appearing in "Seven Keys to Baldpate" and other plays, spending half her days at the Peerless studio and the remainder at the Astor Theater.

Fingering Finery.

AMONG THE STORES AND AMID THE SHOPPERS.

BY OLIVE GRAY.

Now is the time to buy:

Sugar for canning and preserving. At last we are getting even with the sugar market, which takes a drop daily—thereby breaking the prohibition law which has for months been in force, against "putting up" fruits. There are still many varieties of fruit from which to select the winter's supply.

Grapes are very cheap and they are excellent for jelly, for spicing as a meat condiment and also as a marmalade, when strained through a colander.

The smart, long coat to wear on the first fall days, with the one-piece dress which we are always reluctant to discard. There are handsome garments already in the stores, buyers having been busy in the East for some time.

Practical Suggestion.

"Clarkey," as she is known to her friends, always has a new recipe and it is always worth taking to one's gastronomic heart. Her latest is for deviled cheese. Two Neufchatel cheeses, a piece of butter the size of one of them. Plenty of white pepper of the best variety—and no one knows so well as does Clarkey which brand that is. One-fourth teaspoonful paprika, same brand; one-eighth teaspoonful baking soda, if the cheese is a bit sour; one-fourth teaspoonful garlic salt; two tablespoonfuls cream. Mix thoroughly until blended, form into balls and roll each in chopped pecan nut meats.

Wanted! Sweet Crematory!

"I wish,' said Ethel dreamily, that someone would invent a crematory for love letters. It seems so commonplace to burn them in an air-tight heater; and it is too warm in summer, anyhow, to have a fire, and dad is certain to ask about it. One feels foolish when scattering them from a car window; I've tried it. I have buried them, too, in the back yard, but that is nearly as commonplace as the stove." I suggested making pillows from the precious bits, but Ethel said she had several such pillows. "At first I tried that, but when you are tired of that suitor it is such a bother to unmake the pillows and you do not wish to retain his letters, anyhow. I do wish someone would invent something on the order of an oriental incense burner—a temple-like affair, upon the altar of which the letters could smoulder, commingled with some sort of sweet-smelling stuff!" And she was lost in a dream which I finally disturbed by asking if she gauged her affections by the quality of letters which her suitors wrote. "Oh dear, no!" she replied. "I sometimes think, in fact, that I like best the ones who write the least charming letters. When little is said, so much is left to the imagination that it is really most satisfactory, I believe." You see Ethel is as ethereal as her name sounds.

Streaks of Color.

Vivid streaks of color smearing along the streets! That is what we shall be the coming season, judging by the first arrivals in the way of sweaters and hats. I stopped so short that I nearly fell over when I reached the windows of that sports clothes shop not seven steps away from the most athletic club in town, for in that window were shown the latest arrivals—not only up-to-the-minute, but actually ahead of the clock. Angora sweaters in colors which fairly made my mouth water! And velours hats to match! The most exquisite shades of rose, blue, green—well, almost any color one would wish. And such soft, downy things they were! You felt like cuddling them. Almost too lovable for actual use were they; but they will be used. In fact, several of the best-dressing actresses and professional beauties, as well as society girls, have already secured theirs, although the garments have been in town but a few days.

Veils which Veil or Not.

In come veils! Well, of course little, demure veils have been here all the time, but I refer to big, self-assertive, blatant veils. They are arriving daily from the centers of fashion. Circular veils, long veils, wide veils, bordered veils—in fact, there is almost nothing ever thought of in veil conspicuousness which has not been incorporated into the new season's veils. Nothing is lacking save color. All seen thus far are black. They are handsome, they are smart, they are becoming — when they are becoming—but when not, oh, beware! Select with care. Nothing can so malevolently impute to a woman a questionable past as can the wrong veil.

"Gloriously Barbaric!"

That is what I exclaimed when the buyer for that big store on lower Broadway disclosed to my view the newly-arrived trimmings which he secured in Europe. "Secured" is just the word, too, this season when so few buyers have been abroad and so few imported goods are to be had. First I must tell you about the butterfly coat, because of all the wonderful importations it was most striking. Imagine a coat aspangle from neck to heels with every kind of glittering paillette, bead and semi-jewel and yet all welded into a harmoniousness of brilliance which made it seem quite like a production of nature! A great butterfly it was modelled to represent and it faithfully fulfilled this intention. Cloth of gold and of silver, overwrought with beads, lace the patterns of which were traced in bullion and in paillettes of gorgeous tints and, in fact, an array of transcendently lovely stuff, which when disclosed at the opening of the season will set every woman to planning glory gowns; such are the new trimmings. The Egyptian note finds final expression in the diadem of semi-precious stones and the long, tortuous snake bracelet which comes as an accessory of the costume, rather than a separate article of jewelry. The fruit designs, so long popular as hat trimming and in decorative schemes, have now found their way into laces and upon the newest ones in deep beige, apples, pears and peaches are reproduced in the natural tints of the living fruit.

New Gloves at Old Prices.

Away back to prices of several seasons ago are the prices on kid gloves in the big annual sale at that store whose sale is not seventh in importance, whatever it may be as to location on Broadway. "Why, we have paid more than a dollar for such gloves for seasons and seasons!" exclaimed one of us who were examining them.

Another Extreme.

At the other end of Broadway is another extreme in price as well as location in the costume. Shoes—just when shoes are highest—at the same old prices as when that store first instituted an annual sale of footwear for a single big round silver piece. After all, are not the high prices of shoes largely a matter of our demand for fancy footwear? Not so very long ago we were content with plain black shoes for nearly all occasions; but now we scarcely think of wearing black, and, in fact, fancy shoes have become as much a matter of course as have silks and satins, velvets and plushes. To be sure, black shoes are coming in to some extent this season, but they are not the plain, modest, unassuming black shoes of seasons past. In fact, a black shoe, to be acceptable, must be quite extraordinary, as must a black dress or coat, or in fact anything of black. Quality must be there, if nowhere else, as cheap black looks its part more glaringly than do colors.

Cretonnes for Less.

Not an odds 'n ends sale, where you may purchase but a yard or two—and not a sale wherein the qualities are inferior, but a sale of excellent cretonnes in attractive patterns and in whole pieces, so that you may furnish your room throughout if you so wish. This is an offering from the household section in that great annual sale which we all have been fully appreciating during the month. Just half price for those cretonnes on Monday.

Upon Fashion's Sign Posts.

When we talk of longer dress skirts let us not forget that we in the West have never attained to the extreme brevity of the skirts worn in New York or in Paris.

A skirt of plaid with inset panels of plain material affords a means of making a narrow skirt wider.

Nothing is prettier than skunk fur for trimming the green costumes we shall surely see in the autumn.

What could be more dainty than a wide drooping hat with crown of tiny ruffles made of narrow ribbon?

There is nothing more becoming than flesh color, and at present entire frocks are made of dainty materials in it.

Bordered veils are worn with the border part over the hat, the plain part being all that shows over the face.

A bunch of ribbon flowers in green, cerise and pink can be prettily worn at the waist of an all-gray crepe dress.

The entire crown of a sailor hat may be made of a striped material, this being all the trimming the hat will have.

With a piece of heavy silk and a number of bright beads the clever woman can make for herself a charming and fashionable bag.

OVER THE SEA.

Boris V. Sturmer, who succeeded M. Goremkin as president of the Russian Imperial Council, and who assumes the duties of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, has always been prominent in bureaucratic affairs. His early career was devoted to provincial government posts. He was for fourteen years master of ceremonies of the imperial court. Prior to his appointment to the Imperial Council he had for many years taken little part in political affairs.

Ichiya Kumagae, who recently won the New York State tennis singles championship, is an affable young Japanese. He has participated in tournaments in his own country, in the Philippines, and on the Pacific Coast. With all tennis players from Great Britain and Australia shut off from participation in contests this summer, much of the foreign-guest honors of the season in the United States will go to this alert, shrewd, indefatigable young Asiatic.

Herman Koedel, a member of the submarine merchantman Deutschland's crew, is the last surviving member of a "little German band" of eight members which held forth in Pittsburgh before the war broke out. Koedel and his companions all returned to the Fatherland and took service in the navy, to which the other seven have sacrificed their lives.

The report that Gen. Alexei Kuropatkin has been appointed Governor-General of Turkestan marks the passing of another great military figure into practical retirement. Like Von Moltke, like French, like the Grand Duke Nicholas, Kuropatkin has been removed from high military command because, in the judgment of his government, he has failed. But Kuropatkin's case is distinctive because it is the second time he has been retired in the midst of a great campaign.

Victor Christian William Cavendish, Duke of Devonshire, who succeeds the Duke of Connaught as Governor-General of Canada, was born in 1868. He was educated at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge, and at the age of 23 he entered Parliament as member for West Derbyshire, a seat which he retained until he succeeded to the peerage. From 1900 to 1903 he was treasurer to His Majesty's household, and for the next two years financial secretary to the treasury. Last year he became a civil lord of the Admiralty. In 1909 he became chancellor of the University of Leeds, and on New Year's Day this year he was created a Knight of the Garter. The Duke married, in 1892, Lady Evelyn Fitzmaurice, elder daughter of the Marquis of Lansdowne, and they have two sons and five daughters.

BILL'S BACHELOR LETTER.

Dear Mildred:

Thanks. You flatter me. But your excuse is hollow.
The bad example set by man no woman needs to follow.
In things like these that hardly please one's sense of obligation,
The poorest form of flattery is foolish imitation.
Be modern, chic, Bohemian, a flirt, a suffragette;
Be anything you like, but oh!—cut out the cigarette!
The scientists are all agreed—who would such habits bar—
The pesky "pill" is deadlier than the pipe or the cigar.
So if to ape the masculine you think your sex is ripe,
Why don't you do the thing up brown and sport a briar pipe?
Ye gods! to think love's perfumed breath, once dear to soulful dreamers,
Now mingles masculine cheroots with feminine Fatimas!
Though, Mildred, "smokes for women" is the latest fad you preach,
It is to Bill a custom still best honored in the breach.
Your kind invite for Monday night I fear I must refuse—
I'm one of many thousands here awaiting Charlie Hughes,
Who comes to tell our people certain things we ought to know—
So to the Auditorium that night I mean to go;
And since the vote increased responsibilities has brought you,
To learn how best to use it, there I gladly will escort you.
It's just as well, as hard facts tell, some time to set apart
For issues that affect the head more nearly than the heart.
In California Charlie Hughes is but a short time resident,
So come along and join the throng to greet our future President.
You ask me what I mean to do and hint that it appears
I'm adding nothing useful to my many wasted years.
You say that I'm the slave of time—O conscienceless abuser!
Now learn that William's going to be a gorgeous world-producer.
I read that grown 'neath western skies, in valleys warm and sunny,
The California cucumber is just a chunk of money.
I've bought a big Imperial ranch and soon in countless numbers
I mean to ship by carload lots my good-as-gold cucumbers.
We've heard of sugar barons, bacon lords, potato dukes,
But Bill will head the honor list when called the "King of Kukes."
What time the plow turns up my land, the hoe its rich soil tickles,
The William brand of cucumber will flood the world with pickles.
It will be vain to say again, as you have oft told others,
That I have ne'er had any share in feeding hungry brothers.
The cucumber, unlike the weed whose solace you invoke,
May rise again in heartburn but will never end in smoke.
But there—of so much lecture I expect you've had your fill,
So come and puff the pipe of peace

With yours,

PRODUCER BILL.

THE MORALS OF ARTISTS.

Great Musicians and Writers and Their Troubles With Women—Peculiarities of the Musicianly Temperament and the Freaks of Genius.

BY JEANNE REDMAN.

WHAT is the strange chemical in a musician's make-up that is responsible for his eccentricities, his misfortunes—which are not like anybody else's on earth—his unaccountable raptures and his equally unaccountable sufferings? His head is of a different shape than the ordinary man's, to be sure, and his hair is different, and all the outward signs are different, but that seems more easily explained than the fact that his morals are usually different.

There are those who would like to tell you that his morals are just the same as his brother's, and that because he is in the public eye his difficulties are dragged out in print—vulgar thing, print—and aired for the amusement of the readers of Sunday supplements. But that is not true. The fact is that he really is different. What are you going to do with the examples that go to prove it? What are you going to say of the temperament of Alfred de Musset, who could not endure a crack in his wall at Venice, and who insisted that Georges Sand—poor, long-suffering woman—sit up all night in front of the crack to hide it? If you say that he was simply posing, and that the crack did not hurt him any more than it would have hurt any one of a dozen men, then what of the fact that any one of the same dozen would place a burnt leather piece with large yellow poppies stamped upon it as a cover on a table in the center of a room, but the sight of such a thing would probably have sent Alfred into hysterics.

If Chopin did not feel the terror which he is said to have felt when he thought he saw hosts of ghostly monks stalking past him as he sat at the piano, would he have been able to put that very terror into music? Perhaps he didn't put it in; perhaps we, who think we hear it, only hypnotise ourselves into thinking we hear it, and it's all pose and balderdash. Perhaps the association of ideas does it, and when we are told that this is the prelude which Chopin composed when under the stress of this cold terror, we imagine we see the monks, too, as the spell is cast over us. But I assure you that there really are such things as purple tones, and that there are yellow sounds, square and round sounds, and that all you have to do to hear them is to have the peculiar bump which the artist has, and which aids him to see other things which the average man cannot see. It may not be an advantage to see sounds and to hear colors, but nevertheless the artist does that very thing.

Richard Wagner said that he would give up all his art if in exchange he could have a family—a wife, some children, and, I am almost certain he added, chickens. There was a generous streak in Wagner. He never snubbed the lower animals and he showed a decided predilection for fowl. Rostand's "Chanticler" would have won him completely. For artists are not always good critics, and Wagner would have been enchanted with the barnyard. Art is a severe taskmaster, and most artists wish that they were anything else on earth besides artists. It is a frightful life, and one so full of strange misfortune that it seems as though more dreadful and mysterious horrors could happen to artists than to any other kind of human beings.

Artists court trouble, and, so far as art is concerned, they thrive upon it. I mean that they would never do much for art's sake without it. Of course, there is Rupert Brooke, who never had a care, and who left a considerable lot of verse, but he is an exception. Most artists work to keep the wolf from the door. Pension your poets and see how little poetry they will turn out. Art is largely a matter of moods and nothing short of necessity can order a mood to suit. I do not mean to say that an artist would not work effectively if not under pressure; I simply mean that he would not work at all. Of course, there is such a thing as ambition, but it abounds among American business men and not so much among artists. Poe wrote for the dying Virginia as he never would have written without her as an impetus. And Theophile Gautier would not work save under such pressure as his father afforded by literally locking him up in a room without anything in it but paper and pencils until a certain amount had been written—and who shall say that it was not artistic to the last degree when it came out?

One hears of writers, Flaubert, for example, who were so very eager that the work which they produced should be perfect that they would take agonising pains to make it so. Flaubert had a music stand, the tale goes, and he stood in front of it with his copy sheets before and a baton in his hand, reading and intoning his phrases aloud and polishing them endlessly. Be he did little work compared with Balzac, who had no style at all and wrote against time to keep his creditors from throwing him into jail. Balzac sold himself to publishers and worked eighteen hours a day. Of course, it killed him, but had he lived a life of ease would he have written "The Human Comedy?"

Georges Sand was another who wrote on already borrowed money. That surely is the farthest thing from inspiration imaginable. To borrow money from the grubbing publisher and then sit down to compose masterpieces to pay him! And to obtain what? The means to take her poor invalid lovers south for the winter! Sand threw pots at her deserving husband and tossed her son-in-law downstairs, but she was the essence of tolerance with her talented lovers. It is true that she got enough of it before she was through. She says somewhere, after she had paid the last cent out in vacations to Italy: "As for great men, may they be carved in marble and cast in bronze, but may I have no more to do with them." And she was quite right. If there can be anything worse to deal with than a genius it hasn't yet made its appearance upon this globe. Of course, there was Disraeli, who was the quintessence of liveableness, from all accounts, but what man would not be whose wife was a Lady Beaconsfield? Is there a man, even a great one, who would not be able to live in peace with a woman who was such an abject angel? The wives of artists should be angels; otherwise there is no living with them for the great man.

Poverty is scarcely the worst evil that can come to an artist. They have all sorts of what George Eliot calls "sentimental troubles," and which torture their sensibilities as much, almost, as not being able to pay the rent. There is the case of Malibran, the great dramatic soprano, who was perfectly happy living with De Beriot, although she always "took a good bowl of milk before going to dine with him," and was entirely unhappy, to the point of running away, with the husband who appeased her appetite. Women don't mind starvation. That is a tragic sorrow and easily borne. It is hunger that torments. There is something so indefinite about hunger, something so uncertain and unfinished. And it is very much easier to love a man who positively cannot keep one in food than a man who can supply one with cheap cuts. Be it said to their advantage, then, that most artists are not even able to get the cheap cuts.

The truth about the famed domestic difficulties of artists is that they never known how to get out of things. It is pitiable and incredible to read of how long they have lived under impossible conditions without, apparently, the slightest realisation that things are not all static. One may recover from a state of mind and one may change a situation without disrupting the entire universe, but your true musician rarely realizes it, and even more rarely knows how to go about getting out of hot water. If the average man is in a position which does not fit he extricates himself, but the number of artists who have been unhappily married, for example, and who have remained so to the end of their lives, is legion. There is always a forlorn wife in the background from whom it would be much more decent to part definitely. But the artist lacks initiative.

The artist and women! What a host of delusions there are about artists and women! The only trouble with the artist is that he invariably makes use in his works of the women he has loved, and that gives the impression of heartlessness. The truth probably is that the man of business is just as unreliable as the artist, but he keeps his tales to himself, or at least within the radius of his club, while the artist writes about his, or sings about them. Personally, it appears rather more of a compliment, if that is what women want from men, to be sung about or written about and thus projected in some form into the future, than merely to be recounted over the bridge table. Of course, one is aware that men don't do such things, but it's just as well never to have any too positive convictions upon the subject.

Now, with Massenet, his women will live for ever in his music. Who can forget Sybil Sanderson so long as Massenet's music lives? And who can forget Goethe's Gretchen? Goethe deserves much credit for allowing so many of his loves to attain immortality. Where would they ever have got it otherwise? It is not true that all the women who are loved by artists are more worthy to be kept in the memory of the public than the average hausfrau. Some of them were not worthy at all except for the fact that they were loved by the great. What possible claim could Rousseau's poor Therese have had upon posterity except that she was Rousseau's Therese? Of course, she paid a high price for the privilege; everybody who had anything to do with Rousseau paid, for he was one of the finest examples of a cad that has ever been vouchsafed us for our observation and protection. He is harder to forgive than any other great man. He is the figure who holds you up when you try Victor Hugo's "To understand all is to forgive all," or Robert Louis Stephenson's "The man who cannot forgive any mortal thing is a green hand at life." If we could understand Rousseau's caddishness—but how understand a man who steals ribbons, and who puts the blame on a young servant girl and has her dismissed for his offense? What was it he wanted with the ribbon anyway? Or was it a ribbon? At any rate, he gave his poor Therese immortality?

And Turgenev gave immortality to the little peasant girl, and gave us a line on himself at the same time. He knew a simple little peasant girl in Russia, and on leaving for Petrograd one time asked her what she wanted him to bring her. "A cake of perfumed soap," she said, "and when you come back I shall wash my hands in it, and then you will kiss my hands as you kiss those of the great ladies in Petrograd." "That," says Turgeneuv, in quoting her answer, "was the greatest moment of my life." Now, what stockbroker could do more for a girl? In the first place that would not be the greatest moment of a stockbroker's life. I don't suppose it was the greatest of Turgenev's; but the fact that he said so, in artistic terms, is all the girl needs to insure her immortality.

Yes, after all, artists have made women. Women would be very ordinary creatures, as men are, if it hadn't been for the enthusiasms of artists. And, of course, they kill the things they love. Women have more to contend with and fewer of the comforts so dear to middle life when living with artists than with any other sort of men. Artists demand youth, that most elusive of all treasures, and when that is gone they have little use for the objects of their late affection. They are candid, but they do not know what to do about the situation, hence they suffer, and so does the woman, endlessly.

Venus, you see, never ate, but women, alas! must eat or die, and they hate to die.

And then they have rights over the artist, if he has married them, and having rights over an artist is just as futile to the woman who has them as it is disagreeable to the artist over whom she sways. Some artists avoid matrimony. "Nothing," says Merimee, in the "Letters to an Unknown," "makes me so melancholy as marriage." But most artists fall, and the relics of the catastrophe make as good reading as the best work the artist could do with the cause of the trouble as his heroine.

An Era of Color in Furniture

THE present remarkable popularity of color in furniture marks the revival of one of the most important and influential furniture styles of the eighteenth century.

Picture the effect of an artistic stand or table or chair or other furniture piece in Imperial yellow or Chinese red or green or blue, with contrasting decorations, introduced into a room of somber mahogany. It lends cheer, life, freshness—a color contrast that brings out the latent beauty of the other furnishings and entirely transforms the atmosphere of the room.

Today if one desires the home to be correctly furnished it is almost essential to employ at least a few of these decorated pieces. And there is every practical reason to believe that it will continue to increase in popularity because it provides such a wide latitude of possibilities for effective furnishing.

The "California" shows some very wonderful examples of this revived art in furniture—desks, tables, stands, cabinets, chests, chairs and other pieces in unusual colors, in striking yet harmonious contrast.

Some of the pieces are finished in lacquer, others in enamel. Where desired the hand decoration may be done to order so that special motifs or family insignia may be incorporated.

Those who are interested in the advanced art of home-furnishing are invited to come and see these new creations at the "California." Like everything else here this furniture is marked in plain figures at its real commercial worth and not at its novelty value.

Some interesting examples of "color in furniture" are presented in one of our windows this week.

In other words, it meets a long-felt want, with us as well as with the everyday man of Japan. It depicts, with wonderful force, sympathy and humor, the life he knows, and its comparative absence of symbolism permits us, too, to understand that life.

Favorite actors, well-known women of beauty, scenes from Fugi and famous rivers, street scenes, the occupations of home life—these are the subjects of Utamara, Hokusai, Yeizan, Kunisada and a host of other great designers for the wood block, furnishing us with an almost complete graphic record of the life of the Japanese less than a century ago.

For "old" Japanese prints are not nearly so old as everyone but the collector is apt to think they are, though they are still so old that the new will not take their place, for there was a time when the new were poor in design and meretricious in color. Conditions are better today, however, and the new color print may yet revive the glories of the old—perfect placement of design, seal and signature, perfect distribution of lights and darks, perfect harmony of color schemes.

Contrary to popular belief, the color print is not an invention of the Japanese—for the Japanese, as we know, invent nothing—but are an imitation of European prints of the Middle Ages, brought into Japan by the missionaries of that remote period. The missionaries were finally killed, but the prints remained—to be killed, in their turn, by the greed of the European collector. Sic transit!

Two small collections of Japanese prints and one of surimonos are now exposed in the printroom at Exposition Park. The surimonos—small square imprints sent to friends to commemorate special occasions—are even more attractive than the prints, and come from the Sargent collection. Seventeen of the prints are from the collection of K. Kajima of Los Angeles, the other nine are from the collection of A. Wakao.

Eleven of the Kajima collection are signed by Hiroshige, either with this name or one of his numerous aliases. Very lovely is "Bird and Loquats," in blue and white, with little accents of pink in two places. In "Ebbing Tide at Shiba, Yeddo Bay," we have a scheme of blue and red, with bulging foreground sails in black and white. "Fishing Boats as Seen from Yeitai Bridge, Yeddo," is in blue and gray, the headlands rising dark beyond the bay, the foreground showing the graceful lines of the bridge. "Ohashi Bridge in Rain," a wonderfully effective and beautiful print, has a gray sky over gray-blue water, with a dark gray line of trees. "Riogoku Bridge in Moonlight" is strong in composition. "Hawk on Cherry Blossom Tree" is delicately toned, and "The Village of Kambara" gives us a subtle effect of white and wet snow on land slopes and houses.

Yeisen is represented by two exceedingly good things, "Night Scene at Fukaya Station" and "Snow Landscape with Pine Road, Itabana." In the first many figures are placed in a deep shadow of deep and tender lavender, while in the foreground a segment of bright light is cast upward by a lantern. In the second we have snow well rendered and a very attractive pattern in the branches of the trees.

In the surimono by Shunman, "Girls with Koto and Biwa," the two girls are distinguished by grace of posture as they bend over their musical instruments, and their flowered gowns and flowing headdresses give delicate animation of color. "Girl with Scroll," picturing a Chinese type rather than a Japanese, is an exquisite scheme of duns, pale purples and greens. The artist is Keisai. "New Year's Scene," also by Keisai, shows us three figures—a woman baking rice cakes, a man writing New Year's cards, and a child eagerly watching them. "Girl with Fan, Silver Embossed," by Hokusai, has fine rhythm in the flowing red gown, brocaded and heavily bordered. "Artist and Samurai," Toyokuni, shows us the clever artist "showing off" by balancing a bowl in one hand while he bends over and draws with the other. His robe is a wonderful blue spotted with apple yellow butterflies.

Mr. Kojima, who is a Los Angeles banker, has written an authoritative book on Japanese prints, and he is at present engaged on another, to be published by Fenollosa in Boston.

The three small collections I have just spoken of will remain at Exposition Park for some time.

Old Spanish Masters.

The atmosphere of old Spain still lingers in Southern California. Beautiful relics of its architecture remain, and the modern revival of it in the building of homes in our cities and villages is generally well understood and in good taste. Though these charming houses, wide-spreading with their flowering pergolas and cool interior courts, are now a little too bright and new, time will soon tone them to perfect beauty.

Southern California is the appropriate and logical place in which to show a collection of paintings by old Spanish masters, for here they are in their native air—or at any rate in air more akin than any other in America. The eternal fitness of things has been observed even further in the housing of the collection sent out from the Ehrich galleries in New York, in that it is being exploited by the Spanish Arts Society in Glenwood Mission Inn, an hostelry that breathes the very spirit of Spain.

The exhibition opened yesterday, to continue for two months in the room known as the Spanish Gallery of the Inn. The thirty pictures, most of them from the Golden Age of Spanish painting, are absolutely authentic, and we can study them with the certainty that we are not admiring and reverencing something unworthy of our love, some base counterfeit of the truth. An account of the pictures will appear in this column next week. Meanwhile, I offer you a list of the notable names and canvases.

From Carreno, who executed some important frescos in the palaces of Philip IV, we have "Portrait of Infanta Margarita" and "The Assumption." From Goya we have two portraits, "Queen Maria Louisa" and "Duc d'Osuna." From El Greco, "St. Francis," a sketch for the well-known picture in the Prado, "The Portrait of a Man" and "Madonna and Child." From Morales, "Madonna and Child." From Moya, "Head of a Man." From Pantoja, "Portrait of a Lady." From Ribalta, "St. Veronica's Handkerchief," showing the head of Christ painted in a masterly manner. From Sevilla, "Madonna and Child." From Zurbaran, "Portrait of Miguel del Pozo," "Santa Lucia," "Daughters of De Roeblas" and "San Pedro Nolasco."

From Murillo, we have "St. Dominic Receiving Rosary from the Virgin." From Antonio Puga, "A Spanish Dentist." From Valdes, "The Annunciation." From Ribera, "St. Jerome." From Espinosa, "Archangel Gabriel" and Angel with Crown." From Alonzo Coello, "Portrait of Isabella Clara Eugenia." From Claudio Coello, "Portrait of a Lady" and "A Knight of the Golden Fleece." From Sebastian Gomez, "La Toilette" and "Assumption of the Virgin." From Jose Antonilez, "Portrait of a Man" and "St. John." From Eugenio Lucas the Elder, "Procession Attacked by a Bull." From Liano, "Portrait of Spanish Prince."

No student of art can afford to miss seeing these old Spanish masters, no true lover of art will neglect them.

Europe's war lord,

As he appears on the screen when interpreted by Signor Pietro Buzzi, noted musician, who has been featured as the Kaiser in a Universal production.

Double.

NO, HE'S NOT KAISER.

Signor Buzzi, However, Fears that His Ally Friends may Think He is when They See Him on the Screen in New Universal Production.

Signor Pietro Buzzi is not looking for trouble. Nevertheless, he wonders whether or not his English, French and Italian friends will be looking for him after a certian picture being made by the Universal company is released, and whether they will come as friend or foe.

Signor Buzzi possesses a mustache which likens him so remarkably to the Kaiser that the Universal company, for which he has been working, decided to star him as the war lord of Europe in a feature production.

The resemblance is so striking that Buzzi fears that his friends will forget that he is a staunch supporter of the Italian cause, and try to mob him, when he appears on the screen. (He's very glad it isn't the stage.) One Englishman, working with him in the picture, said he looked so much like the German Emperor that he felt like punching him.

The one saving factor is that Signor Buzzi is shortly to star as the late Lord Kitchener and other war notables. He may also appear as Carranza.

Signor Buzzi is well known in this city from his connection with musical activities, having conducted the Verdi School of Singing for a number of years. He is continuing his musical work, but devotes a portion of the day to film acting, which he took up when his physician advised outdoor exercise for the preservation of his health.

Signor Buzzi had little difficulty in breaking himself in to work in pictures because of his stage experience, he says. He has appeared in six or seven pictures, mainly a foreign type. He is also now writing a scenario about the life of an Italian musical artist.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

John Smith, aged 96, got into a fight in Freeport, R. I., the other day and broke his wrist in striking his antagonist.

Mrs. Charlotte Freeman of West Everett, Mass., who reached the age of 95 years on Friday, observed the event by staying up until midnight, and she also danced a little at a party held in honor of her birthday.

Joshua Barker, the oldest citizen of Woburn, Mass., was 96 years old last week. He is perhaps the last of the old-time "square rigger" ship builders, a trade that he plied for many years. Now, at 96, he tends a market garden of considerable size, as he has done for many years. He enjoys excellent health and attributes his long life to regular living, to retiring early and rising with the sun.

L. S. Arnold of Shawnee, Okla., 102 years old, is on a trip to Pittsburg, Kan., with his wife. He is hale and hearty and boasts of such boyish agility that he stood on his hands in the union station at Wichita to emphasize the fact.

the slave. He satirizes England and extols Ireland by the simple process of locating his plays in the kingdom of mind where he has nothing to do with time or place. He strikes at the faults of nations with the white sheet lightning of brilliant satire, and all the time he uses the terms and the symbology of the Orient.

If anyone doubts how clearly this young man saw some of the recent public events, years before they happened, let him read "King Argimenes and the Unknown Warrior."

Lord Dunsany is only about 30 years of age and if he continues to abandon himself to his fine inspiration it should not be long before he is recognized as the most poetic voice of both Ireland and England. He has a touch that is magical. If he has a single fault, it is that he is almost too fine and subtle. His humor is the most delicate and poignant of any living playwright.

This is the last week of the present engagement of Mary Servoss at the Morosco, and I am sure that I voice the dictum of 95 per cent. of the theatergoers in this city when I say that Mr. Morosco may make us live without Mary Servoss, but he cannot make us like it. She is beyond question the most delightful and capable leading woman who has been seen in stock here in the past eight years. She has a splendid candor that holds everything about her in a white light.

There is more to acting than merely knowing lines and reading them well. The right stage interpretation has a brain, a heart and a spirit, just as truly as persons have. Miss Servoss makes every one of her creations luminous to an entrancing degree. Her women compel us through their very sincerity.

While Miss Servoss leaves Los Angeles, she remains with Mr. Morosco, and it is to be hoped that he will bring her back to us again, for Los Angeles deserves more than to be made merely the starting point out of which big things proceed. We are entitled to keep a few of our best discoveries for our own use.

Los Angeles wants Mary Servoss.

EDUCATORS.

The most popular parson in Great Britain today, and the only one that wears the Victoria Cross, is Rev. Edward Noel Melish, the East London (Deptford) curate, who during the fighting at St. Eloi went out time after time under shell fire and brought in wounded men on his back. A public ovation was given him a few days ago, and as he rode through the streets with the troops he was cheered by women and children who came out of streets and alleys and courts by thousands. The boys of Deptford have organized a guard of honor for "the fighting parson."

The Rev. E. R. Clemmens, pastor of the Montgomery Baptist Church, Montgomeryville, Pa., performed the first wedding ever held in the church, which is now 197 years old, when he married Miss Elsie Sigafoos of Colmar to John K. Lockwood of Philadelphia.

Prof. Ludwig Hektoen, head of the department of pathology in the University of Chicago, received from the University of Wisconsin at its recent commencement the honorary degree of doctor of science. Prof. Hektoen has been director of the Memorial Institute for Infectious Diseases since 1902 and editor of the Journal of Infectious Diseases since 1904. He was for twelve years a member of the Occupational Disease Commission of Illinois, has been president of the Chicago Pathological Society and also president of the Association of American Pathologists and Bacteriologists.

Rev. Cyril Alington has been made head master of Eton College to succeed Canon Lyttelton because the latter had too pronounced German leaning. The new head master is a brother-in-law of Canon Lyttelton, but is a man of entirely different type.

LEAVES OF JOY FROM A TRAVELER'S NOTEBOOK.

BY HARRY CARR.

DURING the time I was with the German army, I didn't see but three drunken men. Strictly speaking, I didn't see but one. I heard the other two.

But, oh, they were so very, very drunk!

The only one that I actually saw was on the battlefield of Novo Georgievsk. The great Russian fortress had fallen that morning very early.

An orderly made the rounds of our hotel rooms. Knocking on each door, he cried out, "Novo Georgievsk ist gefallen." We started at once for the scene in a big automobile bus.

The fortress was on fire and the sky was lurid with smoke and flame as we came up from Warsaw. We could see it for miles. Tearing along the roads from Warsaw, we passed hospital ambulances loaded with wounded; German batteries of artillery plodding back through the rain on the way to the next battle which happened to be at Brest Litovsk. We passed thousands upon thousands of Russian prisoners dragging themselves wearily back to the rear, there to wait for the prison trains. A background for all these scenes was for us the fortress flaming against the sky.

As we approached the burning fort, we saw soldiers pouring from every direction down an open field. The now famous Kaiser review was about to take place. The great German battalions were gathering.

A big Benz car swept up to the roadside and a man enveloped in a gray cloak got out. It was Wilhelm II. This would have been the most impressive moment I ever lived through if my eye hadn't caught a picture down the opposite slope of a little hill.

A German soldier, spificated to the eyebrows, came along the road leading a brindle calf. Behind him walked the Polish peasant woman who owned the calf. Between them they were taking it to the German quartermaster to be purchased for the army. I may remark parenthetically that all these animals needed for the army were religiously paid for on the spot by the German officers. In her delight at selling the calf, the peasant woman had apparently "set 'em up" for the German soldier. I don't know what they make Polish wine out of, but they have a brand called "pedro," two glasses of which would put an army corps under the table.

The soldier's eyes were glazed and his feet were sliding all over the road, but he was trying to lead the calf with the dignity of one witnessing a Kaiser review. As he walked along leading the calf he even threw in a goose step or two to meet the requirements of the situation.

The brindle calf, however, did not clearly understand the significance of a Kaiser review. He had never seen a Kaiser review before and he didn't like the looks of it. Without the slightest warning, he suddenly turned around and made a dive in the general direction of Petrograd.

The soldier's distinguished heels flew up in the air and he lit on the back of his collar in a puddle of mud. He got up full of offended dignity and marched indignantly upon the offending bovine. The calf waited with its head down for his approach. As he got within about ten feet, the spificated infantryman made a headlong dive for the beast. The calf saw him coming and sidestepped him; and the German soldier made a grand head-first slide on his ear through the mud.

The last I saw of the calf he was gracefully ducking back and forth and the infantryman was making a series of sensational Charley Chaplin slides on his nose through the mud.

Then I heard a clear, strong voice speaking in the center of the great square of soldiers and I forgot all about the calf. It was the Emperor of Germany speaking to his soldiers.

We scarcely breathed. Peeking through the interval between two enormously tall German guardsmen, I could see the Kaiser himself leaning on a cane, a long gray cloak thrown back over one shoulder. As he talked his remarkable eyes ran along the line of the soldiers as though he saw every button of every uniform. His voice died away. We saw him pin Iron Crosses on three or four soldiers who advanced from the line and stood before him.

Then we heard his clear strong voice pierce the stillness again.

"Adieu, kameraden," he said. And from the gray legions rose a great cry that seemed to shake the earth, "Adieu, Majestat."

The Kaiser review was at an end. I almost unconsciously looked around to find the soldier who had been leading the calf.

We got back in our automobile and whirled on toward the burning fortress. Half a mile down the road we saw the brindle calf. Half a dozen soldiers were making a vain attempt to capture him. He was dodging them all with ridiculous ease. One of them finally managed to catch hold of his tail as the calf passed and was yanked off his feet and into the mud.

The tipsy soldier had given up the quest. He was a quarter of a mile farther down the road, acting as official reception committee for the German empire. An almost endless procession of Russian prisoners was marching dejectedly down the road on the way to the prison camps of Warsaw. Most of them were in command of their own officers. There was no possible way for them to escape, so the Germans were sending them back to the rear "on their own."

The sizzled soldier was standing at the fork of the road, and as each regiment of Russian prisoners passed by, he took off his fatigue cap and swept them a magnificent bow of welcome. Between regiments he marched up and down with a stately although very circuitous and wavering tread; he was trying to look very stern and impressive.

I heard a horn in the distance. The Kaiser's car was coming. "Now," I thought, "this is where this poor old drunk will get his."

If I hadn't been afraid of attracting the attention of the German officer in command of our own party I would have slipped down and told him to get out of sight. But anyhow, I didn't speak enough German.

But the providence that watches over fools and drunken men got on the job. Just before the Emperor's car came in sight, the drunk caught sight of a company of Russian automobile drivers who had been taken prisoner and were on the way to the rear in charge of a Russian sergeant. It somehow impressed the drunk that they needed watching. When they came along he saluted with great impressiveness, and as they trudged off down the road he fell in abreast of their leader and marched away with them, his chest stuck out like a pouter pigeon's and his hands waving in gorgeous and regal gestures. That was the last I saw him, the only drunken soldier I ever saw.

The other drunks were officers assisted by an American correspondent.

James O'Donnell Bennett of the Chicago Tribune and I were roommates at the hotel in Warsaw. One night we were kept awake by a most astounding combination of sounds that floated up to us from the courtyard. At breakfast time we demanded an explanation of a young man whom we suspected.

He was the correspondent of a big New York daily and a most charming young fellow, but an abandoned "kidder." All the time at the front in Russia he insisted on carrying a copy of Browning's poems, which he read aloud within the sound of the guns because, as he said, he was afraid the horrors of war would dull his appreciation of art.

He gave us the following account of the revelry we had heard:

An Austrian pioneer officer and a Prussian cavalryman and himself had been having dinner and this Pedro wine made insidious progress against them.

In the middle of the proceedings the Austrian began to make a speech.

"We are 'Kaiser men,'" he said. "We don't bother about Austria. We are for the Austrian Kaiser, Franz Josef. We fight anybody the Kaiser tells us to. If he tells us to fight France, we fight France. If he tells us to fight America, we fight America. If he tells us to fight Prussia (here he leaned over until his nose was within two inches of the Prussian's face,) we will fight Prussia, and don't you forget it."

At this the Prussian was insulted. He got up, unsteadily, but with terrible dignity, and left the dining-room.

When the American, as an ambassador of peace, went to bring the Prussian back to smoke the pipe of peace, he found him in the men's toilet standing in the middle of the room with his nose in the air and an expression of scorn upon his face. He was finally induced to come back and the American finally got the two officers to shake hands.

It was felt, however, that the breach should be healed more formally. Someone proposed that they should sing the national anthem in token of the restoration of kind feelings.

This was agreed to, but an awful question immediately arose, which threatened to wreck the newly-made peace. Which national anthem should they sing? The Prussian insisted that it should be the "Watch on the Rhine" and the Austrian insisted that they should sing the national air of Austria. The American on the other hand stood firm for the "Star Spangled Banner."

When the German was looking sternly aagin in the direction of the door and was getting unsteadily to his feet, the American again came to the rescue. He suggested that they should sing all the national airs. This was agreed to, but someone asked which they should sing first.

"The Watch on the Rhine," said the Prussian, sternly. "That we will sing first."

"Never," said the Austrian, rising in his chair and wagging his head.

"Not on your life," said the American.

The Prussian was again starting for the door when the American got another hunch. "We will sing them all at the same time," he said. So at a given signal they started in. As the words of the "Star Spangled Banner" came to an end first, the American couldn't see how he could patriotically stop, hence, he started in again at the beginning. The Austrian tune gave out next and the Austrian began at the beginning again. When the Prussian finally wound up the "Watch on the Rhine" the others were still at it, so he plunged in the opening again. So those three tipsy chumps sat there half the night singing the songs of their home lands over and over again, each filled with a boozy resolve never to be the first to abandon his own particular tune.

"Well, that's all right," said Bennett to the correspondent. "But the next time you try Pedro wine, do it with a couple of deaf and dumb people."

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Miss Daisy Davies, president of the Female College at La Grange, Ga., is the first woman to occupy that office in the history of the institution.

Miss Audreta Griswold and Miss Emily Hammus of New York have been chosen from a great number of applicants to spend a month in the Adirondacks living the "primitive life," to prove that women as well as men can live in the woods by their own devices and with what nature offers.

Mrs. Lillian Mitchner of Topeka has been appointed superintendent of the industrial school for girls at Beloit. She succeeds Miss Frankie Wilson of Independence, who recently resigned.

Appointment of Miss Loueen Pattee, Evanston, Ill., as dean of women at the University of Cincinnati, has been announced by President Charles Dabney. Miss Pattee succeeds Miss Emilie McVea, who resigned to become president of Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, Va. Prior to the European war Miss Pattee was head of a school for girls at Munich, Germany. She is an authority on German literature and has traveled extensively. Miss Pattee was born in Massachusetts. She received her first degree at Grinnell College, Iowa.

In order that she may take a place as teacher in Union College, Madras, India, permission has been given by the British government for Mabel E. Dibell of St. Paul to enter that country. She is a niece of Judge Homer B. Dibell of the Minnesota State Supreme Court, who asked Representative Clarence B. Miller to take the matter up with the British Embassy.

Mrs. Charles O. Bell of Denver, who recently celebrated her sixty-sixth birthday, is the largest dahlia grower in Colorado.

Miss Lillian G. Stafford, in a contest in which nearly 8500 persons took part, was awarded the first prize for the best slogan for the city of Brooklyn.

MEN AND EVENTS.

Henry N. Bushnell and Edward A. Fiske have been deacons in the Congregational Church of Waitsfield, Vt., for half a century and recently a reception was given for them at the end of their fiftieth year as deacons.

Two blind men have started a basket-making business near Worcester, Mass. They are Axel Carlson and August Kellstrom, each of whom lost his sight two years ago. They are raising their own willows and have half an acre now about two feet tall, in the rear of their little workshop.

Dr. P. J. Gibbons of New York has purchased the submarine Holland, known in the navy as "the mother of all submarines," and has presented it to the Commercial Museum in Philadelphia. Otherwise the boat would have been demolished for its metal.

J. Worten Keys has received the Democratic nomination for Sheriff of Saline county, Missouri, by a plurality of 264 votes. He has been a candidate for Sheriff at each election since 1880 and failed to win until this year. Keys told the voters he intended to run as long as he lived, if he failed to win, and that when he died he would leave a codicil to his will requiring one of his sons to stand for the office until he won. "I want to have one member of my family fill the Sheriff's office," is his explanation.

After forty-eight years of service for the Pennsylvania Railroad, most of them as a popular and generally-known passenger conductor between Philadelphia and Jersey City, Joseph Cooper of Bristol, Pa., has retired from railroading and become a pensioner. In the Centennial year Conductor Cooper won a prize of $150 for handling passengers most expeditiously, and comfortably, when the rush was so great as to cause all sorts of delays and annoyances to most train managers.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Miss Frances Fowler of No. 4 Kirkland place, Cambridge, Mass., last week sent 2000 hospital bags to soldiers in hospitals across the sea, and will send as many more in the future as friends of the movement will make. An average of 35,000 of these bags a month is required by the allied hospitals in France. The bags are used to put the few possessions of the wounded men into, in the way of letters, watches, pipes and trinkets, so that they may be saved to them if they recover, and if they die the bags are sent to their families. The Cunard Steamship Company carries the bags free from Boston to an English port.

One of the biggest legacies music has ever received is the $700,000 fund recently left by Bryan Lathrop of Chicago. The purpose of the bequest is expressed by Mr. Lathrop as follows: "The city of Chicago now has universities, technical schools, museums and an unsurpassed orchestra, but it has no public school of music, such as the Conservatoire of Paris, and it is, in my opinion, very desirable that an institution should be founded in Chicago in which an education can be obtained in the highest branches of music and music composition, not inferior to that provided in the cities of Europe."

Dr. J. William White of Philadelphia, who died recently, left a trust endowment of $150,000 to the University of Pennsylvania, of which he was a trustee. The income of the trust endowment is to be used to establish a professorship of surgical research to be named after the donor.

President Ernest Fox Nichols of Dartmouth College, recently announced the receipt of gifts totaling $100,000. Wallace F. Robinson of Boston gave 1224 shares of United Shoe Machinery stock, valued at $75,000.

The Citizens Soldiers' Aid Committee of Philadelphia has raised over $25,000 for the benefit of persons dependent on National Guardsmen for their support. About one-half of this money has already been paid to the families of the Pennsylvania men now on the Mexican border and the balance is at the disposal of the committee.

Haverford College, through its Board of Managers, has announced that in the will of the late Thomas Wistar Brown, for years president of the Board of Managers, a bequest of $350,000 had been made for special graduate work in socialogy, Biblical literature, philosophy and history. Hitherto the college has had no special graduate work, and six or seven graduates each year who have taken up additional work usually are honored with the reward of master of arts.

Other bequests also were announced. The Gideon Scull gift of a chair in English constitutional history was $146,000 instead of $100,000, as at first believed. This sum, together with the sale of land in West Philadelphia for $72,000, gives the college more than $560,000 for use next year.

An endowment fund of $50,000 has been raised by Rev. Frederick M. Kirkus for the old Swedes Church of Wilmington, Del., which recently celebrated its two hundredth and seventeenth anniversary.

HAPPY THOUGHT CLUB SYMPOSIUM.

BY EUGENE BROWN.

Shall the Happy Thought Club become international in its scope and character, or shall it confine its genial ministrations to home talent and the English-speaking races?

These questions are before the house as the sequence to an application for membership from a poetic son of Nippon, who mingles melon culture with writing pieces for the Japanese newspaper by day and hits out for the American night school when the stars come up. He wants to break into the Happy Thought Club as an educational institution. At the symposium yesterday the secretary read his communication, as follows:

To Honorable Secretary: Is it permission to allow on your insides one virtuous Japanese schoolboy of 40 years age and respectabul instink? My Japanese Sconsul say if I should teach how to write some poultry I should admit to your Glad Thinkso Assassination, so it is of which I send this you. I am all excite to write poultry, also in Japanese and American langwich. Like so so—here is it now:

Once across the ocean,
Here it was I come;
But all the time the motion,
She make me feel so bum.

I have said some poultry in Japanese, but not much in American langwich. These are among my first try. How can do so? I shall wait to hear of admittance to you. Oh, such love, such joy, if permit poor Japanese boy in this esteem company of word men, also of the women. I am not yet chance to go by voting booth, but if I shall be permit to write poultry with handsome gentlemen of Glad Thinkso Assassination I shall of happiness to croak. Wishing you the same.

HARIKARI SHIMOSE.

The honorable secretary wanted to know what action should be taken on the communication. The president said he didn't care to rule it out of order, as he realized that genius was not racial and that Shimose might be another Sadie Van Epps. At the same time he felt it might be wisdom to restrict the membership to those of citizenship in our glorious republic. In the absence of any fixed rule on the subject he would let the members decide for themselves.

The Cheerful Nut raised the point that the club had already extended honorary membership to Elsa Olson, the Swedish nightingale, and could not consistently raise the barrier against the Orient.

The question was finally referred to a committee composed of Prof. Watts Eaton Hughes, Gladys Canby and ex-Senator Waddy for report at a future meeting.

The yellow peril will be handled gently.

The club collection of campaign verse continues to be enriched by offerings from divers and sundry bards and bardines.

Violet Busby, the Coronado Circe, breezily offered this limerick:

"Now there's our good friend Charlie Hughes,
To be chieftain is what he would choose;
Tho' you can't see much face,
He's right there in the race—
And he'll drive all the others to booze."

Violet had been heard from before and is understood to be on the waiting list of the club.

E. Ebenezer Jenkins, the Jersey skeeter, once more broke forth into limerick with this disastrous result:

"There was a wise party named Hughes,
Who was harrassed by papers for news,
He said: "Lem'me lone,
Or, I'll be skin and bone,
And Fairbanks will get in my shoes."

It was decided to continue the competition of campaign verse. The club librarian will assemble the approved offerings in a scrapbook and on election day a beautiful loving cup designed from purest metal by the American Can Company will be presented to that bard or bardine whose creation is considered most meritorious.

The secretary reported a note from Mlle. Anne Teeter, formerly leading lady with Montie Secter's company of performing seals. She has also been a lion tamer and has had her picture in the paper as being relieved of superfluous hair by the use of Sandow's emery paper. She is now writing scenarios for the wild animal farm, and may get wild enough to act in them herself. She submitted to the club a touching little ballad—with the accent on the touch—dedicated to Oliver Towne, and running as follows:

How Bill was Paid.

That old Bill K. Lector is at the front door!
I'll duck right out under his nose;
He'll find there is Knott Adam Sent in the house,
For I Carrie McHale in my clothes.
The pert May d'Vollwerck is stalling him off,
Iva Hunch, with an argument funny,
The devil's to pay, but I've thought of a way—
He'll collect it from rich Auntie Money.

The old resident thought that Anne might be one of the Gold Dust Twins in disguise and he wanted her admitted at once. He thought she would go well with Dixie Friganza and Eva Tango, and they might be put out on the road as the Happy Thought team.

However, Anne will have to wait her turn.

Much interest has already been aroused in the competition for the choicest poetic tribute to a film favorite. The prize in this is a massive pin, and is the choicest creation of the Llewellyn Iron Works.

Without mentioning names, Barbara, the sainted barbarian, gave her delicious tribute as follows:

My Hero.

My life is all a picture, and the whole wild world forgot,
When I gaze upon My Hero of the screen.
I follow him through desert sands, where winds are scorching hot;
I follow him through meadows cool and green.

And then I see him at the stake, a human sacrifice;
While devils red the burning brands heap high;
When God up in his heaven, with a vengeance sure and swift,
Flings a flaming bolt of lightning from the sky.

I see him as God's shepherd, with gentle mien, and pure,
As he leads his flock through pastures calm and sweet:
I see him as captive God, bedight with primal lure,
While Aryan hordes, with pagan rites, lay trophies at his feet.

I fight with him [illegible] midst southern [illegible]
I fight with him [illegible] as well.
And from a world of [illegible] in northern [illegible]
I follow down the [illegible] right to the [illegible]

I sigh—and wish that I [illegible] the little movie queen [illegible]
His gentle hand caresses [illegible] fades out on the [illegible]

Uncle William [illegible] grappler of the San Gabriel [illegible] is able to be around [illegible] was laid up for awhile with [illegible] and mouth disease, which [illegible] tracted through [illegible] tax orator. He sent in the [illegible] explanation accompanied by [illegible] ing ballad:

"I am pleased to write [illegible] foot disease is cured. [illegible] among the Happy Thinkers [illegible] me a lotion labeled the [illegible] or Canadian Club, [illegible] that, and, in my [illegible] grabbed it by the neck [illegible] about to rub it in, when [illegible] tions caught my eye. [illegible] taken inwardly, and after [illegible] living up to our family [illegible] feel fit to do a toe dance [illegible] Baldy. If I do not appear [illegible] next symposium kindly [illegible] vet. for his highly-appreciated [illegible] dote, and whisper to [illegible] there's always room on top.

"Your movie queen [illegible] moved me to smear the name of [illegible] favorite all over the [illegible] poetical form, but the kind of [illegible] ry (?) I write would [illegible] tice to the dame. I saw [illegible] feet once and my [illegible] was bashfulness that [illegible] eyes from meandering up [illegible] (the movie queen's) face. I [illegible] want to instill envy into the [illegible] of all the rest, so I will not [illegible] her name. I will, however, [illegible] ise and let the bolt strike [illegible] may. And incidentally I [illegible] ornate, massive, etc., pin.

My Queen.

"Of course, there is a [illegible] where,
The sweetest one of [illegible]
With quite a wealth of [illegible]
And most divinely [illegible]
Perhaps she's not [illegible]
It may be she's [illegible]
Her hair may not be [illegible]
But, anyway, she's [illegible]

"Perhaps she has a form [illegible]
Like Grecian maids of [illegible]
With classic curves [illegible]
Though cast in modern [illegible]
Mayhap her form is hardly [illegible]
The contour may be [illegible]
She may be thick around [illegible]
To some she's lovely [illegible]

"Of course, she has the [illegible] feet.
That ever trod a [illegible]
Her hands, so cute, [illegible] neat
Have made of you [illegible]
Perhaps she is compelled [illegible]
A number 'leven [illegible]
Her hands may look [illegible] rare—
To some she's more than [illegible]

"Perhaps she's that [illegible] this,
We could 'perhaps' [illegible]
But all of that is [illegible]
To some she is a [illegible]
So if, in her esteem, [illegible]
A hankering to [illegible]
Just spout her name and [illegible] salve,
That's all your queen [illegible]

By this time the secretary was hoarse from [illegible] as he wanted to save some [illegible] the greeting of his friend [illegible] Hughes, the reading of [illegible] ings was deferred [illegible] symposium.

In the meantime all [illegible] tions to the club, [illegible] the competition for the [illegible] to a film favorite, [illegible] poems, limericks and [illegible] for membership should be [illegible] to Eugene Brown, [illegible] The Times.

BETTY.

Call of the Wild.

August "dog days" are not conducive to social activities.

Society folks are staying on at the beach or mountain resort. Only those who must make preparations to send their college daughters and sons back to school have the courage to return to town. Vacation days are nearly past and a merry, fleeting season of gaiety the younger set has reveled in.

Dr. and Mrs. Braden Kyle of Philadelphia, who are great favorites in the smart set, are furnishing the motif, while house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDonald Taylor of Berkeley Square, for no end of festivities, though, like all midsummer entertainments, these are more or less informal. Dr. Kyle participated in the Bohemian Club's annual jinks on the Russian River—well worth crossing the continent for, so says Dame Rumor— and came to the Southland in John S. Cravens's private car, Nomad, along with William May Garland, John Barnes Milner, R. I. Rogers, Dr. Guy Cochran, Samuel Moody Haskins, Harry Gray and several others from the City of the Angels or Pasadena.

Last night at the Midwick Country Club Dr. Cochran gave a dinner party for Dr. and Mrs. Kyle and the Taylors, and Mr. and Mrs. John Barnes Miller also dispensed genial hospitality to Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Harold S. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Thomas, Miss Jean Shaffer, Benjamin Strong III, Miss Phila Miller, John Barnes Miller, Jr., and Edgar Gail Miller. It was the usual week-end dinner-dance, with most of the elite stay-at-homes in attendance.

Political Salon.

Mrs. John Percival Jones usually manages to impart more than the purely "social" atmosphere to her affairs. During Lent it was this grande dame who thought of the morning lectures on Florentine art which drew the intellectuals to her beautiful Italian garden.

And yesterday her salon savored of the political, with the next United States Senator, Willis H. Booth, and his charming wife, honor guests. The Gillis home, at Fourth street and Adelaide drive, Santa Monica, which this matron has taken, has been the mecca all season for much entertaining, due principally to the presence of her daughter and son-by-marriage, the Frederick MacMonnies of Paris.

Yesterday Mrs. Roy Jones and Mrs. Horace B. Wing poured, and talks were made by Mr. Booth, Mrs. Cornelius Cole, Roy Jones, Mrs. L. A. Gould, Coral Deal Lewis and Hon. John F. Stutesman, former Minister to Bolivia from the United States.

Mrs. Wing is to give an evening for the Booths either Wednesday or Thursday.

Southern Girls Here.

Miss Mary Howard, a 16-year-old girl with a voice of artistic promise, has been visiting in the city all week, having stopped off with her father, J. W. Howard, after a summer trip to the various Colorado mountain resorts, Salt Lake and San Francisco. Her home is San Antonio.

Miss Howard is an intimate friend of Mrs. Turner Elmer Weatherholt of the Bryson, who did much to make the stay of the southern girl pleasant. The visitor left yesterday for the South.

Another southern girl who is being much entertained at present is Miss Vivienne Couch of Fort Worth, house guest of Mrs. George Finks of South Hope street. Many affairs are now in the planning for her.

Miss Florence Halsey came from Pensacola, Fla., several weeks ago to visit her kinfolks in the home of Mrs. Norton D. Whitley of South Burlington avenue, and to return with them South. Miss Dorothy Whitley is to enter Wellesley this fall, and her mother timed her trip to the East so they might stay with relatives in Memphis, Nashville and New Orleans before continuing to the Atlantic Coast. Miss Sammie Harris is going with her sister, Mrs. Whitley, and will enjoy a winter in New York society.

Natal Celebration.

In honor of the birthday of Dr. William Monroe Lewis, a smart dinner was arranged by Mrs. Lewis for last evening at their attractive home on South Figueroa street. Covers were laid for ten.

For the Week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. William May Garland and the boys have gone for the week-end to their home at the Crags, where many Angelenos are today enjoying out-door life. The Garlands left Friday morning.

For Their Daughters.

Mrs. James Taber Fitzgerald and Mrs. William Irving Hollingsworth will leave Tuesday morning by motor for Coronado, where they are to remain the coming fortnight. They are to take their little daughters, Flora Hollingsworth and Louise Fitzgerald, 7 and 10 years old, respectively, for a gay vacation holiday.

The Bohn Dinner.

Most artistic in its appointments was the dinner given by Mrs. William B. Bohn of No. 820 South Manhattan place Thursday evening in compliment to Miss Florence McTague and Miss Nina Robinson, both St. Louis girls now being extensively entertained here. A large basket of crystal tied in pale blue tulle and containing a shower of radiant yellow roses formed an effectively pretty central table decoration, accentuated with crystal candelabra with yellow-shaded tapers. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Erasmus Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Bannister, Huber Spahr, Mr. and Mrs. hester Tloeser of St. Louis and John Mel.

To Meet Former Resident.

At her home, No. 37 Westmoreland place, Mrs. George P. Thresher will extend to Mrs. C. C. Gibbons of Phoenix, Ariz., who formerly resided in this city, a luncheon courtesy Wednesday. Twelve ladies, all members of a congenial club in the days when Mrs. Gibbons lived here, are asked to meet her. They include Mrs. John C. Bannister, Mrs. John F. Balliet, Mrs. Henry T. Coffin, Mrs. Guy Cuzner, Mrs. J. T. Fitzgerald, Mrs. John Newton Russell, Jr., Mrs. Horace Miller, Mrs. George Ellis and Mrs. Walter Tyler, an aunt of the honoree.

Mr. and Mrs. Thresher, with their daughters, Miss Florence Thresher and Mrs. Sidney B. Webb, have just returned from the Yellowstone National Park.

Luncheon Planned.

Mrs. William T. Goul, who has a pretty home at No. 806 Crescent drive, Beverly Hills, is to preside over a luncheon party Tuesday—an event pleasurably anticipated by those bidden.

Army Girl to Wed.

A bit of news that has set Long Beach and Los Angeles society agog is the announcement made yesterday by Col. J. H. Frier of the Thirty-fifty-Infantry, U.S.A., and Mrs. Frier that their daughter, Miss Sarah Lloyd Frier, will become the bride of W. B. Fogarty, the 24th inst., the marriage to be solemnized at the Presidio, San Francisco. Mr. Fogarty has been assigned by the United States Navy to superintend the construction of the submarines at Long Beach, and is to bring his bride to the Virginia for the launching of one of the boats the last of the month.

Remove from the City.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Shipley have gone to their new home in St. Francis Woods. They lived formerly at No. 2401 Sunset boulevard.

Announcement.

Judge and Mrs. W. R. Guy of San Diego formally announce the engagement of their daughter Alice to William D. Jacks of this city. No definite time has been set for the wedding. Miss Guy told the secret to her closest girl friends at an announcement luncheon Thursday, at her home in the exposition city.

Back After Long Absence.

Mr. and Mrs. James Washington Pierce have returned from the East, after having spent the past year in and about New York City attending artists' concerts, recitals and other notable musical events. Mr. Pierce was actively associated with the Music Teachers' Association of Los Angeles, having been secretary of that body before he left for the East.

Go to San Diego.

Dr. George F. Bovard of the University of Southern California and Mrs. Bovard left Thursday for a motor trip to San Diego, where they will spend a week or so. They are accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. C. W. Swiggert, Mr. Swiggert, and Warren Bovard. Dr. Bovard and Prof. Bruce Bliven, of the department of journalism, have been selected as two of the members of the jury of awards at the Panama-California Exposition, and Dr. Bovard's visit to San Diego is in connection with his official duties as a juryman. Prof. Bliven, his wife and infant son will go south early this week.

On Pleasure Bent.

Miss Grace Wilshire will leave tomorrow for San Francisco, to enjoy a three-week vacation before her work at the Marlborough School for Girls starts for the autumn semester.

Trip With Visitors.

Mrs. Lucretia Ann Pyne and son, C. W. Pyne, of South Union avenue, in company with their kinsfolk and house guests, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Grunder and son of Sheridan road, Chicago, have returned from a trip to Alaska and the Yellowstone Park.

Off for Chicago.

Mrs. Charles Sumner Kent left Thursday for Chicago, where she is to visit for a short time with friends.

Indian Party.

The Indian pow-wow with which Mr. and Mrs. Carl S. Lichtweek entertained at their home, No. 1148 Lake Shore avenue, the past week proved unusual and amusing.

The grounds were completely enclosed with eucalyptus boughs and wistaria vines, and were lighted by shaded electric bulbs. Cosy little tepees were contrived in each corner of the garden, near a miniature lake, upon which tiny canoes were floating. Various Indian tribes were cleverly designated. A blazing bonfire was surrounded by stern-looking warrior chieftains smoking the pipe of peace, and wild animal skins did much for the realistic scenic effects. Correct attire for the occasion was Indian blankets and feathered headdresses, Indian names being acquired for the occasion.

A marquee for dancing had been erected on the lawn, and a stringed orchestra in Indian garb furnished appropriate music from beneath a canopy of cornstalks. Indian games and archery, with prizes of Indian pottery and relics, made amusing diversion.

The "wigwam sayings," in which bucks and squaws participated, was contrived ingeniously with envelopes attached to strings, twined in and out the branches of the trees, the surprise envelope containing the announcement of the engagement of the son of the hosts to Miss Lillian Adler. The marriage will be in the early fall.

Mrs. Albert von Lange and Mrs. Rose Lichtweek gave the Indian sun dance, which, being heartily encored, was followed by a pantomime, "An Indian Romance."

Mrs. Marguerite Parker told the story of "Hiawatha" and Aubrey Guthrie sang numerous Indian songs. Tomahawk exercises and tom-tom music was also on the programme.

A midnight barbecue concluded a most uncommon entertainment. Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Clarence Parker and Mrs. Albert von Lange, all three being attired in handsome beaded costumes. Host Lichtweek masqueraded as Chief Reindeer of the Shawnee tribe.

Bucks and squaws attending were Mrs. Agnes H. Manhattan Beach.

MRS. B. S. GOODRICH of Third street entertained in a most delightful fashion on Wednesday afternoon the members of the Cloverleaf Whist Club. Mrs. Goodrich served a dainty luncheon before the games, and many motored down from Los Angeles to enjoy the afternoon at this cosy cottage. Among those at cards were Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Goodrich, Mrs. Henry Kennedy, Mrs. Kate Kingswell and Mrs. Leona Tucker, all of whom received prizes of cut glass. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Goodrich of Los Angeles are also guests of the Manhattan Beach people.

Miss Isabelle Fulton, the charming daughter of Mrs. Ray Raymer of Highland avenue, has as her guest this week, Miss Evelyn Daugherty of El Paso, Tex. Miss Daugherty and her mother plan to spend part of the summer in Long Beach.

The women of the Neptunian Club gave a delightful card party on Wednesday afternoon of this week. Refreshments were served during the afternoon and the clubrooms were crowded.

The campfire girls of Van Nuys enjoyed the past week in a pleasant outing party here. The girls were chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Harding and Miss Elma Snyder of Van Nuys and every day of the week was spent in boating, bathing, fishing and other sports. Among those here were the Misses Jennie Campbell, Inez Witmer, Esther Lane, Rena Hendrix, Eunice Jaqua, Alta Franklin, Beatrice Gellespie, Rhoda Lehman, Linda Lehman, Carrie Hendric, Jane Campbell, Marjorie Leslie, Josephine Cornwell, Irma Clever, Louise Russell, Esther Witmer, Hazel O'Tool and Ruby Rogers.

One of the pleasantest parties of the week was the picnic given by Mr. and Mrs. Archie Delaney and Mrs. Hughes of Los Angeles on Wednesday evening. The occasion was a weinie roast on the sands near Marine avenue, and the young people enjoyed the beautiful night and the bonfire kindled for them by hostesses. Ukeleles were used during the evening, and those who enjoyed the happy affair included the Misses Gladys Froelich, Mary Doolittle, Martha Olsen, Hattie MacPherson, Ethel Wright, and Claude Martin, William Hooper, John Marshall, Ralph Freidman and Ernest Harrison.

Duarte.

THE notable event of the week was the large gathering of society Tuesday evening at the High School auditorium. A dramatic entertainment was presented, entitled "Found—a Young Nobleman," and in addition to this there were several specialties, including a cornet solo by Courtland Elliott, a vocal solo by Miss Vera Downe and readings by Mrs. H. Fleishman. Two charming young girls contributed pleasant features of entertainment, a fancy dance by Miss Sallie Edwards and a whistling solo by Miss Frances Carter. A male quartette also made an excellent contribution, the gentlemen taking part being Messrs. Leon Beaman, Courtland Elliott, Merle Casey and Glenn Rives.

The play was given by about thirty young people and was presented under the patronage of Mrs. Robert M. Golder. After the entertainment the members of the cast and other entertainers were given an informal reception.

Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Streeter were the genial host and hostess of the ladies and gentlemen of the Duarte Whist Club. Besides the regular membership, guests numbering seven had been specially honored with invitations and the evening was replete with pleasures for members and guests. Lovely Japanese baskets and urns were used to display the wealth of pink amaryllis, roses, dahlias and summer blossoms used in decorating. Luxuriant ferns also graced the living-room, where cards formed the evening diversion, followed by supper. The honored guests were Mrs. A. R. Hess, Miss Dorothy Densmore, Miss Gertrude Wilcox, Mrs. Curtis Lindsay of Ontario, Mrs. F. N. Hess, Miss Feril Hess of New York City, and William Shaw of Los Angeles.

Capt. and Mrs. W. W. Bacon of Duarte avenue had as their guests last Sunday Rev. C. M. Fisher, D. D., Mrs. C. M. Fisher and the Misses Eva and Mary Fisher of South Pasadena.

Mrs. Ralph W. Partridge opened her home Friday afternoon to the ladies of the Methodist Church for an August reception between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock. It was a large affair, as fully eighty guests were present. The receiving ladies welcomed the guests in the living-room, which was brightened with summer's lovely offering of asters and greenery. Japanese tea was served on the lawn by a charming coterie of assisting ladies.

Among the Duarte folk who are away on pleasure bent, are Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Sarwine, who have been at Long Beach, where they were the recipients of social courtesies from Mr. and Mrs. George Krimball and Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Chester; Mr. and Mrs. A. Steiner, Miss Theresa Steiner and Miss Numa Foster spent the week-end pleasantly at Huntington Beach; Mrs. Joseph Fowler and twin daughters, the Misses Doris and Marjorie Fowler, have been at Long Beach, while Mrs. E. S. Hulme has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Story Hulme in Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Savage and family are at home on Duarte avenue after a sojourn at San Diego.

Saturday Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Streeter gave an all-day outing and picnic in Fish Canyon, in compliment to guests who form a house party at the Streeters's. The party includes Mrs. Curts Linsay of Ontario, Mrs. F. N. Hess, Miss Feril Hess and Messrs. Chester and Kenneth Hess of New York City.

Mrs. C. D. Holmes was the delightful hostess of the ladies of the Fortnightly Auction Bridge Club Tuesday at her home. Only members of the club were present and were greeted in rooms decorated with pink and white roses and ferns. After the afternoon spent in playing auction bridge a tempting repast was served at small tables and a jolly social hour concluded the afternoon's pleasure.

Azusa.

IDEALLY cool summer days and beautiful moonlit nights have made this week most fitting for out-of-door occasions, and Tuesday evening about forty friends of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Evans and Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Carpenter wended their way to Roberts Canyon, where the Evanses and Carpenters are domiciled at their summer cabins, Camp E-C. Merry informal diversions made it one of the most enjoyable of similar affairs. Later a delicious campfire supper was served and the guests reluctantly turned their steps over rocks and streams toward the homeward path.

Two delightful dinner parties were enjoyed this week in honor of classmates who were leaving for the north, where they will continue their university courses. On Monday evening Miss Lolah Hummel charmingly entertained on the vine-bedecked courts at the home of her parents on Azusa avenue, with an elaborate 6 o'clock dinner. Graceful red carnations and ferns were effectively used in decorations and plates were laid for Miss Dorothy Davis, Miss Mary Cain, Miss Gertrude Bouldin, Miss Olive Storm, Miss Zodilla Wade, Miss Miriam Bonner, Miss Ruth Ellis and the Messrs. F. L. Heth, Roy Hummel, Cecil Singleton, Stewart Streshley, William Gable, Paul Cain and George Ramsay.

Again on Tuesday evening Miss Bouldin entertained with a most enjoyable 6 o'clock dinner party. Blue asters and ferns formed the pretty centerpiece for the table and the guests included the Misses Miriam Bonner, Lolah Hummel, Ruth Ellis, Mary Cain, Zodilla Wade, Hazel Mendenhall, Ada Ellis, Bessie Shorey, Dorothy Davis, Olive Storm and Gertrude Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wellman went to Alhambra Wednesday, where they met Mr. and Mrs. John Wellman, and from there they motored to San Diego, where they will spend a week viewing the many interesting features of the southern city and the exposition.

One of the prettiest little 1 o'clock dinner parties of the week was that given by Mrs. Ralph N. Burt Wednesday. A profusion of red carnations effectively decorated the dining-room, and, intermingled with ferns, formed a beautiful centerpiece. Plates were laid for Mrs. Carlton Gatton, Mrs. J. H. Culler, Mrs. Fannie E. Turner and Mrs. Charles Robinson.

After spending thirty years here, living at her ranch home on Citrus avenue, Mrs. Mary A. Fuller left scores of friends who will miss her at the social gatherings, when she this week moved to Pasadena to make her home with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur N. Brown of Lake avenue.

Oxnard.

ADDING still another to the delightful dances given recently by members of the younger set of Oxnard and vicinity, the Misses Ida, Jessie, Nell and Veda Petit entertained over 100 guests Friday night in Knights of Columbus Hall. Mrs. Justin Petit, mother of Miss Ida and Miss Jessie, and Mrs. John Petit, mother of Miss Nell and Miss Veda, assisted the young ladies in entertaining. The hall, in its charming color scheme of white and green, was tastefully decorated with baskets of flowers, tied with pink tulle, hung about the walls, and the orchestra platform was a bower of bamboo. The tables on which the buffet luncheon was served were lighted with pink candles, and a large basket of flowers, tied with pink tulle, centered it. Punch was served throughout the evening. This was the last social event of the season here for many of the young people, who are daily departing for school and college.

Miss Evangeline Carroll entertained Thursday afternoon, the hours being devoted to five hundred. Pretty prizes were won by Miss Berenice Livingston and Miss Louise McFarland. A dainty luncheon was served at the close of the afternoon's play.

Among the out-of-town guests at the dance given by the Misses Petit was Miss Blanche Woodill of Los Angeles, who was the guest of Miss Kathleen Donlon during her stay here. Miss Woodill recently spent some time in Oxnard, as Miss Donlon's summer guest, and made many friends during her stay.

Mrs. John Arnelll of Camarillo entertained the members of the Ventura Bridge Club very delightfully Wednesday afternoon, the affair taking place at the home of her mother, Mrs. F. W. Baker.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Saviers entertained at an enjoyable dinner party at their country home near Oxnard, Monday evening, the guests of honor being Mrs. Saviers's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Hall, and the occasion being their forty-fifth wedding anniversary. The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hall of Glendale, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hall of Huntington Park, George Hall of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. C.

SOCIETY.

Saviers of Oxnard, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Horsewood of Hueneme.

On their return from a motor honeymoon through Southern California, Mr. and Mrs. Bennie Schmitz, whose wedding was one of the social events of last month in Oxnard, were greeted by about 100 members of the Camarillo Fraternal Brotherhood, in a shower and party held in the Otey Cafe in Camarillo. Mr. and Mrs. Schmitz will live near Camarillo. The evening was spent in games, music and dancing, and closed with an enjoyable supper. The newlyweds were the recipients of many gifts, mostly in tinware and kitchen conveniences. Before her marriage, Mrs. Schmitz was Miss Pauline Train. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Train of Oxnard.

The birthday anniversary, Saturday, of Mrs. Sarah Eccles was the occasion of a delightful party, arranged by her daughter, Mrs. T. W. Middleton, at Rose Lee Farm, the Middleton home. The evening was spent in music, dancing and cards. A number of pretty fancy dances were given by some of the ladies present, and several enjoyable songs were features of the evening's entertainment. Elaborate refreshments were served. About sixty guests were present, including a number from Los Angeles.

A wedding of more than usual interest because of the romance connected with it, was that of Miss Rachel Maertens and Joseph A. Callens, solemnized Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock in Santa Clara Church. The bride, a charming Belgian young lady, came to this country when her native land was devastated by the armies contending in the great European struggle. She came direct to Oxnard, and has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Callens, Mr. Callens being a brother of this week's groom. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Martin. The bride wore a traveling suit of blue taffeta, with a picture hat of white. Her bridesmaid, Miss Leona Callens, wore blue and white. Joseph Callens of Santa Ana, cousin of the groom, was best man. A wedding reception and dinner to the relatives and many friends of the young couple was given following the ceremony, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Callens, the dinner being served under a big tent erected beside handsome pepper trees. The newly-married couple left for the south by auto for a honeymoon of indefinite length. On their return, they will make their home on one of the family ranches in Oceanview.

Santa Monica.

ONE of the interesting and attractive affairs of the week was given Thursday night by members of St. Margaret's Guild at the gardens of the home of Mrs. T. H. Dudley, wife of the former Mayor of Santa Monica. The affair was in the nature of a bazaar, and the gardens assumed a carnival air. The affair was a considerable success.

As a social feature of Santa Monica life, a meeting held at Hotel Windermere on Wednesday night proved that society can find time to take an interest in politics. At the gathering women of the bay district formed a women's Booth-for-Senator club. Mrs. Stephen A. Rendall presided. James N. Sheridan addressed the women, as did Mrs. Rendall, and others spoke on behalf of the candidate. Mrs. Robert Dollard of Santa Monica was chosen president of the organization; Mrs. J. M. Herndon of Venice, secretary; Mrs. John P. Jones, Mrs. J. D. Bliss, Mrs. David Hamburger, Mrs. Edward Pruce, Mrs. George Kyre and Mrs. Mary Benning, vice-presidents. Other officers will be named.

Miss Cecelia Curtin, one of the popular younger set of Santa Monica, was married Tuesday to Flomel Nichols of Corona. The marriage was celebrated by Rev. Father Patrick Hawe at St. Monica's Church, Santa Monica. The groom is well known in Corona. The young couple will make their home in that city following a motoring trip. The groom is a business man of Corona.

Mrs. M. U. Beach of New York City was the guest of honor recently at a picnic on the beach. Mrs. Frank O. Ranger of Oxford avenue, Los Angeles, was the hostess of the afternoon. Miss Jeanette Bevort, who has been spending a few weeks at the Alexandria, Los Angeles, was also a guest of honor. Tuesday Mrs. Ranger entertained at a dinner in honor of the New Yorkers. Saturday the two visitors left for a trip to Yellowstone Park and the Grand Canyon.

Garden Grove.

AN IMPORTANT social event in Garden Grove was the banquet given by the Garden Grove Improvement Association on a recent Wednesday evening at the Y.M.C.A. clubhouse. The banquet, which was most elaborate and which was served in the most approved manner with artistic decorations and pretty lighting, was under the able direction of the energetic and charming young women of the Lambda Phi Club, an organization which is successfully contributing to the social life of Garden Grove. The matters discussed around the banquet table by prominent citizens of Garden Grove were all of material benefit to the future of this little city, matters of municipal value being gone into more or less thoroughly. Mr. H. A. Lake, president of the association, happily introduced Mr. George Rayburn as toastmaster of the evening. Mr. Rayburn presented Mr. C. W. McNaught and Mr. Johnson of Santa Ana, who talked of fire protection for Garden Grove. President Lake, in a spirited talk, told of near-at-hand railroad improvements, and was followed by Mr. Knapp, who exploited Garden Grove as a shipping point. Dr. C. C. Violett, J. O. Arkley and Charles Holt were among other speakers who made interesting talks. The banquet after-dinner talks were not all confined to business topics, some of the speeches being of a lighter order and of decided social interest.

Mrs. A. J. Chaffee was hostess on Wednesday afternoon to the White Ribboners of Garden Grove. The afternoon was made most enjoyable by being turned into an al fresco affair: the social hour being enjoyed under the immense shade trees of the beautiful Chaffee grounds. A programme of decided interest was the first order of the meeting, and after the subsequent social amenities a spread contributed to by each guest furnished delectable refreshments. These meetings not only give an impetus to the special work in which the White Ribboners are so greatly interested, but tend to enhance the social spirit, which forms one of the most delightful characteristics of a residence in Garden Grove.

One of the most delightful of the many automobile outings taken by Garden Grove people this summer was one from which Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Hudson and family returned on Wednesday evening. The motor journey consumed eight days and visits were made to the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego, the interesting side places of the exposition city and points of interest in Mexico, including Tia Juana. Mr. Hudson again left for San Diego on the Friday evening following their return, taking with him Mr. and Mrs. George Nay, Mrs. Frank Stone and Roy Robinson. After visiting the fair the party returned here on Sunday evening, highly delighted with the exposition and the splendid automobile trip.

Santan Ana.

ONE of the notable musical and social events of the past week was that at which Mrs. Ruth Deardorff Shaw was hostess, and where Mrs. Shaw, assisted by her genial husband, entertained as their honor guest Chevalier F. Guerrieri, director of the Boston Opera Company. This musical world star proved a delightful man, and only second to the illustrious leader was Mrs. Minna Roper Viersen, who electrified the company by her singing of three groups of arias, beginning with those of the time of Handel and Mozart and ending with modern composers. The singer was accompanied by Chevalier Guerrieri, who later played the Minuet Serenata from his own opera, "Love's Emprise." Miss Clara Mae Wilson, one of Mrs. Shaw's most talented pupils, brilliantly opened the evening's programme with several beautifully-rendered piano numbers, and was followed by James Willis Rice in violin compositions of his own, with his wife as accompanist. Other charming numbers were "The Sea" and a Mozart composition played by Mrs. Shaw, with the talented Santa Ana musician, Earl Erzler, following in masterly piano selections. A chafing dish supper gave zest to a brilliant social hour enjoyed by the half hundred people who were the guests of the Shaws. This period was pleasantly marked by informal music.

Miss Violet Wiesseman has as house guests three charming girls, the Misses Marie and Elsie Kolb and Miss Helen Sieb of Buffalo, N. Y., entertaining recently for them with an elaborate evening party. After an evening of delightful diversions, which ended in the choosing of partners for supper, a delicious spread was served. Perky little kewpies marked the places and covers were laid for Misses Arvilla Ball, Marguerite Tedford, Helen Walker, Laura Davis, Messrs. Gordon House, Maxwell Jayne, Truman Dawes, Bernard Packard, John Wehrly and Fred Forgy. The table and parlors were sweet with Cecile Brunners artistically arranged in baskets.

Entertaining Los Angeles and Santa Ana guests, Miss Christine Watson was the hostess on Tuesday evening at a delightful dinner-dance given at the "How-de-do" cottage at Balboa. The delicious four-course dinner abounded in unique decorations, carried out in sea moss and kelp. Cute favors were drawn from a large kelp bell swinging over the table. After a dancing party privately given at the Balboa pavilion the company enjoyed moonlight bathing and canoeing. The guest list included Misses Mary Jo Grubb, Margaret Lyon, Hazel Pentecost, Ardis Burns, Messrs. David Anderson, Victor Myers, Russell Johnson, Charlie Givens, Eugene Trago, Virgil Pentecost, all of Santa Ana, and the following of Los Angeles: Misses Margaret Thomas, Katherine Wishard, Ruth Taylor, Verle Richeson, Phyllis Harrington, Messrs. Collins, Buller, Leland Kent, Paul Wilson, Ruben Jaffe and Fred Hughes.

The girls of the Merry Hearts Club are luxuriating in social events during the short but gay period preceding the beginning of college days for most of them. The initial event of this week's gaiety was a birthday party given by Miss Muriel Lee at her North Van Ness avenue home. Luncheon was served on small tables blooming with pink and white blossoms, massed in baskets and adorning the place cards, which marked covers for the hostess and Miss Isabelle Anderson, Lillian Fischer, Ramona Clevenger, Helen Carden, Helen Remsberg, Elizabeth Givens, Arvilla Ball, Norma Wingood, Dorothy Mead, Merle Obarr, Theretta Taylor and Grace Gebhardt; Mrs. Floyd Knight and Mrs. George Faul, Jr. The hostess was showered with gifts and was assisted in entertaining by her sister, Miss Usurla Lee. A matinee party followed the luncheon.

The second gay event enjoyed by the Merry Hearts girls was at the home of Miss Grace Gebhardt on Friday evening, when the guests were greeted in parlors elaborately bedecked with lovely flowers. Rich-hued red and yellow tulips were in the reception-rooms, and the dining-room was in blue and white, conserving a Dutch color motif. A tiny Dutch windmill with rustic bridge and waddling ducks was reflected from a mirror plateau centering the table. A delicious collation was served after an evening of music, games and the bestowing of gifts on Miss Gebhardt. The young women participating in the event were Mrs. Floyd Knight, Misses Arvilla Ball, Dorothy Mead, Helen Remsberg, Muriel Lee, Isabelle Anderson, Lillian Fischer, Ramona Clevenger, Merle Obarr, Norma Wingood and Helen Garstang and Winifred Roberts.

Redlands.

MANY of the society folk of Redlands have left during the week for a tour of California, which they have found to be a most pleasant way of spending their vacation. Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Black and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Stone have just returned home from a trip to Lake Tahoe, on which they covered 1700 miles in their machines. They also saw the big trees at Mariposa and took in the Yosemite. Mr. and Mrs. Austin Park have returned to Redlands after a trip to the Tahoe country and to Nevada. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Strait, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Fowler, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Frost and Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Heacock, who left last week, are now in the Yosemite, where they expect to spend some time, and then they will motor to Tahoe over the Tioga road. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fisher and daughters, and Miss Mabel Hubbard and Miss Madeline Wynne have left for a motor trip to Coronado and San Diego. Mr. and Mrs. Glen Milligan have returned from a trip to Santa Barbara.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Burchell will leave here in a few days for New York, from which place they will sail on September 2 on the Holland-American line steamship Ryndam for Liverpool. They expect to stay in England for several months, and will be in London most of that time. Mr. Burchell is one of the best liked of the modern English authors, and they are making the trip back to England on business connected with his work.

Robert Le Beau, formerly of the Edison company in this city, and Mrs. Florence Stewart were married in Santa Ana recently, and are now in Beaumont, where they will make their home. They have many friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney F. Moran will sail from San Francisco this week for Japan, where they will engage in evangelistic work in Tokio. Both are graduates of Oberlin College, and Mrs. Moran is the daughter of Mrs. Jennie C. Reeves of this city. They have been visiting here for several weeks.

Announcement cards have been received here telling of the wedding of Miss Helen Claytor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Claytor, to De Lomme Drake Purrington at Riverside. Miss Claytor has visited in Redlands many times, and been the honor guest at several house parties here.

Miss Mildred Bonnell celebrated her birthday anniversary at the home of her parents, Bonnie Brae ranch, and among the guests were Mrs. C. W. Merriman and R. O. Bonnell of this city.

A wedding that will be of interest to Redlands people will take place in November, when Miss Grace Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Miller and niece of the late Darius Miller of Chicago, will be married to Dr. Granville Tedford of Taft, Cal. They will make their home in Taft.

Plans have been made by the ladies of Bryn Mawr for another big military ball there for the benefit of the boys of Co. G, who are now stationed at Nogales, Ariz.

Mrs. W. O. Bettis, who is soon to leave the city, was the guest of honor at a farewell party given at the home of Mrs. S. F. Calbeck. Those present were the ladies identified with the Foreign Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church, of which Mrs. Bettis has been the president.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gernich were host and hostess at a jolly mountain party at their camp in Mill Creek, the guests being Redlands people who are camping there. It was a costume party, and some of the costumes were wonderful creations.

Tustin.

FOUR charming Tustin girls, who lately returned from a trip with the Sierra Club, had a memorable reunion on Thursday night when Miss Grace Hight of the quartette was hostess to the others at a knapsack party. Her walking tour companions and her party guests were the Misses Gertrude and Dorothy Utt and Miss Clara Macomber. In addition to these Mr. and Mrs. James Willis Rice were guests at the affair, which opened with an early dinner at the home of the hostess. As the twilight shadows gathered the company went out into a near-by eucalyptus grove where they gathered cosily around a glorious campfire. The hour was made entrancing by charming violin music rendered by Mr. Rice, who is a past master on the king of instruments. The magic spell of the night was enhanced by the wonderful melodies to which the party listened. Campfire stories and a wienie bake at a late hour formed part of the most interesting evening, and after the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Rice the Sierra Club girls prepared to spend the night in their sleeping bags with knapsacks near at hand. Their slumbers were as sweet under the tall eucalyptus trees as they had been under the more rugged and majestic trees that dotted the mountain sides lately traversed on the mountain climbing trip.

The Christian Endeavorers of Tustin broke the s[illegible] quiet of the week by a cat social Tuesday night. Each guest brought a sofa cushion to the social-room of the church and all other seats were conspicuous by their absence. The goodly company of young people found it most surprisingly sociable to sit around on cushions on the floor. The Endeavorers and their more mature guests were just in the mood for story telling and most wonderful narratives pertaining to the feline family were told during the evening. Some were funny and others were startling. Lively games interspersed the story telling, the game being appropriate to the theme of the evening. Refreshments concluded the merry, unique and successful social.

A jolly watermelon party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Deardorff on Saturday night at their pretty D street bungalow home. It was an al fresco affair and lively out-of-door games alternated with dancing on the lawn, Victrola music furnishing the inspiration for the "light fantastic." The feast of luscious watermelons proved extremely acceptable after the merry dance. Those joining in the delightful evening were: Mrs. C. E. Price, Mrs. F. M. Thomas, Mrs. Clyde Flowers, Misses Helene McNeill, Alma Plavan, Lillian Walker, Beulah and Gladys Thomas, Mrs. G. R. Paulus, Messrs. Harry Whitman, Glen Young, Clyde Flowers, Walter Stafford, John Swanner, G. R. Paulus.

A seaside party for the week-end at Newport Beach was composed of: Mr. and Mrs. Fenlon Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stearns, Misses Eva and Gladys Stearns, Clarence Tucker and Lisle Farquhar.

Van Nuys.

TWENTY members of the American Guild of Organists, who are camping in the San Fernando Mountains, were entertained Saturday evening at the home of W. P. Whitsett at an informal reception and a barbecue dinner, cooked and served in the patio. After the dinner a number of selections were played on the new pipe organ recently installed in the Whitsett home. Many compliments were paid this instrument, as it is not only a musical instrument of the highest type, but is a player organ also and can be operated by a child. All departed at a late hour, acclaiming Mr. Whitsett a royal host.

J. H. Reed and H. O. Reed of Riverside were Van Nuys visitors last week. The former is the tree warden of Riverside county and is greatly interested in park systems and was induced by his local friends to come here to see the wonders of the famous Sherman way. They were highly delighted with our community and stated that our park system was the most wonderful they have ever had the pleasure of visiting.

Mrs. N. J. Balkins is spending a week at the beach, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Eastman of Los Angeles, who have a cottage there.

Mrs. Lucien R. Hitchcock entertained thirty members of the Christian Endeavor Society of Pasadena at her home on Whitsett drive on Wednesday.

A daintily-appointed luncheon was given on Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Lewis E. Bliss at her home on Van Ness avenue, for fifteen ladies. The dining-room was decorated with smilax and pink carnations, giving a very pleasing effect. The luncheon was served in four courses. Bridge was the order of the day and the prizes were won by Mrs. Steere and Mrs. Kellogg. Those present were Mrs. George B. Jess, Mrs. Ross Emmett Whitley, Mrs. S. O. Houghton, Mrs. Fred A. Kellogg, Mrs. Arthur E. Streeter, Mrs. Frank M. Keffer, Mrs. Griffith W. Steere, Mrs. Edgar W. Pack, Mrs. G. Arthur Bohlander, Mrs. Lincoln L. Whitson, Mrs. William J. Petit, Mrs. Howard S. Trotter, Mrs. L. Guy Fancher, Mrs. Mark C. Sutton and Mrs. Paul F. Shepard.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul S. Shepard entertained the members of the "Newlyweds" at a 6 o'clock dinner on Wednesday evening at their home on West E street. After the dinner an enjoyable evening was spent at cards.

Mrs. U. G. Chadeayne entertained on Tuesday evening at her home on Hazeltine avenue. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess and the evening was spent in games and other entertainment. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Phelps, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Burhans, Mrs. Christine Bernhart and Misses Louise and Tillie Bernhart.

One of the novel affairs of the season was the "Sucker" party given by Mrs. William Andrew at her home on Leesdale avenue on Wednesday afternoon. The guests were all natives of Illinois and the favors were all-day suckers. A three-course luncheon was served by the hostess. An exciting nut contest was won by Mrs. Rodgers. Those present were Mrs. Charles A. Bevis, Mrs. Frank Greene and daughter Genise, Mrs. Dell Bevis, Mrs. Eugene Rodgers and daughter Eugenia, Mrs. George J. Vanhorn and Mrs. William Andrew.

Whittier.

A GROUP of interesting weddings has kept Whittier society on tip toe this week and August bids fair to crowd June into second place as the bridal month. Last evening at the home of President and Mrs. A. Rosenberger, on South Washington avenue, was solemnized the marriage of their youngest daughter, Miss Helen Kendall Rosenberger, to Prof. Howard E. McMinn of Richmond, Ind. Quiet simplicity marked the beautiful ceremony, which was performed by the bride's father. Fifty guests, the immediate friends and relatives of the bride, attended. Miss Rosenberger is almost a newcomer here, having remained in the East to finish her education. She visited here last summer and returned to Richmond last autumn, where she graduated from Earlham College in June. Prof. McMinn is also an Earlham graduate and the wedding comes as a sequel to the romance begun in Earlham's classic shades. During the past year Prof. McMinn has been doing post-graduate work in Berkeley, and for the coming year will be in educational work in San Francisco, where they will make their home.

Another wedding of interest was that which united Miss Mary Todd, daughter of Postmaster and Mrs. J. S. Todd, to Frederick W. Wright of Holtville, at the home of the bride's parents on North Painter avenue Wednesday afternoon. The ceremony was a modification of the old-style Friends ceremony, wherein each party to the marriage contract repeats the words that make them husband and wife. This was followed by a simple ceremony pronounced by the Rev. Henry Edwin McGrew, pastor of the First Friends Church. Fifty guests were present and a collation followed the wedding. Both the bride and groom are graduates of Whittier College and the wedding is a case of another college-days romance. Mr. Wright is the son of Rev. and Mrs. Albert Wright of Holtville, and there the newlyweds will make their home after a short honeymoon.

Another beautiful home wedding was that of Miss Ethel Ashton and Orville G. Wilson, celebrated at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Ashton, No. 303 West Hadley street, Thursday evening, Rev. Nicholas T. Edwards officiating. A half-hundred friends were present to witness the nuptials. The bride is a graduate of the Whittier High School and of the Los Angeles Normal. The groom is a former Whittier resident whose home now is in Cherokee, Okla. The young people left at once after the wedding for their honeymoon trip, which will consist of a leisurely journey homeward, with a visit with friends in Colorado.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin R Mennell, just south of Whittier, was the scene of a beautiful wedding Wednesday afternoon, when their daughter, Miss Olive Mennell, became the bride of Lee Bovee of Los Angeles. Rev. E. A. Healy, pastor of the University Methodist Church, performed the ceremony. Seventy guests were present. Miss Marian Mennell, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor, and Miss Mabel Bovee was the bridesmaid. The acquaintance which ripened into this marriage began in the East in the childhood days of the contracting parties. Mr. and Mrs. Bovee are spending their honeymoon at Santa Barbara, and after their return will be at home at No. 2215 West Twentieth street, Los Angeles.

Mrs. Grace Updegraff Bergen's recital at the Whittier College auditorium Friday evening was so far the chief midsummer musical event of the city. Aside from being a vocalist, Mrs. Bergen is also a composer, among her compositions being the following: "The Blue Bird," "Just a Little Mother," "The Flag Song," "Away up North." Mrs. Bergen presented a programme of mingled classic and popular songs, among them a group of Scotch songs that were very pleasing. Her little 8-year-old daughter, Miss Grace, gave a number of songs in most pleasing childish fashion. Mrs. Bergen appeared under the direction of the choir of the Friends Church.

Moneta.

SEVERAL families towards the southwest of the town have started a new social habit. They pack their dinner piping hot from the range into insulated receptacles in their automobiles, and then fill the vacant seats in their machines with auto-less people and hie for the beach. Here they dine in the soft air that comes as the sun drops into the sea and the moonlight comes about them. Participants in these dinner parties have numbered eighteen to twenty, and it is said that Mrs. E. J. Goss of Strawberry street is the originator of the delightful plan.

SOCIETY.

Tandy and Mrs. L. H. Blaisdell of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Harriet Noyes of Highland.

Miss Dorothy Williams is spending a week with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Luckensmeyer on Electrict street.

Mrs. Lee Hawkins and little daughter of San Pedro street are visiting Mrs. Hawkins's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Luckensmeyer of Los Angeles.

On Saturday evening the Queen Esther Society gave a social in the Methodist Church hall. Ice cream and cake and a jolly time for all was the order of the evening.

Montebello.

MISS CLARA KIESELHORST, Miss Elva Hichborn, Miss Geraldine Pitzer, Miss Carol Bird, Miss Miriam Green and Miss Leona Aikin of San Diego are included in a joyous house party that is being chaperoned this week at Seal Beach by Mrs. S. C. Hichborn. Several others from Montebello went down for the week-end.

Among the enjoyable outings of recent date was that of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Ray Parmelee of Dewey avenue, who have returned from a delightful week's recreation at Long Beach and now have as a guest Miss Jeannette Forsythe of Los Angeles.

Decidedly the most pleasing affair given throughout the year by the Greenwood Social Center of South Montebello was the wienie roast and bonfire social of the past week. It was held on the beautiful grounds of the Greenwood school and a dozen cheery bonfires arranged in a semicircle to conform with a growth of greenery and flowering plants sent a glow to the many who sat about camp fashion on the greensward or formed the merry and ever-changing groups standing nearer the dancing flames. To roasted wienies and sandwiches was added coffee, poured by Mrs. George Walker and her assistants, and among other appreciated features of the evening were the fortune-telling tents presided over by Mrs. George Wilfert and Mrs. A. H. Southworth and the singing by a quartette which included Messrs. Wilfert, Burkhardt, Walker and Powers.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hooper and daughter Ruby have returned from Big Bear Lake, where fine fishing and other joys incident to camp life in that section made their experience a most enjoyable one. The trip was made by auto.

G. A. Wallerstedt of Los Angeles was a guest several days recently at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Bartlett in South Montebello.

Mrs. B. L. Stevenson of Cedar avenue has had as guests Prof. and Mrs. Louis Weld, of Chicago, who are summering in California. Prof. Weld is an entomologist and finds the insects of the Golden State an interesting vacation study.

The perfect moonlight nights have made outdoor functions very popular and one of the pleasant affairs of this kind during the week was the wienie roast, with which Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Schaack entertained a number of their friends on the grounds of their home on Washington avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Stewart, who left Montebello early in June on a cross-country trip to Missouri, arrived here Thursday, having suffered no mishap worth mentioning either going or coming. They were accompanied on the greater part of their journey east and joined again for the return trip by Perry Stanfield and Allen Stanfield, of Rivera, each of whom drove a car and was accompanied by his family. It is scarcely necessary to say that all are extremely glad to be back and are more than ever convinced that there is no place like California.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Southworth recently entertained at their home in South Montebello in honor of their daughter, Miss Frances M. Wells, who left this week for Tucson, where she will take a position in the State University of Arizona.

Covina.

WILLIAM M. GRISWOLD, manager of the Covina Fruit Exchange, accompanied by his wife and parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Griswold, left Friday for a month's sojourn at Lake Tahoe and other northern points. The party will motor up the coast by San Francisco and Sacramento, and expect to return home by the inland route.

C. W. Potter and family and S. S. Aschenbrenner and family returned the middle of the week from a camping trip at Big Bear Lake. This party, together with a number of local people, have been stopping at a beautiful camp site close to Pine Knot Lodge, called Camp Covina. The return home was made by way of the Mill Creek Canyon road, which has just been opened to traffic this week. They were among the first machines to come out this way, and report a much shorter, and far more scenic route than any of the other roads into this famous mountain resort.

Dr. James D. Reed and sons, Thomas and James, and Master Gene Ames arrived home early this week from an overland automobile trip to Missouri, made in the doctor's favorite machine, the Hupmobile. The party took the southern route over the old Santa Fe trail on their way East, but on their return they varied the journey with a course along the scenic route of the Denver and Rio Grande.

Dr. B. S. Gowen, supervising principal of the schools, returned home this week from an outing at Coldbrook Camp. In speaking of the San Gabriel Mountains, the doctor stated that although he had traveled extensively in the mountains of this country and Europe, he had yet to see a country where so many fine mountains were crowded into the same small space.

Rev. Chauncey A. Foreman, pastor of the Presyterian Church, returned Wednesday from a two weeks' vacation at Mt. Hermon in the Santa Cruz Mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dameral will have as their guest Sunday, Mr. C. C. Meridith, who was the first principal of the Citrus Union High School, when it was located north of Covina, on Citrus avenue.

Mrs. P. E. Letchworth of Penjerick ranch entertained Friday evening with a supper dance in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Gorham of Buffalo.

Mr. George M. Gowen, son of the supervising principal of the High School, left this week for Berkeley, where he will resume his studies as a junior in the department of forestry of the University of California.

Mrs. G. A. Blackman and Mrs. D. W. Thompson of Weleeika, Okla., mother and sister of Mrs. G. W. Thompson, have been guests the past week at the home of Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Thompson on Second street.

Riverside.

AMONG the more notable social events of the summer season was the wedding of Miss Rena May Phelps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Phelps of No. 172 Terracina Drive, to Ward Wooldridge. The nuptials were solemnized on Tuesday at the home of the bride, the service being read by Rev. Horace Porter, pastor of the First Congregational Church. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom and a few intimate friends witnessed the ceremony. The groom was accompanied by Jack S. Kerne as best man. The bride, in company with her father and preceded by her cousin, Miss Marie Chamblin, entered an aisle formed by four fair maidens in white frocks, bearing ropes of white tulle. These were the Misses Helen Chamblin, Josephine Chamblin and Carol Botsford, all cousins of the bride, and Miss Eleanor Gifford. The bride's costume was handsomely fashioned of white pussy willow taffeta, made princess style with cascade side drapes caught with pendants of pearls. The skirt was of modish length and the bodice and long sleeves of silk net, enriched with pearl bandings. The veil was arranged in cap effect with orange blossoms. Following the honeymoon trip the bride and groom will be at home at No. 158 Homewood court.

An interesting event of the week was the wedding of Ervie Benninger and Miss Thelma Van Buren at the Granite Hill ranch, in West Riverside district, at high noon Sunday. The service was read by Rev. Jesse Hungate, and was witnessed by sixty-five guests. Following the serving of a delicious wedding breakfast, the bride and groom left for a honeymoon trip which will include various Southern California points in its itinerary.

Mrs. C. C. Arnold, president of the Southern District California Federation of Women's Clubs, was hostess on Monday to the members of the board of directors of the organization and to the chairmen of the various committees from all parts of the district. The scene of the gathering was the sightly Arnold home near Victoria hill.

Venice.

MISS MAE REPPETO, daughter of a late pioneer tobacco man of St. Louis, reputed to have possessed considerable wealth, was married Wednesday to James Morris, motion-picture man. The wedding was a simple church affair, although it was a pretty one nevertheless. The ceremony was performed at St. Clement's Church. The young couple will make their home on the beach, according to present plans. An attractive dinner was given in the evening at a Venice cafe, following the ceremony, the table being artistically decorated for the occasion.

Sig. Caesare La Monoca, leader of the Venice band, was the host recently to a number of his friends at his Venice home. Following the band concert on the plaza the maestro took his friends in touring cars to his home, where an excellent musical programme was given. A late supper was served to Mr. and Mrs. Constantino, Sig. Phillipe Bennyan, Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Jacobson, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Fitts, Mr. and Mrs. Eversoll of Los Angeles, Mrs. M. San Gabriel.

THE recent marriage of Aaron V. Nicolaides of San Gabriel and Miss Olive Edwards of Pasadena at the home of the former's sister, Mrs. L. J. Murphy in Los Angeles was of interest in the mission town because of the popularity of the young people here. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. T. Price, pastor of the Brooklyn Heights Congregational Church. The fortunate young man is the son of Mr. and Mrs. V. E. Nicolaides. After the ceremony the couple left for a short wedding trip. They will make their home in Oil Center.

Among the pleasant bridge parties of the last few days was that given at the home of Miss Alma Swanwick. First honors were captured by Mrs. J. P. Lawton. The other guests were Mrs. F. O. Wood, Miss Belle Roache, Mrs. D. F. Skinner, Mrs. George Davis Adams, Mrs. Silas Burns and Mrs. Gervaise Purcell.

Five hundred was the diversion at a recent social gathering at the home of Mrs. Charles Pike of South Santa Anita. There were three tables of players. After the game dainty refreshments were served.

The Sawyers have timed their visit to be in attendance at the annual G.A.R. and W.R.C. encampment of the Department of California and Nevada, which is now in session at the seaside city. Numerous automobiles carried passengers from the [illegible] station at the church to Germany, Spain, Iceland, Japan and America, refreshments characteristic of each country being served by waitresses in costume, all ending with the grand banquet of familiar dishes in good old United States style.

HOME AND CHURCH.

Mrs. Hughes's interests are, first of all, in her home and family, and she is very greatly interested in her church, and active in many branches of its work. The family are pillars of the Baptist Church. Mr. Hughes's father was a Baptist clergyman and Mr. Hughes himself was one of the most active members—not even excepting the Rockefellers—of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, when he lived in New York. Indeed, it was Mr. Hughes who founded the men's Bible class, which was afterward taken over by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and has become famous under his leadership. In Washington they attend Calvary Baptist Church, of which the Rev. Dr. S. H. Green is pastor, and their pew has nearly always been well-filled at the Sunday-morning service.

Outside of church work Mrs. Hughes's pet activity has been the Woman's Evening Clinic, held, as its name indicates, for the benefit of women employed during the day, so that they may get medical attention at an hour that will not interfere with their work and at a price they can afford to pay. The fees are suited to the purse of the patient and are in many cases merely nominal. Mrs. John Hays Hammond is president of this clinic and Mrs. Hughes its vice-president.

Physically Mrs. Hughes is tall and slightly built. She is dark—at least her hair is dark, with just a few threads of gray, and frames a wide, low forehead, beneath which a pair of dark eyes meet yours very directly. She impresses one as being dark-eyed, but one is not sure of the color, and her friends claim that they are blue. Her features are rather small except she has a wide mouth, which is a trifle thin-lipped, and impresses one as being severe, though it can curve into a most winning smile when she chooses. Her manner is all simplicity and straightforwardness—democratic and courteous—but not effusive. She is one human, you are another—what can she do for you?

The small-featured face, the slender, erect little figure, give an impression of delicacy which is "breed" rather than ill-health. And they give an impression of youth, without any vain endeavor—or vainer applications—on Mrs. Hughes's part. Indeed, she mocks blithely at time, and, insisting that she is not in the least sensitive about her age, proclaims herself as "past 50" probably in much the same spirit that the small boy tells you that he is "going on 8" when his seventh birthday was day before yesterday. She does not look it, and it is safe to say that she is not much past 50, even if she is a grandmother twice over.

HER FAMILY.

Which brings one around to the rest of the household, and first of all to her eldest child and only son, who is no longer of the household, but head of one of his own in New York. Charles Evans Hughes, Jr., while he is singularly like his mother in appearance, is following as closely as he can in the footsteps of his father. He is a young lawyer, a graduate of Columbia and of Harvard Law School, and is said to be sufficiently like his father in disposition to have earned while at college the sobriquet of "Sphinx, Jr." He married two years ago—June 17, 1914—Miss Marjorie Bruce Stuart, daughter of Henry C. Stuart of New York, and a chum and classmate of his sister, Helen, at Vassar; thereby varying slightly his father's programme of marrying the sister of his chum and classmate. They have two little sons, Charles Evans Hughes III, now nearly 18 months old, and a little fellow born early in the summer. Young Hughes at the time of his father's nomination was in camp at Plattsburg, demonstrating his agreement with his sire's theories of the duty of preparedness, both individual and national.

Helen Hughes was a Vassar girl. One does not know why she preferred Vassar to Wellesley, or to Wells College, in Western New York, where her mother studied for three years, and where, incidentally, Frances Folsom, afterwards Mrs. Grover Cleveland, was graduated. Possibly the desire to show her loyalty to the Empire State, of which her father was then Governor, and the fact that Poughkeepsie was not too far from Albany, may have influenced her choice; but as she is eminently human one suspects that some cherished companion had decided to go to Vassar, and, being without prejudice herself, she decided to go along with her chum.

MATTER OF APPEARANCE.

Miss Helen is not so much like her mother physically as is her brother. In fact, as one goes down the line of the Hughes children one runs rather a curious gamut, from likeness to their mother to likeness to their father. To mention just one detail—in the girls Mr. Hughes's very heavy eyebrows are noticeably reproduced, while Mrs. Hughes has very light ones, and her son's, though heavier than hers, are yet nothing like so strongly marked as his sisters'.

Miss Hughes is rather more heavily built than her mother. She has thick, dark hair, and the eyes under her heavy brows are like Mrs. Hughes's, in being indeterminate in color, giving the impression of being brown when they are probably either blue or gray. She could undoubtedly have made a more formal debut than she did if such things appealed to her. They don't. She is a serious-minded girl, and a bit shy. She has no easy flow of small talk. She dances and she rides—sometimes. She goes to dinners and luncheons—sometimes. One meets her occasionally at the White House, or other crush function of officialdom, with her parents, but she does not seem to find them particularly thrilling.

Like her mother, she is interested in church work. She has a class in Sunday-school, and she is interested in the Christian Endeavor Society of the Calvary Baptist Church. Her most active interest, however—and it is very active—is in the Y.W.C.A.

ANOTHER DAUGHTER.

Miss Katherine is still a school girl, or rather a college girl, for she graduated from school last June and is to enter Wellesley in the fall. She is a little fairer than her big sister, and so far as one can judge, a little more inclined to frivolity. She seems more interested in frills and furbelows, and one can imagine that, should it come her way, she will not scorn a White House debut along about the middle of her father's term. It was at her graduation from the Cathedral School (an Episcopal church school, from which also were graduated Helen Taft and Ethel Roosevelt, both recent White House buds) that her father made his flag speech which the Chicago convention seized upon—since it was absolutely his only public utterance even remotely political, in years—as a sort of keynote speech.

Miss Katherine was graduated with honors—not the first, but among the first of her class. She was decidedly one of the leading spirits of the class, and in all the fun of commencement week none was more active, none more interested than Katherine Hughes. She is regarded as the artistic member of the family and when she goes to Wellesley she will take special courses to develop whatever artistic talent she really possesses, and is planning frequent trips to the Boston Museum. The fact that she is going to Wellesley is just now her chief interest in life. She has selected her quarters at Leighton House, one of the newest of the freshman dormitories, and she is to have one of her Cathedral School classmates for her room-mate.

Little Miss Elizabeth, 9 years old, is the family baby, and the one of the children who looks most like her distinguished father. She is just passing from the chubbiness of babyhood to the slenderness of the growing girl. She is not a noisy child, but there is nothing repressed about her. She has been more addicted to dolls than to pets, though she has a bird to which she is devoted. Her chief playmate has been her father, and she has made him, willy-nilly, her fellow-student Which is perhaps one reason why she is usually letter-perfect at school.

She enjoys the distinction of having been the first baby born at the executive mansion at Albany; and she enjoys the distinction of being a new-made candidate's daughter. The excitement, the floods of letters and telegrams, the messages coming and going, the flowers that filled the house during the first few days—cut flowers, and perfectly beautiful baskets and elaborate "set" pieces, till she "didn't know whether it was most like a funeral or a graduation"—were much more to her taste than the calm dignity of the atmosphere of a Supreme Court household.

This is the family that Mrs. Hughes will take to the White House next March, if it should turn out that the Republicans have picked a winner.

And Mrs. Hughes's interests are domestic, religious, educational rather than social. She is not given to asborbing intimacies; she is carried away by no fads; she leads no "movements;" she mounts no hobbies. But if other women are so constituted that husband, home and children do not fill their days; or if they are so unfortunate as not to have these soul-gripping interests—she has no criticism for them.

ONE OF THE MEN WHO ARE MAKING AMERICA.

Charles M. Schwab, the Only Man Who Ever Tore up a Million-dollar Salary Contract — The Truth About Mr. Schwab's Dazzling Record—Why He Quit United States Steel Corporation.

BY B. C. FORBES, in "Leslie's."

THERE is only one man in the world who ever tore up a $1,000,000 a year salary contract.

When the Steel Corporation took over the Carnegie company it acquired as one of its liabilities—it really was an asset—a contract to pay Charles M. Schwab that unheard-of sum annually.

J. P. Morgan didn't know what to do about it. The highest salary on record was $100,000. He was in a quandary.

Finally he summoned Schwab, showed him the contract and hesitatingly asked what could be done about it.

"This," said Schwab.

He tore it up.

That contract had netted Schwab $1,300,000 the previous year.

"I didn't care what salary they paid me. I was not animated by money motives. I believed in what I was trying to do and I wanted to see it brought about. I cancelled that contract without a moment's hesitation." Thus did Mr. Schwab explain his action to me.

There was a sequel. Morgan later told Carnegie how magnanimously Schwab had acted. Carnegie remarked: "Charlie is the only man I know who would have done that."

And he promptly sent Schwab in bonds the full amount of the contract.

Carnegie has declared publicly since: "I owe my fortune chiefly to two men—Bill Jones and Charlie Schwab."

Schwab, let me add, for years picked all the Carnegie partners—Corey was a laborer when the eagle-eyed Schwab first spotted and promoted him. The only man to whom the canny Scot ever gave carte blanche was Schwab.

Although rich beyond his wildest imaginings, Schwab is today the hardest-working man in the steel industry. Why? Let him answer:

"Why do I work? What do I work for? I have more money than I can begin to spend. I have no children, nobody to leave it to. My wife is rich enough in her own right. She does not need it. I do not need it. I work just for the pleasure I find in work, the satisfaction there is in developing things, in creating. Also the associations business begets. The man who does not work for the love of work, but only for money, is not likely to make money nor to find much fun in life."

Let me—let Mr. Schwab, rather—clear up this other point: Why did he give up the Steel Corporation presidency after three years?

Much foolishness has been printed on this score. The most popular—and fantastic—story is that when "The Boy President" went to Europe his reception by King Edward, Emperor Franz Josef and other rulers, the acclaim with which he was received by the populace wherever he went, the sensational prominence given his movements, including his visit to Monte Carlo, "turned his head" and evoked such comment and criticism at home, among stockholders and others, that J. P. Morgan demanded his resignation.

Here is the sober truth, as told me by Mr. Schwab, who has never been accused of lying:

"I never had a difference with Mr. Morgan in my life. We were always the closest possible friends. The reason I resigned was because I could not do what I had been doing all my life. I was hampered by directors and other interests who did not give me sufficient play to enable me to be useful. If I thought a mill ought to be built at Pittsburgh I didn't want an important director telling me it ought to be built at Chicago. If I had a strike involving a principle I didn't want to be told to settle it for fear it might affect the stock market. So I quit."

Fate had greater things in store for him. Today Schwab is ranked as the greatest creative force in American industry. Also he is the best-liked business man in the country.

He has had more "titles" conferred upon him than any other living American. For example, "The World's Greatest Steel-maker," "The Most Successful Salesman Ever Born," "The Million-dollar-salary Man," "The Originator of the Steel Trust," "The Boy President," "The Developer of Young Men," "The Creator of the American Krupps," "The Defender of America," "The Incurable Optimist," "The Man with the Golden Smile," and "The Bethlehem Miracle-worker."

This article might well be called "The Truth About Schwab." His picturesque career has inspired so much fiction that it is gratifying to be able to dissipate the fables and to set the record straight.

The Schwab family moved from Williamsburg, Pa., where Charles Michael was born on February 18, 1862, to the picturesque hamlet of Loretto, Pa., on a crest of the Alleghenies, when the future steel king was a little lad. On leaving the local school he spent two years at St. Francis College. As with many men destined to make a mark, he became enamored of mathematics. Also he could apply his figures to engineering problems. The latter fascinated him.

But, alas, instead of landing in a collar-and-cuff position where he could use his knowledge and talent, he was obliged, at 16, to mount the driver's seat of a coach his father ran between Loretto and Cresson Station. Undaunted, he cracked jokes along with his whip.

His first real job was as a grocery boy in the store at Braddock, of A. H. Speigelmire, an old friend of Papa Schwab, who also kept a store. From the first day he donned his apron he had his eye on the great steel mills there, the Edgar Thomson Works, owned by Carnegie Brothers & Co. But meanwhile, although he disliked the work, he contrived to liven up things at the store. He smiled on customers, chatted with them, jumped at chances to please them by carry parcels or doing little errands, and in the evenings he made things hum in the Speigelmire household by playing the piano, singing for them and teaching the youngsters music. "He's willing and bright and wants to know everything," was his employer's description of him. The mathematician was not above learning how to handle groceries. He well earned his $30 a month (without board.)

One day Capt. William R. Jones, superintendent of the steel works, the right-hand man of Andrew Carnegie and the best-known steelmaker in the country, stepped into the store.

"I asked 'Bill' for a place in the mill," Mr. Schwab relates. "He asked me: 'Can you drive stakes?' I replied: 'I can drive anything!' I started driving stakes next morning, at a dollar a day."

In six years the dollar-a-day stake driver was superintendent of the works, then the foremost steelmaking plant in America!

"They say it was your piano-playing that attracted Carnegie," I probed.

"There's no truth in that at all," replied Mr. Schwab with spirit. "I never played for Mr. Carnegie in my life. It was Capt. 'Bill' that took me to Carnegie one day and said: 'Andy, here's a young man who knows as much about this mill as I do.'"

Carnegie, like Capt. "Bill," "took to" the young engineer. So did the men. Everybody was happy when "Charlie" was around. His enthusiasm, his joyousness, his industry proved infectious. His ability to overcome difficulties was on everyone's tongue. He had studied chemistry as well as engineering, had conducted innumerable experiments to test the strength and qualities of the metal under different processes, and, as Carnegie later handsomely admitted, "knew more about steel than any other man in the world."

His next step was to the head of the engineering department of the whole Carnegie organization. Here he taught the industry a new wrinkle. He conceived and planned a greater plant than any then in existence, the Homestead Steel Works, on the principle of feeding the raw material at one end, keeping it in continuous motion and having it come out in the form of finished products at the other end—a system since widely adopted in various industries and carried to its highest pitch by Henry Ford in his automobile factory at Detroit. At this time he had some 6000 or 7000 men under him.

All this at 24!

When Carnegie was confronted with the nerve-shaking problem of reopening the Homestead Works after the terrible strike of 1892, when the successful handling of the men appeared impossible, he turned to young Schwab, appointed him superintendent of the plant and told him to see what he could do.

Do! Why, there was only one thing for Schwab to do—turn every workman into a rooter and make the plant the most pleasant and profitable in the world. The Schwab smile, the Schwab cordiality, the Schwab radiancy, the Schwab sincerity, the Schwab enthusiasm, plus the Schwab ability amounting to genius, won all hands and all hearts. The younger Pitt never showed greater tact, diplomacy and statesmanship.

Election to the presidency of the Carnegie Company, the greatest prize in the whole steel industry, was his reward. He had won it in fifteen years from his debut as a dollar-a-day stake driver, won it by basic study of the metal and of men, won it by hard work done with a will and a smile, won it by sheer achievement in evolving methods of producing steel faster, cheaper and in greater quantities—and in keeping workmen happy and loyal at their tasks. At thirty-five Schwab stood on the top step of the steel ladder.

His fame was international. When Schwab was driving stakes England was master of the world's steel markets. But Schwab had now done much to change that. His brilliantly conceived Homestead plant, though paying wages thrice those of Europe, could meet the keenest of European competition. The United States, indeed, was now clipping England's wings.

Arthur Keen, the foremost steel manufacturer in Britain, approached the young American genius with an offer of a fabulous salary—greater far than any salary paid any man in any country. Schwab told him nothing could tempt him to leave his friend and benefactor, Carnegie, with whom by this time he was on terms of filial intimacy and affection. To nobody else did Schwab mention the offer.

Keen and Carnegie met later at a dinner of the British Iron and Steel Institute and Keen related the incident. "If Charley is worth that much to you, he is worth more to me," was, in effect, Carnegie's reply.

The moment he got back he sent for Schwab, told him he loved him all the more for his loyalty—and gave him a long-term contract worth a minimum of $1,000,000 a year!

A GREAT VISION REALIZED.

But Charles Michael Schwab had still greater dreams and ideals. Why not make the United States the foremost steel-producing country in the world, able to meet and beat Europe in foreign markets?

His make-up combined the dreamer and the doer. In his fertile mind he conjured up a vision such as the world had never known, a vision of the greatest, strongest industrial organization on earth, co-ordinated, integrated, self-contained, with abundant capital, the best of brains and ramifications covering the globe.

Fascinated, he began to act. His first overtures were repelled by J. P. Morgan and others. But Schwab, as Carnegie was and is fond of saying, "can hurdle any obstacle." At a dinner given in his honor in December, 1900, he spread his vision before the greatest financiers and business men in America. He was as one inspired. Donning the mantle of a prophet, he pictured the glorious possibilities of the new steel age.

His glowing outline of the steel trust captivated Morgan, and within a few months the billion-dollar United States Steel Corporation was formed, with Schwab as its president and the owner of $28,000,000 (par value) of its capital stock. This at 39! He was "the boy president."

On resigning in impaired health at the end of three strenuous years—after he had got the billion-dollar machine working as efficiently as outside interference would permit—he announced: "I propose to devote my whole attention to regaining my strength and won't take any position until it is restored."

He rested, though not wholly idle, for two or three years before reentering the business arena, at South Bethlehem, Pa.

BETHLEHEM MIRACLES.

Miracles have been wrought at the Bethlehem Steel Works, all the world knows. The world imagines Charles M. Schwab has wrought them. The world is mistaken. The miracles have been wrought by others — by fifteen young partners. So Mr. Schwab stoutly declares. That is because he is the most modest of men.

"There has really been nothing wonderful about my career," protested Mr. Schwab when I approached him on the subject. "I am not a believer in genius. I believe Solomon was right when he said: 'The race is not to the swift nor the battle to the strong.' Circumstances, environment, opportunity have a lot to do with a man's success in life.

"But of course there are qualities that go to make a man really successful. A man must have personality—that is very important. He must have industry, application and common sense—no man can do much if he has not been endowed with a reasonable amount of brains. He must cultivate good fellowship, he must be a man other men will like and trust. He must have a reputation for being fair, a man of his word. Optimism, cheerfulness, readiness to encourage and inspire others also help.

"I happened to be fortunate in getting into an industry in its infancy that offered phenomenal opportunities, that's all. And I took risks."

"How?" I asked.

This started Mr. Schwab on the story of Bethlehem's upbuilding. The Bethlehem Steel Company was bankrupt when Schwab took hold of it last time—he bought control once before, when he was with the Steel Corporation, sold out to the ill-fated United States Shipbuilding Company and took it back when that enterprise collapsed.

"When I took hold of Bethlehem the second time I didn't take one well-known steel man from anywhere. I selected fifteen young men right out of the mill and made them my partners. I believe in profit-sharing—I believe it will ultimately settle the labor problem. Andrew Carnegie was the most successful profit producer in this country and he gave his employees half of his profits in bonuses.

"If you want anything well done in life don't engage a man of great reputation to do it. Get a man who has his reputation to make; he will give you his very best individual, undivided effort.

"Of the fifteen I selected not one has proved a failure. I am proud of that and proud of them. One of them was a crane fellow at $75 a month. He is now earning five times as much as any other steel employee in the United States and is several times a millionaire. This is Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem company and the man chiefly responsible for its success. He is fifty times the man I ever was."

I smiled.

"I mean that," Mr. Schwab affirmed.

MANY YEARS' HARD WORK.

Mr. Schwab didn't say that he closed up his palatial home on Riverside drive, migrated to the obscure Pennsylvania village, took off his coat and worked day and night for eight years, often against financial and other discouragements, nursing the bankrupt Bethlehem back to health and strength.

"I backed Bethlehem with every dollar I had and could borrow. I put my own name to every piece of paper issue. Then, also, I took hold of Gray's invention for making structural steel after every important company in the country had turned it down and, because I was convinced I was right, I spent $15,000,000 for the proving of that one invention. Was that not taking risks? But it gave us the leadership in the structural steel business in the United States and in the world. There had never been a conspicuously successful steel plant in the East. But I believed Bethlehem had all the elements of success. It is some satisfaction to have proved my judgment was right."

I cannot attempt to describe Mr. Schwab's activities of the last ten years—how he worked at the plant early and late, encouraging and enthusing his men, how he evolved the most scientific cost-ascertaining and profit-sharing plan ever adopted by any great enterprise, how he crossed and recrossed the Atlantic and the Pacific booking greater orders than any other man ever aspired to secure, how he went straight to Kitchener when the war began, told him a few useful truths and came back with enough business to boom Bethlehem as it had never boomed before. I can merely mention a few facts about the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and its upbuilder.

A HUGE CORPORATION.

Schwab has spent $100,000,000 in strengthening and expanding it and in acquiring subsidiaries.

Expenditures totaling $70,000,000 more have been sanctioned within the last few months.

The corporation (with subsidiaries) employs 60,000 men all told.

It is a greater producer of enginery of war than the far-famed German Krupps.

It is now, in conjunction with its subsidiaries, and its properties in Chile and Cuba, next in size to the United States Steel Corporation.

Its shipbuilding companies on both coasts give it the largest facilities of any company in America.

It can turn our more submarines in a month than any other American company could build in several months.

It forms a bulwark for the United States in case of war.

Its war orders from the allies for two years are unofficially computed at $350,000,000.

Its "peace" production matches its war product.

Its common stock rose from $25 a share before the war to $600 in 1915, making many Schwab followers millionaires and eclipsing the record of all other "war stocks." It now pays dividends of 30 per cent. a year.

Schwab was recently offered $53,000,000 for his holdings—said to be approximately 90,000 preferred and 60,000 common—with the choice of remaining at the head of the company for ten years. The offer did not even tempt him. Money is not his goal. His ambition is to build up such an organization as he visioned at that dinner in 1900, an organization that will contribute to raising the United States to first place among the great nations of the earth.

Like Carnegie, Schwab is a lavish philanthropist. A beautiful Catholic church at Loretto, a convent house at Cresson, a model road in place of the dilapidated one where he used

KEEP GREAT VALLEY GREEN.

Writes on Imperial Water Supply.

River Bed and Silted Canal Difficulties.

Means for Remedying Trouble Suggested.

Aug. 15.—[To the The Times.] The Imperial has been suffering from a shortage, although the water the Colorado has been the ever known.

due partly to the cutting the river bed and partly to up of the Alamo (Im misfortunes were pre during 1914, in articles The Los Angeles Times Imperial Valley papers, article No. 1, in The September 6, 1914:

headgates of the Alamo are place, and wrongly de

heavy sand, which is the to get into the canal a great extent, drifts and the bed of the river, or bed; hence gates which the bottom, as the gates Alamo, draw in the heavy the partly raised gate water from the most stratum; whereas, the be made to open from so that the water is all the upper strata in which much silt, and prac heavy sand.

self-evident that by shut lower six or eight feet the river current would of the heavy sand past and it must be re that when the river is five times as much to the cubic foot of when it is low, so that, although it may be frequently necessary to leave the gates wide open, at such times, silt is comparatively light.

"CANAL SYSTEM CHOKED."

"At present, it costs the Imperial Valley about $400,000 a year to maintain the canal system, and probably nearly 75 per cent. of this large sum is due to silt and sand. Moreover, the canal system gets so choked up that it is unable to carry sufficient water to fully irrigate the crops, and there is an annual average loss of probably $500,000, due to the inability of the canal system to convey the needed water: hence, I estimate that the sand and silt cost the Imperial Valley $800,000 a year; and, of this, at least 65 per cent. is due to drawing the water supply from the bottom or the river, where the silt and sand are heaviest, instead of from the top, where there is only light sediment in the water."

In article No. 7, published in The Times, the Seeley Sentinel and other papers, I showed from the experiments made by the reclamation service that the average silt in the Colorado water is about three-fourths of 1 per cent.; I assumed that 40 per cent. of this mud was carried out by the water on to the irrigated fields; there remained .45 of 1 per cent. to be accounted for. I assumed that the valley was then using 4500 cubic feet per second; .45 of 1 per cent. of 4500 cubic feet per second is 20¼ cubic feet per second, amounting to 1,944,000 cubic yards in thirty days.

WARNING GIVEN.

Quoting from the article:

"Then deduct the yardage dredged, excavated and otherwise disposed of; if the balance is not deposited in the Alamo, where is it? If it is accumulating in the Alamo, the water supply of the valley may be likened to a man whose capital is being depleted yearly: he is warned by his reduced income, just as the valley is warned by the falling capacity of the Alamo."

I gave figures to show that the silt settlement is incomparably cheaper than dredging. My conclusions were:

"(1) That the Alamo is silting up rapidly.

"(2) That there is no comparison between the cost of settling the silt in settling pools, and of dredging.

"(3) That the cheap way to build levees is to make the water do it, and at the same time get rid of the silt."

As regards the silting up of the Alamo, the above predictions have proved only too true.

BEE RIVER BREAK.

Quoting from Article No. 8, on the Bee River break:

"For several years no water has flowed down the old channel of the Colorado below the breach, which proves that the present bed of the river, where it issues through the break, is lower than the old bed, by the difference between high and low-water levels, plus the low-water depth of channel; the difference between low and high water at Yuma is about fifteen feet, and, assuming the bed of the river at the breach to be fifteen feet lower than it used to be, it is interesting to speculate upon what future effect this may have upon the water supply of the Imperial Valley.

"In my judgment the river bed will form a new grade, extending from the foot of the Laguna dam to the break; as the mouth of the Alamo is, roughly, half-way between these two points, the river bed would cut down seven and a half feet at that point if the grade became uniform.

"This would require the water to cary a vast quantity of sand and silt out through the breach and would, of course, take a long time to fully mature, but some evidence should now be beginning to show up, three years having elapsed since Mr. Ockerson abandoned the last attempt to stop the breach.

"1. I find that with 70,000 second feet in the river the records at Yuma show that the reading on the gauge is two feet lower than it was in former years with the same quantity of water flowing in the river.

"2. Col. Holabird states that the river bed at the mouth of the Alamo has cut down. In September, 1913, only 5000 second feet were flowing in the Colorado, and of this all but about 1000 second feet flowed into the Alamo; a photograph shows that the beds of the Alamo and of the Colorado were almost at the same level, whereas, this year, with six or seven times as much water in the river, there are only about 3000 second feet getting into the Alamo.

"3. At the point where the river cut through the levee in 1914, about six miles south of Andrade, the water was about three feet lower than the natural surface of the ground when the gauge reading at Yuma was thirty feet; the top of the old levee looked to be about ten feet above the water; the new levee built by Gen. Marshall at this point never had a drop of water against it.

"LOWERING ITS BED."

"These three facts indicate that the river is lowering its bed, and if that be allowed to continue unchecked there may be little or no water in the Alamo next year, or in any season as dry, or nearly as dry, as 1913.

"In that year there were only 45,000 second feet in the river on June 1 only 16,000 in July, 11,000 in August and 5000 in September.

"In 1914, with 70,000 second feet in the Colorado, there was a slight shortage in the Alamo; with 35,000 second feet in the river there was a considerable shortage. Possibly the bed may silt up again, but I doubt it; there seems to me to be a very definite reason for the cutting down.

"Forewarned is forearmed.

"If my theory is correct there are three remedies: Either to close the breach, to dredge the Alamo deeper, or to put in a diversion weir to raise the water level in the river at a point somewhat below the mouth of the Alamo; any one will require considerable time to plan and carry out, so that if this question be allowed to drift along as it has in 1914 it may be too late to avoid a tremendous loss should 1915 be a dry year, or even a moderate year."

The Times of February 7, 1915, printed the report of Ray S. Carberry, superintendent of Mutual Water Company No. 1, covering the year 1914. Quoting from the report:

"The bed of the Colorado River . . . lowered about four feet below any point it had reached during the past six years, making the elevation of the surface of the water relatively lower for the same discharge of the river and therefore more difficult to divert water into the Alamo."

ENOUGH WARNING.

In the above article I gave a simple reason why the river bed would fall at the mouth of the Alamo; I showed that it had already fallen there to some extent, that the bed at Yuma had lowered, and that six miles below the Alamo the bed was very much lower.

Then Mr. Carberry drew attention to its having fallen four feet in 1914, so that there was warning enough.

The remedies are:

(1.) A temporary movable diversion wier so as to be able to fill the Alamo.

(2.) A new gate where the Alamo leaves the river, which will admit top water and cut down the silt received into the system, perhaps 65 per cent.

(3.) Silt settlement, so that the canals have clear water.

WE NEED THE MONEY.

Should the President Veto the River and Harbor Bill?

BY PAUL O. HUSTING,
United States Senator from Washington.

During the history of the country about $850,000,000 have been expended in river and harbor so-called improvements, enough money to have built two Panama canals, or to have built for us the foremost navy in the world. Some of this money has been judiciously expended in harbor improvements, but a great amount has been spent on creeks and rivers, extravagantly and uselessly, and has brought little or no returns.

We are now engaged in a programme of preparedness involving extraordinary expenditures. We are increasing our army, our navy and other arms of the service. We are living in times of national peril, and by common consent we should put ourselves, no matter at what cost, in a position to safeguard and preserve our national life and integrity. Unless we desire to bond ourselves we will be hard put to to raise the money necessary by taxation. It is nothing less than folly to vote great sums for improvements not immediately useful. Even though some of these projects have merit, unless they are vitally necessary at this time they should be deferred until such time as we can afford to resume them. In the meantime it is a matter of policy—of sound common sense—that we should marshal the resources of the nation in one common patriotic purpose, that of putting ourselves in a position where we can properly defend ourselves.

For many years the usefulness of members of Congress has been measured by the amount of appropriations they have brought into their respective territories. Men have gone before their constituents and claimed re-election because of the large appropriations which they had succeeded in bringing to their district or State for river and creek improvements. Consequently, it has come to be considered a meritorious thing for a member of Congress to secure such appropriations. River and harbor bills have been made up and appropriations divided around in such a manner as to secure the necessary votes to pass the bills. In this way they have come into disrepute if they have not, indeed, become a matter of national scandal.

On the Missouri River, for example, the saving to shippers on freight rates, according to the reports filed in the hearings on this bill, amounted to about $10,000 per year. The cost of maintenance, together with interest upon the investment, upon completion would amount to $1,100,000 per year, that is to say, that it will cost us $1,100,000 a year to save the people in freight rates $10,000 a year. The friends of the bill claim, of course, that traffic will increase after the completion of the projects, but experience has shown that upon improved rivers like the Ohio and Mississippi tonnage has not increased, but actually decreased, and that there is no reason to believe or hope under present conditions that even after completion there will be much more river traffic. This was the conclusion reached by Col. Deakyne, who had charge of the work on the Missouri River after the government had expended $10,000,000 or upward on that stream and who recommended the abandonment of the project.

Col. Deakyne's report was overruled by Gen. Black, but in overruling such report Gen. Black admitted "That up to this time experience in the United States on some other improved rivers, and particularly on the Mississippi has not been such as to encourage the expectation that a river traffic will develop commensurate with the large cost of improvement," and following this statement, "It will be difficult, indeed, to find economic justification of the cost of the improvement of the Missouri River from past experience on other waterways having similar conditions." Yet in the face of these statements and admissions Gen. Black overruled the recommendations of Col. Deakyne to abandon the project. The principal reason for overruling it given by Gen. Black was that the project would reclaim 500,000 acres of swamp land along the Missouri. If a proper and lawful purpose of river improvement were the drainage of swamp lands a small amount of money might thus be well expended, but when we know that Congress can only vote money for river improvement on grounds of improvement of navigation, then it is not only unwise, but unlawful to use millions of public money to increase the value of lands in private ownership. If this is the showing that can be made only upon the best projects, the public can understand just how bad the other smaller projects are.

The people of this country are anxious to put an end to this sort of legislation. Our millions have been uselessly expended and in the main we have nothing to show for our expenditures. As a result of this headless plan and the abuses that follow in its train, good harbor projects have been neglected or entirely overlooked or abandoned. For if money is expended on unworthy projects the same amount must necessarily be eliminated or curtailed from meritorious plans.

It is my belief that this will be the last river and harbor improvement bill of this kind that will ever be passed. Members of Congress will refuse to give their votes or lend their assistance to any more waste of public moneys in this fashion. Many of the members voting for this bill are not proud of their vote, and will in the future refuse to vote for any such bills.

The very best solution for the present is that we should stop spending money until a commission composed of the greatest engineers in the country shall have figured out some comprehensive scheme of improvement. After such a plan has been submitted and adopted we can proceed as fast as circumstances and our finances will permit to the development of river improvements as a whole and we can then see to it that for every dollar put into the development of this scheme we should receive a dollar's benefit.

Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, who at the beginning of the war was overwhelmed with letters of congratulation on his victories, seems to be much engaged at present in correspondence about bee keeping. The German newspapers publish a number of his epistles.

TRIES NEW FIELD.

MYTHOLOGICAL SPECTACLE IS A NOVELTY OF WEEK.

Mythology has been a comparatively neglected field in motion pictures. Therefore the showing this week of one of the most beautiful of the Greek myths, "Diana the Huntress," may be termed an event. It is said that so great has been the success of this film in the East that the producing company is preparing to picturize a number of Greek myths.

Much variety in the character of entertainment is afforded by this week's pictures, including everything from the historical "Daughter of the Don," to some of the best of Mack Sennett's very excellent Keystone comedies.

Palace.

Spectacular and artistic will be the headline screen production at the Palace, "Diana, the Huntress." It is said to surpass in artistry and beauty the spectacle "Undine," which opened the Palace some months ago. It is the mythological story of Diana, the goddess of wisdom and chastity, and her two lovers, Acteon and Endymion.

The story concerns the punishment of Acteon for gazing upon Diana and her nymphs bathing in a pool. He is turned into a stag to be pursued by his own hounds and hunters. Later Diana finds Endymion, the shepherd boy, asleep, and carries him away to the moon with her.

The dramatic attraction will be "Lieutenant Danny, U.S.A.," featuring the popular Ince favorites, William Desmond and Enid Markey. Mack Sennett's comedy contribution will be "His First False Step," with Chester Conklin.

Tally's Broadway.

Ethel Clayton and Carlyle Blackwell, both favorite film stars, will appear at Tally's Broadway, beginning tomorrow, in a film version of Grace George's famous comedy, "A Woman's Way." The story is of a woman's method adopted to win back her erring husband's affections. Both Miss Clayton and Mr. Blackwell are said to be at their best in this picture play, which is full of high comedy situations, as well as dramatic action.

A new Krazy Kat cartoon, a fashion playlet entitled, "Beauty and the Beast," and interesting news events complete the programme.

Symphony.

Mabel Taliaferro, the gifted and charming stage star, who is now starring in Metro photoplays, will appear at the Symphony, beginning today, in "God's Half Acre."

The story, which promises to be a human and pathetic one, centers around an old folks' home, in which Miss Taliaferro plays the role of a young servant who sympathizes with the old people in their troubles, and aids them by smuggling extra food and other little comforts to them. She becomes the heroine of a young writer's novel, as well as of his heart.

Superba.

Myrtle Gonzales, a favorite in the film world, will appear at the Superba, commencing tomorrow, as heroine in a delightfully human and thrilling photoplay, entitled "The Secret of the Swamp." Not only is the photoplay said to be a very gripping one, but it promises a surprise finish of delightful and exciting nature.

Clune's Broadway.

"Bettina Loved a Soldier," a screen adaptation of Ludovic Halevy's masterpiece of fiction, "L'Abbe Constantin," will be the attraction at Clune's Broadway, beginning today. Without the conventional effort to drag sensationalism into the situations, there is plenty of excitement, climaxing in a realistic duel in which the girl in the case finally dominates.

Louise Lovely, Francelia Billington and Rupert Julian have the leading roles, with little Zoe du Rae, the winsome child star, winning big laurels in a coquettish juvenile part.

Clune's Auditorium.

Intimate and graphic views of the great European conflict are scheduled in the film feature to be shown at Clune's Auditorium beginning tomorrow. These pictures were taken on the ground of conflict, while the battles were in progress, and were filmed in the very vanguard of the German army.

Capt. Kleinschmidt, who came direct from Vienna to California, will be present, and explain his exploits. For two years, under commission from Archduke Frederick, Austrian commander-in-chief, he exposed his life with consummate daring. He was with the advance guard in Von Hindenberg's great drive into Russia, Frederick's sweep over Serbia and on the Italian frontier.

The pictures show battles in progress, scenes in the trenches, submarines and scout aircraft under fire, flaming cities and immense forts torn to pieces by 1000-pound shells, as well as panic-stricken refugees, etc.

Majestic.

"The Daughter of the Don," Los Angeles' own photodrama, begins its second big week at the Majestic this afternoon. The picture of historic old pueblos, with all the charm of its golden days of romance and picturesque existence, at once won recognition, and the picture has been showing to big crowds.

The thrilling history of the battles which accompanied the passing of the Golden State from Mexican to United States rule form the background for a beautiful romance. Historic characters of note, including Gen. Fremont and Gov. Pio Pico are shown.

Miller's.

Virginia Pearson, the bewitching screen beauty, in "Daredevil Kate," is to be seen at Miller's Theater starting today. This is a stirring story of a woman's redemption in which the brains of the East are pitted against the strength of the West, with a woman holding the balance. The role of Kate portrayed by Miss Pearson is said to be a character unique in literature and the motion pictures. It is a near-vampire type.

The production has been beautifully staged and the star is surrounded by a brilliant company of actors and actresses, including the two famous child artists, Jane and Katherine Lee.

The added attractions are a new news pictorial and the funny Mutt and Jeff cartoons.

Garrick.

Herbert Rawlinson and Ella Hall will be co-starred at the Garrick this week in "Little Eva Edgarton," a dramatic photoplay based on Eleanor H. Abbott's serial, originally published in Everybody's Magazine. Miss Hall is reputed as a most accomplished actress, while Herbert Rawlinson's work in "The Sea Wolf" endeared him permanently to movie fans. Rawlinson is said to have a big, vital part in this production, that he takes in a forceful and masterly manner. He has not appeared on a local screen for some time, and his many admirers are eager to welcome him back.

As a special added attraction of unusual interest, the manager has secured the first films on "Fighting Infantile Paralysis."

Alhambra.

"Sporting Blood," that thrilling and exciting romance of the race track which proved one of the most enjoyable pictures of the season at Miller's Theater during the week just closed is to be shown in the city for one more week starting Sunday at the Alhambra. The color and the glamor of the turf is embodied in this picture.

The added attraction is to be a new and funny Napoleon and Sally chimpanzee comedy.

Dorothy Bernard in "Sporting Blood," Alhambra.

Myrtle Gonzales in "The Secret of the Swamp," Superba.

Enid Markey and Robert Kortman in "Lieutenant Danny, U.S.A." Palace.

Pauline Frederick in "The Woman in the Case," Woodley.

Virginia Pearson in "Daredevil Kate," Millers.

Ella Hall in "Little Eva Edgerton," Garrick.

Francelia Billington in "Bettina Loved a Soldier," Clune's Broadway.

Scenes from "Two Years in the Trenches," Clune's Auditorium.

Ethel Clayton in "A Woman's Way," Tally's Broadway.

Betrothal ceremony in "The Daughter of the Don," Majestic.

Mabel Taliaferro in "God's Half Acre," Symphony.

Pictureland.

Stars of the silent drama who will scintillate here this week.

Woodley.

Pauline Frederick in a picturization of Clyde Fitch's great dramatic success, "The Woman in the Case," is to be the drawing card at the Woodley Theater beginning tomorrow. Miss Frederick's name has long been coupled with that of vampire roles and it may be that in such roles she has won her greatest distinction. In this, her latest picture, however, she assumes the role of the lovable woman, the self-sacrificing wife who fights against the woman of the world, to save her husband's reputation. A new Burton Holmes travel picture, showing some interesting views, will round out the programme.

FOR BETTER UNDERSTANDING.

New Film Organization Would Study Public's Taste.

To keep closer in touch with the demands of the public in regard to motion pictures, to act as their now censorship board, as well as to fight unjust legislation against the industry, is the object of the new organization representing $500,000,000 worth of motion picture capital, recently effected in New York City, according to Samuel Goldfish, chairman of the board of directors of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and one of the most active in forming the new organization.

"We want to learn what the public wants in the form of motion picture entertainment and then give it to them," explained Mr. Goldfish. "We know that the great majority of the photodramatic patrons do not want sensational or suggestive pictures, and one of the principal objects of this federation is to prevent these sensational plays being offered to the public."

FILM VISUALIZES HUGHES'S POPULARITY.

ENTHUSIASM that greeted Presidential Candidate Hughes when he was starting on his Coast tour is a striking feature of the current issue of the "Times"-Universal Animated Weekly. Pictures taken in Detroit and Chicago reveal the immense crowds anxious to get a view of the Republican leader. Mrs. Hughes is shown sharing in the greeting to her husband. A huge crowd lines up to clasp the hand of the popular candidate.

There are many interesting features in this week's issue. They cover a wide range of subjects and territory. One of the most unusual topics is an American scientist's risk of his life to ignite gases within a crater, which [illegible] of Sardinia, Italy. WITH THE PHOTOPLAY STARS IN SUNNY FILMLAND.

By Grace Kingsley.

Mary Pickford will head her own company hereafter, producing big features which will be released independent of any programme. It was formally announced yesterday that the Mary Pickford Film Corporation had been organized and offices opened in the Godfrey Building in New York.

Miss Pickford personally is to direct and supervise every detail of her productions. It is also announced that she will surround herself with the best brains and skill the motion picture field will yield.

[illegible] All Right.

The first picture which the new [illegible] Film Corporation, recently organized, will produce, will be a film version of Robert McLaughlin's play, "The Eternal Magdalene." For the leading role Constance Collier has been engaged, with several other film stars to support her.

Other plans of the new corporation include a ten-reel picture version of "The Decameron of Boccaccio." John H. Ince, brother of Thomas H., will direct the latter picture, which will be filmed for the most part abroad, requiring a period of at least six months to complete. Some of the scenes will be filmed on the Mediterranean coast of Southern France, and others at Damascus and in Persia, while yet other pictures will be made on the north coast of Africa.

[illegible]'s Wildness.

William S. Hart will begin a new picture at Inceville this week, in which he will play another wild western role.

One of Hart's stunts in the picture will be a dash through a window while on horseback.

Music for "Intolerance."

Joseph Carl Breil, composer of the music for Griffith's latest picture, "Intolerance," will leave for New York early next week, in order to rehearse the orchestra which will play there to accompany the picture.

[illegible]

Bernard McConville, of the Fine Arts scenario staff, has just finished a scenario telling a story of early California days, in which Bessie Love will be starred, supported by Ralph Lewis, Georgie Stone, Carmen [illegible] and others.

Anita's Big Chance.

Anita King, the Lasky star, will begin work tomorrow in a big feature film version of the play, "The Heir to the Hoorah." Featured with her will be Thomas Meighan, the popular film star. The production is to be a notable one, with gorgeous settings, and will afford Miss King an excellent opportunity to display her dramatic gifts as well as some stunning gowns.

[illegible] Now a Film.

And now it's Ellen Terry. Miss Terry has been engaged by the Ideal Film Company of London to appear in a picture play.

[illegible] Bath.

Director Ben Wilson, who plays the role of an Indian in the U feature "The Last of His Race," took a twenty-foot tumble from a cliff at Pine Crest, near San Bernardino, this week while engaged in a struggle with his assistant, Tom Walsh, who was playing the part of an Indian guide.

Wilson and Walsh fought to the edge of the cliff, where a rock gave way under them, and both men dropped into the stream, four feet deep, below. Old Sol was sending out 100-degree heat at the time and neither Wilson nor Walsh complained about the fall into the water.

Myrtle's New Play.

Myrtle Gonzales will shortly appear for the Universal in a photoplay entitled "The End of the Rainbow," which was written and will be directed by Lynn Reynolds. Val Paul, Frederick Montague and George Hernandez will support Miss Gonzales.

[illegible] Shooting.

The torpedo-boat destroyer Farragut, while lying off Los Angeles Harbor, was badly riddled with shot this week. The grim destroyer of the American navy was shot from every side but notwithstanding her numerous punctures is still above water, and some day may do effective service for Uncle Sam. The Farragut literally suffered for motion picture purposes, and the shooting was indulged by a battery of cameras belonging to the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, engaged in taking scenes in the three-reel photo-

Some red tape it takes to acquire permission to "shoot" a battleship even for motion picture purposes. Vice-president Davis of Universal wired Secretary Josephus Daniels of the navy, who wired Capt. Hudson, commander of the torpedo boat, both of whom gave their consent.

Kathlyn Williams,

Noted screen actress, who has lately joined the Morosco-Pallas forces. She is famed for her work in "The Spoilers," "The Ne'er-Do-Well" and other notable features put on by the Selig company.

Get This One.

Stuart Holmes, William Fox's expert in villainy, has a parrot.

A friend of feminine persuasion, who knew not of the parrot's stubborn nature and general irritableness, asked Holmes recently:

"What is your parrot's name? Tell me, what do you call it?"

Quick as a flash Holmes answered:

"Madam, you probably meant to ask me one question. You have really asked me two."

Deductive Reasoning Note.

Down at Miller's the other day a scene of a stock exchange in action was being shown, as a part of a Fox feature. The brokers were hurrying about, pushing, waving their arms, gesticulating and shouting. To those who knew not, they seemed like a band of Indians off the reservation, hot on a fresh trail.

Two young girls of the debutante age watched the shoving, jostling mob for some time. Then one asked in an awed whisper:

"Why on earth don't they sit down and rest once in a while?"

"Why, my dear," came the answer, "don't you know that a seat on the stock exchange costs thousands of dollars?"

Agnes as Soldier.

William Worthington's next production at Universal City will be "Captain Peggy," with Agnes Vernon in the leading role.

Old Ladies Too!

Charlie Chaplin's letter file is one of the most interesting institutions in the world. One curious item concerning it is that there are many letters from old ladies who have lost their sons and who want to adopt him, asking whether he is well taken care of, his socks carefully mended, etc. Other letters from old ladies declare that their sons have disappeared, and want to know if Charlie has a strawberry mark on his neck or any other mark by which he may be identified as the wandering boy.

A letter from a Chinese in Peking declares that the audience at one of Chaplin's pictures sat and looked at the film "quietly and respectfully." Chaplin doesn't know whether that's a compliment or not.

Too Particular.

An extra girl was hired the other day to double for a well known motion picture actress who shall here be nameless. The scene called for said leading lady to be thrown from her horse. Good and well. The extra girl liked riding and wasn't afraid. Next day, however, they changed the scene so that the girl had to be nearly drowned.

"And I'd so much rather break my neck than be drowned!" wailed the extra girl.

Captain's Back Fire.

Army maneuvers, sham battles and all that sort of thing happen, you know, in Balboa pictures. Recently a bridge over a river having theoretically been blown up, Harry Harvey, formerly of the United States Army, now a director with the Balboa Amusement Company, had posted a large placard which read: "This bridge has been destroyed."

A motion picture infantry captain trying to cross the river with his men made for the bridge, saw the placard and halted his men. He thought a moment, and then inspired he tore a piece off the placard, wrote on it, pinned it on the coat of the tallest man in the front rank and started marshaling his company across the bridge. Harvey saw it and mad clear through thundered up to the bridge and halted the command.

"What the blank do you mean, you gourd head?" shouted Harvey. "Can't you see that placard?"

The captain triumphantly pointed with his sword to the card on the soldier's coat. It read: "These men are swimming across!"

Understudied McGinty.

Stuart Paton, who spent a year and a half filming the Universal production, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," which will be released in twelve reels, has looked at more film during the past two months, he says, than any other man in the business.

One hundred and thirty thousand feet was taken during the year that Paton's company was in the Bahama Islands, when the under-sea pictures were made for the production.

Paton is now engaged in cutting the picture, and the work of "boiling down" 200,000 feet of film to 12,000 feet is an extraordinary task, especially where the film is so utterly different from the usual material.

No D. T.'S Either.

Once a picture studio starts to acquire a zoo, it seems impossible to stop. Whether they want it or not, the Signal Film Corporation seems doomed to possess a zoo. One after another, animals are being added to the collection. Three days after arriving in Ahcata, a lumberjack who had followed Helen Homes's work throughout the serial of "The Girl and the Game," entered the hotel lobby, bringing with him a fine specimen of owl which he insisted she accept. Miss Holmes did not at the moment feel any compelling need of an owl, but she accepted the gift, and sent it to the Los Angeles Signal zoo, where, in a cage by itself, it cocks an eye to all beholders, and wisely questions "Who?" also "Why?" and "Where?" as it awaits its debut into pictures.

Wears Her Purse in Sling.

Anna Little has just purchased a bungalow at Santa Barbara. It is to have a conservatory. She is also spending a great deal of money on new gowns for her next American production.

Anna says that what with moving and getting settled and preparing her dresses for the new feature in which she is to appear she is a very busy lady.

She adds: 'You ought to see my new garden, and oh! you ought to see those new frocks; but oh, dear! I don't believe you could see my bank account at all!"

Puzzled, B'Gosh.

Harold Lockwood, Metro star, was driving his machine up the mountains near Hollywood, the other day, and stopped off at a ranch to get some water. He got into conversation with the middle-aged owner of the place. The conversation, the popular screen star reports, ran something like this:

"Your father is 94 years old, eh?"

"Yes, pop is close to 94 years."

"Is his health good?"

"'Tain so good now. He's been complainin' lately some."

"What's the matter with him?"

"I dunno, 'xactly. Sometimes I think farmin' don't agree with him."

Dusty is Film Irish.

Dustin Farnum's latest picture, made under the direction of the Morosco Photoplay Company, is entitled "A Son of Erin." Winifred Kingston supports him.

Minnie Ha-Ha Stuff.

Lenore Ulrich is now engaged in making her last picture for the Morosco Photoplay Company before going East. It is entitled "The Conflict," and was written by Julia Crawford Ivers.

Miss Ulrich plays the role of a half-breed Indian girl.

An Indian village will be built on the shores of a picturesque lake high up in the San Bernardino Mountains, for which scenes a large band of redskins have been angaged. Standing Bear, an old Indian chief, is acting as advising expert in the production.

Scott Sidney is directing. The supporting cast includes Howard Davies, Adelaide Woods, Gail Brooks, Jack Stark, Joy Lewis and William Winter Jefferson.

Preparedness Note.

Virtually all the accoutrements of modern warfare are used to a greater or less extent in "Shell 43," the spectacular Triangle war drama by C. Gardner Sullivan, in which Thomas H. Ince is presenting H. B. Warner and Enid Markey as co-stars. The story deals with the spy system, as it is believed to be employed now on the battlefields of Europe, and accuracy of equipment is one of the effects sought for.

Among the pieces of equipment shown in operation during the play are the trench periscope and the heliograph, by which messages are transmitted.

This Awful Beauty Chase.

Handsome Bill Desmond, the Ince star, was doing some scenes in "Lieutenant Danny, U.S.A.," the other day. In playing the scene which depicts his execution by a Mexican firing squad, with a number of other prisoners, he found himself at the bottom of a heap as he fell. Director Walter Edwards shouted to the tangled mass of men:

"Remain that way a minute boys! I want to make a dissolve." Desmond mived slightly and Edwards noted the movement.

"Lie still, Bill," shouted the director, "I don't want you to lose your position."

"That's all right about position," replied Desmond in a muffled voice, "but some Ajax is pressing his heel against my nose, and I'm afraid he's ruining my make-up."

BUYS DOGS WHOLESALE.

Crane Wilbur Supplies Horsley Company with Canines.

Crane Wilbur, author-star at the David Horsley studios, hung up a new record for filmland celebrities' peculiarities this week when he purchased fifteen dogs—regular barking, howling and ferocious canines, some with long pedigrees, others with short ones, and the rest just plain dogs.

It was merely by chance that Mr. Wilbur became a dog fancier. He was motoring to Los Angeles when his sympathy was aroused by a small boy, who stood in the road crying as though his heart would break. A student of human nature, Mr. Wilbur stopped to inquire what the trouble was. The child sobbed that the dog catcher had swiped his dog and that he couldn't get it back unless he paid $2. So the boy was invited to direct the way to the dog-bogie man.

Arrived there the actor paid the necessary $2 and the dog was released. As he was about to go Mr. Wilbur heard a lot of noise, and asking the dog catcher what it was all about, he learned that fifteen more dogs were locked up in tiny wire cages. Touched again, Mr. Wilbur produced $30 in a jiffy, and the poundkeeper's eyes bulged out as he received the money. Then the whole flock of dogs was piled into the rear of the star's car and driven to the studio.

All is fish that comes to the camera's net, and the dogs will be used in a forthcoming Horsley release. After that they will be a part of the regular animal acting force.

RARE JEWELRY IN NEW FEATURE.

Some of the jewelry worn by members of the cast of "The Daughter of the Don," the ten-reel historic photodrama of the Southland, now showing at the Majestic, is not only in perfect accord with the atmosphere of the period, but harks back for more than a century. Two pieces of wonderfully-wrought silver, one a headdress and another a necklace, were made in Mexico City by Mexican silversmiths early in the nineteenth century. Both adornments were brought to California from Mexico by an early Spanish family that settled in this country following the advent of the padre missionaries. The condition of the jewelry indicates that it evidently was worn only on fitting occasions.

FANCIFUL SCENES ARE REPRODUCED.

Jules Verne's best loved story, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," produced by the Universal, will be shown at one of the big Broadway theaters in New York this fall. The well-remembered scenes of the Verne story, including the fight with an octopus, Capt. Nemo's discovery of pearls, the hunting parties sent out from the "Nautilus" across the ocean's bottom, and the burial of a comrade in the coral reef cemetery, actually were acted far below the surface of the sea by players encased in diving suits built to resemble those described by the famous French author.

VILLAINY'S PUNISHMENT.

Fox Company's Tiny Star Hates Their Bad Man.

In one of the big scenes of the Fox production of "Daredevil Kate," in which Virginia Pearson is featured at Miller's Theater next week, the child actress, Jane Lee, is seen in a close-up, crying as if her heart would break. The director was asked how they succeeded in making the little tot display such emotion for the camera. "That is easy," remarked Mr. Buel, "all we have to do to make little Jane shed tears is to show her Stuart Holmes."

It is a fact that the little lady has seen Mr. Holmes play in so many villainous parts that she has developed a mortal hatred of him, but her sister, one year her senior, loves him to distraction.

CAMERA CLICKS

Bennie Ziedman, pocket publicity man of the Fine Arts studio, has returned safely from New York, so the Boy Scouts may go home.

An exact duplication of one of Los Angeles' big cafes, with the entire membership of the professional entertainers of the resort to furnish genuine atmosphere, will be shown with the release of Crane Wilbur's latest starring vehicle, now in the course of production at the David Horsley studio.

Douglas Gerrard had a birthday party at the Athletic Club the other evening. Relays of guests blew out the candles on his cake.

Director Burton George and his company of players, including his star, Roberta Wilson, have gone to San Francisco, via the steamship Congress, from Universal City. Scenes for George's new picture will be filmed at the dock and in the business section of the city.

Director W. W. Beaudine has finished a one-reel comedy with the Universal joker company, entitled "The Inspector's Double." The players are Gale Henry and William Franey, supported by Lillian Peacock and C. Conklin.

One of the most stupendous thrills ever enacted at the Mack Sennett Keystone studios was witnessed this week when Bobbie Vernon, driving a huge motorbus, crashed through an art-glass window into an elaborate cafe set.

Defying death, Willie Gilbert plunged from the royal yard arm of the Alden Besse at San Pedro yesterday in enacting one of the many thrills of "She Loved a Sailor," a Mack Sennett comedy. The height from which Gilbert made his hazardous leap was 110 feet.

Frank Campeau will appear for the Selig Company in a stirring five-reeler entitled "The Light of Western Skies."

DOROTHY BERNARD IN "Sporting Blood"

Today and All Week

"SPORTING BLOOD" is the best picture of the race track thrown on the screen in a long time, if not the best ever caught by a camera. Its racing scenes are so realistic that they set the blood to tingling, and one finds oneself leaning forward with hands tight clenched and rooting hard for the heroine's horse to win. It is a real race and a good one, too, and after a heartbreaking struggle the horse you are rooting for forges ahead and wins by a length. Then you sit back in your seat and breathe deeply. You wonder why everything is so quiet. Then you realize that you are in a theater and not at the track at all. The story is always interesting and well told. There is a turkey dinner finish that looks so good it makes everybody hungry, and you can almost smell the hot turkey as the little mother serves it to her girl and boy in the old home, which the girl's bravery and daring has saved from disgrace. You will surely enjoy "Sporting Blood."—Maitland Davies in the Tribune.

INTIMATE REVELATIONS CONCERNING OSCAR WILDE.

Frank Harris Plays the Recording Angel, Setting Down Weaknesses and Virtues as He Found Them—Bitter Reproach of English Nation's Attitude Toward Men of Letters—Wilde's Satirical Comment on Popular Contemporaries.

MR. HARRIS has knocked biographical traditions end over end. He has written of Oscar Wilde as the Recording Angel perhaps writes of us all—loving him, but not sparing him. The record is amazingly frank, and there is no reason to believe that it is otherwise than honest; he is convincing, he is fascinating, and yet Wilde's worst enemy could not with more mastery have accentuated and vivified the disagreeable vanity and pathetic wretchedness of his character.

That Mr. Harris was everything but an enemy is attested elsewhere than in his own narrative. But with no show of eagerness for credit in the biography he relates something of the advice he urged again and again on Wilde just before—and after—English law had struck the trial hour; and how, after Wilde came from prison, he advanced money over and over for debts, and of how he ultimately bought of Wilde the scenario for a play which he had sold to many people.

Wilde, abased by dissipation and hopelessness, made no attempt after "De Profundis" and the "Ballad of Reading Gaol" to write; but begged from his friends, concealing the fact that he was being supplied with some $1500 a year, squandered what money he got and lost his sense of honor through retaining his inordinate vanity. Yet Mr. Harris, and a few others, were loyal until and after his death.

The other side of Wilde has had much acclaim in what may be called the renaissance of his popularity in recent years. Mr. Harris goes more fully than anyone else into Wilde's strange personality.

He says that Wilde was the most brilliant talker he ever heard—perhaps the greatest that ever lived; that he was in conversation brilliant as in his comedies; and that his comedies are unsurpassed in the language. He was charming, but not a fighter; brilliant but a poseur; intellectually a true artist, but with a plastic, chameleon character that yielded to and took on the character of dominant persons with whom he associated; a fascinating man—and fully aware of it.

Could Have Won to Greater Heights

Mr. Harris thinks Wilde could, had he willed to and fought for it, have attained heights on his release from prison that were denied his ability in the heyday of popularity. To express the author's opinion: Wilde's greatest prose is "De Profoundis," his only great, or even original, poem is the "Ballad of Reading Gaol," which is the greatest ballad in English, though this was influenced by a poem that came to his attention while in prison. Lord Alfred Douglas is infinitely the better poet, though Wilde would not have it so. But in prison Wilde had learned the ineffable quality of pity—had lost something of his egocentric intensity, as was shown by the ballad and his letters pleading for tenderness toward children in prison. He came out better in health; he still had loyal friends; the public was eager for his work—but he yielded to the caress of sloth, went wining and dining; became beggarly, and was satisfied to talk brilliantly instead of writing earnestly, or writing at all.

Wilde's Caustic Comments.

Mr. Harris noted that in Wilde's later years his wit turned caustic, whereas it had always been gentle. His comment on contemporaries was brilliantly satirical. Arthur Symons, he said, was an egoist who had no ego; and "George Moore has conducted his whole education in public. He had written two or three books before he found out there was such a thing as English grammar. He at once announced his discovery and so won the admiration of the illiterate. A few years later he discovered that there was something architectural in style, that sentences had to be built into a paragraph, and paragraphs into chapters and so on. Naturally he cried this revelation, too, from the housetops, and thus won the admiration of the journalists who had been making rubble-heaps all their lives without knowing it."

Of Bernard Shaw he said: "A man of real ability but with a bleak mind. Humorous gleams as of wintry sunlight on a bare, harsh landscape. He has no passion, no feeling, and without passionate feeling how can one be an artist? He believes in nothing, loves nothing, not even Bernard Shaw."

H. G. Wells was disposed of as "a scientific Jules Verne."

Thomas Hardy, now hailed with some strenuosity in certain influential quarters as the master novelist, was ridiculed as one who "has just found out that women have legs underneath their dresses, and this discovery has almost wrecked his life. . . . He knows nothing of love; passion to him is a childish illness like measles."

Mr. Harris suggested, quite appropriately it seems to us, to Wilde that the description of Hardy fitted Mrs. Humphry Ward.

"God forbid," Wilde retorted. "After all, Hardy is a writer and a great landscape painter." Then he added: "I am always matchmaking when I think of English celebrities. I should so much like to have introduced Mrs. Humphry Ward blushing at 18 or 20 to Swinburne, who would, of course, have bitten her neck in a furious kiss and she would have run away and exposed him to court, or else have suffered agonies of mingled delight and shame in silence."

Timidity of English Men of Letters.

Mr. Harris relates that in the effort to get Wilde's sentence reduced, after most of it had been served, he circulated a petition for signatures among English men of letters which set forth that in view of Wilde's service to literature and art, his severe punishment should be mitigated. Meredith refused to put down his name on the ground that Wilde "should not be forgiven;" others were more evasive, and all seemed to be timid lest unpopularity would come at their heads if they ventured to publicly express sympathy.

He compares this attitude with the furious zeal of the French writers who went into the fight for Zola when he was threatened with prosecution for immorality in his work. Men "who hated his work and regarded it as sensational, tawdry, immoral, even, took up the cudgel for him at once, declared that the police were not judges of art, and should not interfere with a serious workman."

Mr. Harris was never more master of dramatic writing than in his presentation of Wilde's trial and what he calls the lack of honest justice that attended it. That Wilde was guilty, Mr. Harris thinks, not at all condones—nor explains—the fanatical fashion in which he was persecuted; and that, at worst, his was a case for physicians rather than for attorneys and warders.

Punished by Envy.

The English, as a race, he says, have scant appreciation for letters. The average Englishman would rather be called an "athlete than a poet." The English drove Byron and Shelley and Keats into exile and allowed Chatterton, Davidson and Middleton to die of misery and destitution; but they treated none of their artists and seers with the malevolent cruelty they showed Oscar Wilde. His fate in England is symbolic of the fate of all artists; in some degree they will all be punished as he was punished by a grossly materialized people who prefer to go in blinkers and accept idiotic conventions because they distrust intellect and have no taste for mental virtues. All English artists will be judged by their inferiors and condemned, as Dante's master was condemned, for their good deeds; for it must not be thought that Oscar Wilde was punished solely or even chiefly for the evil he wrought; he was punished for his popularity and his pre-eminence; he was punished by the envy of journalists, and the malignant pedantry of half-civilized judges."

Notable Biography.

Mr. Harris's biography is notable; it does what biography should do—that is, it gives a full, round, understandable picture of Oscar Wilde. One feels that one knows the man when one finishes the book—and while it is, as we have said, amazingly frank, it is written with the true artist's discrimination, and not an offensive sentence or phrase may be found in it.

"THE PLUNDERERS."

Edwin Lefevre has an affection for crooks, providing they are high-class crooks, a little underhanded, but scrupulously stealing from plutocrats only. Such are "the plunderers" in "The Plunderers" (Harper & Bros.,) which is a readable book but hardly "a novel" as is stated on the title page. It contains four stories.

The plunderers are themselves well equipped with funds, they lay their plans with remarkable ingenuity, operate again and again in the same city and never have trouble in evading the police.

Some of their plots are perfectly legitimate—though perhaps not honorable, but they dabble in high finance—as in "As Proofs of Holy Writ," where the Alaskan mining man by elaborate wire pulling stirs a big financier into such a fit of jealousy over his young wife that he neglects business and has a costly deal put over on his company.

There is nothing legitimate, however, in the methods used by the crooks in "The Pearls of the Princess Patricia," whereby they kidnap most of the important jewelers in New York and make off with a million dollars' worth of finery—while the police follow the specially designed false clews.

"Cheap at a Million" shows how they make profits out of an elaborate match making; and "The Panic and the Lion" is perhaps the cleverest of these very ingenious stories, and tells of how a Yankee who dresses like a Frenchman makes good his boast that he never loses on the stock exchange, and of how the nation's greatest financier is content to say that he remained at home in his library when he was kidnapped for a few hours.

Nothing touching the identity of the plunderers is revealed; and the only evidence that the several plots are put through by the same crooks is the inevitable letter, usually addressed to a victim, which admits that the operation on the plutocratic bank roll has been conducted by the "Plunder Recovery Syndicate."

DUTY AND IMMIGRANTS.

STRAIGHT AMERICA. By Frances A. Kellor. The Macmillan Company, New York.

Miss Kellor's "Straight America" is tremendously impressive. It is a recent volume in Our National Problem series and takes up the present attitude and the desirable attitude toward immigrants—toward the foreigners within our gates.

The lack of interest in immigrants leaves them helpless for the exploitation of swindlers, padrones, as well as profitable subjects for the inflammatory theories of agitators; the lack of uniform naturalization privileges throughout the States is bewildering and discriminating; yet the number of foreigners continues to increase, and unless they are assimilated and transformed into Americans, they will shortly constitute a greater menace to the country than any power beyond its boundaries. Miss Kellor finds the "illiteracy test" absurd, and suggests that all immigrants should be required to take out naturalization papers and learn English within five years or be deported; and that they should be given opportunities to learn what American citizenship really means and be given official consideration and care.

The indifference of the "patriotic" American to the newcomer is, she says, a great defect in getting aliens Americanized. "Another native-American illusion is that the immigrant will not appreciate our efforts. Since when has America based its principles of action upon the flimsy desire for appreciation? Furthermore, we expect the appreciation to be out of all proportion to what we do. We have indeed deteriorated when we have come to regard simple acts of justice, fair play, service, obligation and duty as acts to be persisted in only when the immigrant is duly appreciative!"

Her presentation of the difficulties that the immigrant endures after arriving in the country is succinct and forceful. Her style is direct as the blows of a hammer upon an anvil, and the facts and arguments given are the result of long and close observation among the alien population of Americans. No book has been written that more ably reviews the problem, or that offers a more logical and appealing solution; and the title—"Straight America"—sums up the little book admirably.

Incidentally, the price is 50 cents, no more. The value as usual depends largely on what receptive and perceptive faculties the reader may have—but we have never read a book on immigration that so forcibly impressed us.

AERIAL MONSTERS.

ZEPPELINS AND SUPER-ZEPPELINS. By R. P. Hearne. John Lane Company, New York.

We hadn't supposed that anybody outside of Germany knew as much about Zeppelins as Mr. Hearne evidently does. But he made a study of aerial warfare for the past decade and has been among those who warned England of the dangers of unpreparedness, and now points out not only something of what has been endured through that unpreparedness, but what will continue to be endured until further preparedness is made.

The book is as applicable to America as it ever was to England. Mr. Hearne in detail compares the airship with the aeroplane, and shows that it is folly for any nation to think it can afford to do without either branch of the aerial service. The day of the super-Zeppelin is, he believes, at hand; and these monsters will be actually to aerial warfare as the dreadnaughts are to naval, and only the nation that is fully prepared will be able to defend itself.

The Zeppelins are lighter-than-air machines, some 500 feet in length, constructed on an aluminum framework divided into about seventeen compartments filled with gas, and change their altitude by throwing out ballast or releasing gas. They carry a weight of some twenty tons and can maintain a speed of forty-six miles an hour, and are capable of a 700-mile voyage.

However, they are subject to many conditions. The weather must be "right" if they are effective, as the Zeppelins are helpless against strong winds; the night must be dark else the enemy's gunners will have good targets.

The Germans, he says, for years have kept meteorological reports as a basis for operating Zeppelins and with the calculations afforded by this information have been able to do damaging work.

Mr. Hearne shows that the defensive measures, though wholly inadequate, have been far more expensive against the Zeppelins than it would have been to equip an airship fleet which could meet the enemy in the heavens and chase them home, and that England by refusing to profit by the advance in aerial navigation made by the Germans is still suffering for it.

A CALIFORNIAN AT THE FRONT.

A SOLDIER OF THE LEGION. By Edward Morlae. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

Sergt. Morlae was born in California where his father, a captain in the French army, came after the Franco-Prussian War. Sergt. Morlae is much the soldier of fortune, having got in and out of scrapes in Mexico and the Philippines. On the morning of August 3, 1914, he packed his grip in Los Angeles and started for Europe to fight for France. He enlisted in the Foreign Legion, soon became a sergeant, and took part in the terrible offensive last fall when more than 3000 of the Legion led a charge on German trenches, took and held these trenches, but only some 800 men remained alive or unwounded when the work was done.

The men of the Legion for the most part are made up of the riff-raff and criminals from all parts of the world who have ducked into the French foreign service to become immune from prosecution.

"In my own section there were men of all races and nationalities. There were Russians and Turks, an Annamite and a Hindu. There were Frenchmen from God knows where. There was a German, God only knows why. There were Bulgars, Serbs, Greeks, negroes, an Italian and a Fiji Islander fresh from an Oxford education."

Several Americans were also in his section, but most of them were "reputable adventurers" looking for excitement.

Sergt. Morlae says that he is proud to have served with them, for no matter what their morals are or may have been, they are men. Once when the debris from a big shell buried him, his friends came running and at the risk of their necks dug him out, but someone among them did not neglect to pick his pocket and get his purse.

Going into action the men jibed each other with jests that sound harsh to those accustomed to thinking soldiers approach the possibility of death with seemly awe.

"Just behind me I heard King express the hope that if he lost an arm or a leg he would at least get the 'medaille militaire' in exchange. By way of comfort, his chum, Dowd, remarked, that whether he got the medal or not, he was very sure of getting a permit to beg on the street corners."

"A Soldier of the Legion" is a very graphic book. It has no rhetorical flourishes, but it gets the effect for which such flourishes strive, and is vividly descriptive of the charge, the capture of prisoners, of the condition in the shelled trenches, of the attitude of soldiers who have passed through curtains of fire.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

Shaw's Friendly Comment.

Dennis Denmore, writing on George Bernard Shaw in Bruno's Weekly, says: "He takes a keen delight in the many strange letters which a man in his position naturally receives. Some time ago a young man wrote to Shaw for a loan of £20. Shaw replied with a lengthy letter, going into the minutest details of the young man's position as defined in his letter, and made some excellent suggestions as to the course he should pursue. Shaw wrote all this because he said: 'I like the tone of your appeal, but I am afraid you are not clever enough to get £20 out of me.'"

Patriotic Magazine.

Everybody's Magazine has thrown all of its influence into the organization of high school volunteers of the United States. Like many of its readers, Everybody's has grown tired of Congress's stationary haste in fitting out an army for the country, and in the July number exposed the pork barrel militia system. The August number has some strongly patriotic articles, and tells about the high school volunteers, who don't need to be subsidized to be patriotic. Incidentally, in the fiction department of the current number Booth Tarkington, Mary Roberts Rinehart and Talbot Mundy are among the contributors.

"Our Sociable War."

Harry Carr, in his characteristic, inimitable style, explains "Our Sociable War" in the August Sunset; the article being observations of the state of war on the border between two countries officially at peace. Mr. Carr says: "In the beginning of the campaign it was a kind of Alice-in-Wonderland affair. Some of the events following the raid at Columbus were so silly they didn't sound real. While our armies were fighting each other somewhere down in the wilds of Mexico, the two countries were at peace. The commander at Juarez called up the American commander at El Paso and they chatted about 'your' losses and 'our' losses. Every morning the Mexicans came over to the United States and looked over our defenses. Then the Americans went over to the Mexican side and looked over their defenses. Whenever any fighting occurred down country the American reporters dashed over to the Mexican commander, who called for lemonade and war bulletins. It was the most sociable war I ever heard of for about a month after Pershing's punitive expedition first invaded Mexican soil."

Conrad Pre-eminent.

"With Meredith gone and James gone, only Thomas Hardy remains to challenge the position of Joseph Conrad, the Pole, as the first of living English novelists," declares H. L. Mencken in the opening paragraph of an elaborate study of Conrad which recently began to appear in four parts in the Baltimore Evening Sun. Mr. Mencken says:

"Conrad has been steadily growing in stature for a dozen years; he has of late taken his undisputed place in the frotn rank. A sombre spirit, still overwhelmingly Slavic, despite his long expatriation, he has brought into English fictino a note that sounds a deep base beneath the prevailing chatter of lighter tones. Thereis no one like him; there is no one even remotely like him. . . . He has restored passion to the English novel. He has rescued it from mere clever craftsmanship, and put into it the sober beauty of a profound and moving art."

An Author by Accident.

Anne Douglas Sedgwick, Mrs. de Selincourt, author of "The Encounter," "Tante," etc., says that her earliest ambition was to be a painter, and that she slipped into novel writing almost by accident. As a child Mrs. de Selincourt, although she was an American born, lived in London, and she remembers how she used to tell long stories to her sisters, interminable adventures that were recited from day to day and from year to year as they walked each morning with their governess in Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens; stories that later grew into attempts at novels, with plenty of "love scenes," as her auditors used to beg. "The Dull Miss Archinard" was one of this series, and when it was accepted and published Mrs. de Selincourt found herself suddenly launched on a literary career. But she says that she still often yearns for time to turn again for a little to drawing and painting, and that her greatest interest, apart from her actual work, lies in that direction.

"Thirty Pieces of Silver."

"Thirty Pieces of Silver," a novel that the publishers believe to be of unusual importance and significance, will be issued by the Bobbs-Merrill Company early in the autumn. It is by Francis Neilson, author of "The Butterfly on the Wheel" and "How Diplomats Make War," etc. Mr. Neilson, now living in this country, is an ex-member of the British Parliament and was at one time president of the League for the Taxation of Land Values. He is a radical thinker, with a wide experience of life and a strong sense of the dramatic that stand him in good stead now that he has turned his attention to fiction. "Thirty Pieces of Silver" is a story of today with England the scene and her problems its problems.

A Glimpse at Arthur Stringer.

Arthur Stringer was born in London, Ontario, in the early seventies, though to look at him today you would hardly believe it. He has lived much out of doors and away from cities with the result that there is youth in his step and the freshness of boyhood in his face. He graduated from Toronto University and from Oxford, Eng. Then, with his schooling in his head and his sheepskin in his hand, he sailed for New York to add experience to his accomplishments. He got it, but how is too long a tale to tell here. His earliest literary manifestations came in the form of verse and during the years he has published several volumes and contributed many poems to the best periodicals. For a time he did editorials for the American Press Association, and later was literary editor of Success. But the restrictions of office work were irksome to him, so he gave up the salary certainty for the precarious but pleasant independence of the novelist. A number of stories, both long and short, came quickly from his pen and it was not long before the magazines and the publishers were knocking at his door. Last year "The Prairie Wife," a delightful story of the great wheat plains, added to his reputation, his men readers claiming that he had drawn the portrait of a real man, and his women readers asserting that no mere man could know so completely and so perfectly just how a woman feels about the great facts of love and life. Mr. Stringer has a wife in his Cedar Springs home, but she doesn't collaborate with him in his literary work. His latest story has just been issued. The title, "The Door of Dread," is thrilling and so is the story. The character work done on the heroine, Sadie Wimpel, would almost lift any story to a dignified plane.

Nee "Miss O. Henry."

"Miss O. Henry," daughter of the late Sidney Porter, and "Cesare," celebrated cartoonist, late of the New York Sun, today the first cartoonist ever associated with the New York Evening Post, recently became Mr. and Mrs. Oscar E. Cesare.

Amy Lowell on Poetry.

Miss Amy Lowell, writing in the July Craftsman under the heading "Has America a National Poetry?" makes advantageous use of an old word to which the advent of the moving picture has given a new significance. The word is "register." Miss Lowell says:

"The new poet sees a world in which he is passionately interested, but in which he is only one of many factors. To portray that world as he sees it is his concern. It may be the life in the street just outside his window with which he is occupied, or it may be a historic and aesthetic interest in other peoples and places; but his method of approach in either case is the same. It is a passionate desire for truth and a dispassionate attitude toward whatever his search for truth may bring him. He records; he does not moralize. He holds no brief for or against, he merely portrays. In other words the new poet 'registers' and records the 'registered' impressions."

A Novel in Six Weeks.

F. Horace Rose, whose "Golden Glory," just published by George H. Doran Company, won a $5000 prize offered for the best novel of Africa, tells a most interesting story of the way in which his book was written.

As editor of the Natal Witness and a busy journalist, Mr. Rose had little leisure to devote to the writing of fiction, even with a tempting prize to spur him to unusual effort. The plot came to him easily enough, but he was hard put to it for a title, and when he had written the first two chapters in three hours, this difficulty stood like a lion in his path and he found it impossible to make further progress till it was removed.

He spent a day in desperate wanderings and thinkings, and an evening at a vaudeville performance in which he could take no interest, then, in the middle of a gramophone turn, the title suddenly occurred to him, and his difficulties melted away. Thereafter, with intervals when inspiration deserted him and he felt that the tale would never be done, working at it mainly between 9 p.m. and 5 the next morning, he wrote the whole story of a hundred and twenty thousand words inside six weeks, and considers that his success rewarded him handsomely for his labors.

A Student of Lynching.

During his journalistic career after leaving Harvard, Reginald Wright Kauffman supped full on horrors, and the lynching that forms so thrilling a chapter in his new novel, "The Mark of the Beast," which the Macaulay Company of New York is about to publish, is the product of much first-hand observation accidentally forced on him. The first lynching that came his way, however, he did not attend. That was when he was the star reporter on the Philadelphia Press. A crime of the sort dealt with in "The Mark of the Beast" had been committed in Wilmington, Del.—not Wilmington, N. C.—and a negro arrested. Early one afternoon the managing editor of the Press came to Kauffman.

"They're going to lynch that negro in Wilmington tonight," said the editor. "Take the 7 p.m. train there and report it."

"You mean the plan is known?" demanded Kauffman.

"Yes," said the editor. "Better be ready."

"I'll go," said Kauffman, "on one condition: that you let me write what I really see and what I really think—and if you try to send me without such permission, you may accept my resignation."

Mr. Kauffman was not sent. Instead of "covering the story," he dispatched telegrams to the Wilmington authorities informing them of the plot; but the lynching was carried out according to schedule.

"DESTINY."

An appendix, illustrated, to "Destiny" (W. J. Watt & Co.,) says, concerning the author, Charles Neville Buck: "Everything he has written has been presented on the stage or screen."

That tells exactly the kind of a writer he is: An emotional fellow with melodramatic complications, heaps of tenseness with thrilling convulsions gripping chapter after chapter.

Charles Neville Buck is the kind of a writer that Harold Bell Wright, Peter Clark MacFarlane and others of the emotionally pious ilk try to be. Mr. Buck can write with a punch. He has written "Destiny" with a punch. It's the best emotional novel we have seen this year, even if that isn't giving it much praise.

The last twenty pages of the book give the book its title. Those pages show how kind destiny often is to people who dream of conquest in the world of finance and society, and surrender those dreams for humbler duties.

Hamilton Burton, a country lad, believes he can become a world financier. He goes into the city and makes good. His family, father, mother, sister and brother, are brought also into the city and plunged suddenly into wealth. But according to the formula with which all modern stories are written about financiers, no member of this family can be happy. Hamilton is a ruthless stock manipulator, and wages war against the man his sister loves, while she, defying her brother, openly goes to him. An accident incapacitates Hamilton during a strenuous time on Wall street and his fortune is shattered. His father becomes a common drunkard, misery settles upon all who bear the family name and all the dreams and plans come to naught.

The book is graphically written. Mr. Buck is far from convincing at times, but at other times he is intensely so. The character of Mary Hamilton, even more tragic than that of her scarcely more famous brother, is developed and sustained with an unbroken vividity that makes her easily the most commanding character in the story. He has handled a multitude of characters and has handled them well. He has pointed a moral, and he has done it without being pious.

"LOOT."

Another master criminal has appeared, a daring and capable scoundrel known as the Gray Ghost, of whom Arthur Somers Roche tells in "Loot" (Bobbs, Merrill & Co.,) a novel eminently suited for a few hours of light reading.

When Hildreth, the young English solicitor, is commissioned by the American millionaire to come to America and get a two-million dollar diamond necklace, he inadvertently interferes with the plans of the mysterious Gray Ghost, whose unnumbered confederates are thoroughly organized in an effective criminal trust. At once the desperate men set to work to put Hildreth out of the way, but accident and luck, the daring of a beautiful actress who is more or less in the Gray Ghost's power, for a time protect Hildreth though giving him much strange excitement.

The book takes its title from the daylight robbery of Arabin's jewelry store, in which Mr. Roche with fascinating ingenuity has worked out in detail the manner in which New York's largest jewelry store is plundered during business hours, while the place is full of customers, and tells plausibly how the thieves get away. It is no shop-lifting expedition that the Gray Ghost's bandits undertake. Not so: they take everything in sight excepting the heaviest of silverware, and when they shoot they shoot to kill.

But society is fortunate in that whenever a master criminal arises, a master detective arises to challenge his genius, and so the conflict goes on. The Gray Ghost finds his Nemesis in Jerry Tryon, who hangs onto the trail like a terrier to a bone, so that in the end the whole gang are dramatically apprehended—all excepting the Gray Ghost who—presumably—goes to his death.

If that is true, then Mr. Roche has been profligate in allowing so clever and entertaining a criminal genius to commit suicide; for had he followed the more economical example of Conan Doyle, Sax Rohmer, and others who cherish their villains, the Gray Ghost might have served for many other very unusual stories. But an author with the imaginative powers and ingenuity will scarcely ever be hard put to make a plot of enticing complications and tell of it in a snappy, almost breathless narrative style.

THE YOUNGER NATION.

CANADA IN FLANDERS. By Max Aitken. George H. Doran Company, New York.

Sir Max Aitken, as Canadian Record Officer, gives an account of the part played by the Canadian detachment in Flanders, and his book carried an introduction by Sir Robert Borden, Prime Minister of Canada, and a preface by A. Bonar Law, Secretary of State for the Colonies.

The Canadian detachment wrote their fealty to the empire in a bloody record at Ypres and the long retreat that followed. It was no rout, for not a Canadian gun was lost on the way and their stubborn resistance did much to save the French and English armies from being badly pounded.

The book goes into elaborate detail of the campaigns in which the Canadian troops have participated, and their record stands out—or at least the Canadians themselves do—as one made by volunteer soldiers who of their own volitions took up arms and crossed the seas to aid the mother country.

PERSONAL—

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist, of London, England, may be consulted at 322 SOUTH SPRING ST., by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS, FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY HONESTLY PRACTICED WILL NOT tell your name, but it WILL give you information of considerable greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry. WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

If you have a little better than average personality, appearance and good manners, if you know what the value of sticking to the truth means, I will steer you on the road where other women are making from three to five thousand dollars per year. FOR SALE—

"GUARANTEED!" SOME MIGHT ASK OR THINK, WHAT GOOD IS A GUARANTEE.

TRUE, GUARANTEES ARE USED BY MANY FIRMS OR MEN WITH NO INTENTION OF EVER LIVING UP TO IT. A GUARANTEE IS JUST AS GOOD AS THE MAN OR FIRM THAT GIVES IT. SHRADER FORDS ARE GUARANTEED BY SHRADER, IN WRITING IF YOU WISH, AND WE WILL ALSO BE PLEASED TO FURNISH YOU WITH REFERENCES IF YOU DESIRE. YOU MIGHT WONDER OR ASK WHY WE ADVERTISE THIS. IT IS BECAUSE WE ACTUALLY DO ELIMINATE THE GAMBLE IN A USED FORD FOR YOU WHEN WE PLACE THE SHRADER GUARANTEE ON IT.

IF YOU ARE IN THE MARKET FOR A FORD, EITHER NEW OR SECOND-HAND, IN JUSTICE TO YOURSELF YOU SHOULD LOOK OVER WHAT WE HAVE AND WHAT WE CAN DO FOR YOU. OUR PLANT IS COMPLETE, COMPETENT AND THOROUGH. WE BUILD ALL KINDS OF BODIES, PLEASURE, SPEEDSTER, ADVERTISING, DELIVERY AND ATTACHMENT BOXES. WE REBUILD ONLY OUR OWN CARS IN OUR MACHINE SHOP, BESIDES WE HAVE A DEPARTMENT FOR REPAIRING THE UPHOLSTERING AND TOPS OR PUTTING IN NEW WORK. THEN THERE IS THE ENAMELING AND PAINT SHOP, A LARGE GARAGE AND SHOWROOM.

WE DO NOT SOLICIT OUTSIDE WORK, BUT MAINTAIN THIS PLANT ONLY TO PUT OUR OWN CARS IN CONDITION WHERE WE CAN ELIMINATE THAT FORD GAMBLE FOR YOU. AND WE CAN SHOW GOOD PROOF THAT WE DO WHAT WE CLAIM.

OUR REPUTATION FOR SQUARE DEALING SOLD OVER SIXTY FORDS FOR US LAST MONTH, AND OVER THIRTY SO FAR THIS MONTH.

COME IN AND LOOK OUR CARS OVER, ALSO THE WORK THAT IS IN THE SHOP, AND SEE HOW HONESTLY IT IS BEING DONE.

THERE ARE THREE EXTRA FINE BUYS HERE. PRICES SET SO WE CAN HAVE ROOM FOR SHRADER FORDS.

Canary season is about over, we have some choice songsters of the different varieties left, the young imported birds are due in July. East India nightingales, the king of songbirds, in full sing, come and hear them sing. Brilliantly colored aviary birds are now in season, we carry a full stock of them, also doves, colored and pure white peafowl, crowned pigeons and other ornamental land and water fowl. Our stock of cages is the largest on the Coast, we can therefore give best selection in that line. Florida chameleons, small turtles, goldfish, globes, plants and food for them. Seeds, food and remedies for any kind of pet you may have. Birdland's songfood will make your canary warble, he will eat this in preference to anything put before him. will be to make every effort for the correction of the present inefficiency and waste as widely known as possible. Then the rest of the world will say that California is coming to its senses and to take a renewed interest in the manifold investment opportunities which all concede are to be found in the Golden State.

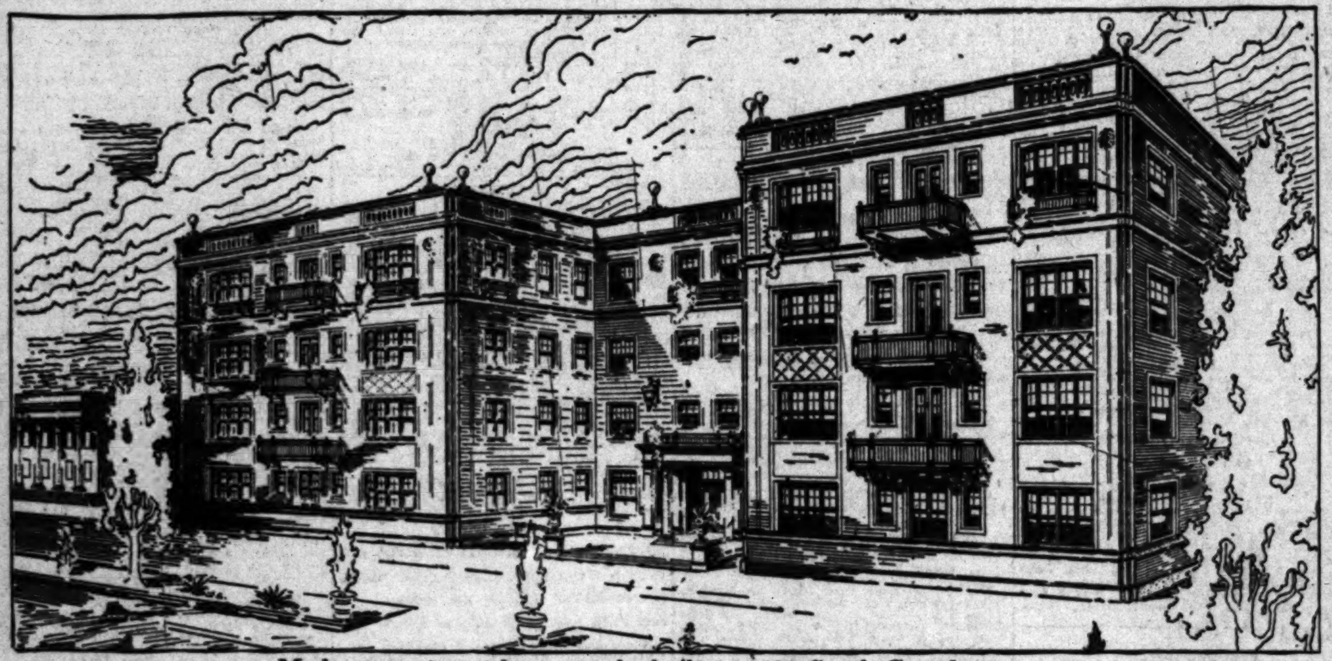
Here at Home.

Locally, the best that could happen would be a big shake-up that would show the world that Los Angeles was wide awake to the inefficiency and waste of its own public management. The cost of government here is outrageously high, and the resulting taxes are well calculated to frighten prospective investors in our real estate and to keep industries away. The harm that has already been done is undoubtedly great, for Los Angeles is probably the best advertised city in the world, its faults, unfortunately, having been as widely heralded as its advantages.

The more widely Los Angeles can advertise the fact that its citizens are at last awake on the question of governmental efficiency, that its wasteful officials and official methods are under fire, and that its taxpaying public is determined upon radical and effective changes, the better it will be for the city's interests. It will be to the city's advantage to have it known everywhere that organized efforts for economy, such as the movement for city and county consolidation, are receiving the earnest support of Los Angeles citizens, and that the people of the city are going thoroughly and whole-heartedly into the question of cutting down taxes.

Things are picking up appreciably in Los Angeles at this time and the city can get the added impetus that will come from the encouragement of both local and outside investment if it will but hasten some of the reforms that are now urged by leading business men. The effort spent in movements such as those being fostered by the new Taxpayers' Association will pay big dividends in a short time.

Fine Improvement for Bunker Hill North of Fourth.



Modern apartment-house to be built at 339 South Grand avenue.

Perspective of four-story brick building containing 200 rooms for which plans have been completed and which will be erected by L. T. Mayo. The structure is planned with all features and conveniences for an up-to-date apartment-house.

Hilltop.

BIG APARTMENT HOUSE PLANNED.

CONTRACTOR WILL BEGIN WORK THIS WEEK.

Four-story Structure on Grand Avenue North of Fourth will Contain Two Hundred Rooms—Cost of Improvement Near One Hundred Thousand Dollars.

That more apartment-houses and hotels have not been built on Bunker Hill in recent years is not due to any lack of appreciation on the part of investors of the value of this close-in property for such improvements, but to the restrictions of the State tenement-house law, which have made the cost of building on hillside sites burdensome to the owner. However, attention is now being drawn to the advantages of hilltop apartment-houses and hotel sites and the property owners there are looking forward to a profitable development of this section. Construction work is well under way on a large reinforced concrete apartment-house on the east side of Olive street just north of Third street and announcement is made that work will be started this week on a four-story and basement brick apartment-house at No. 339 South Grand avenue.

Plans for the Grand-avenue structure have been completed and L. T. Mayo has signed a contract to erect the building for Harold Nutter. The building will contain 200 rooms, divided into suites of two, three and four rooms, with private baths. Plans for the structure show a large court on the Grand-avenue front with brick steps and a semicircular terrace at the main entrance. The building will have a frontage of 123 feet and a depth of 122 feet. Persian rug brick will be used for the exterior facing of the front and the trimmings will be of architectural terra cotta or artificial stone. At the windows on either side of the front will be ornamental iron balconies.

All the features and conveniences of a modern apartment-house will be embodied in the interior of the structure. On the ground floor will be a large lobby, parlors, billiard-room and a ballroom, 60x35 feet. There will be a clear floor in the ballroom, the structure having been planned to avoid posts in this area. Circassian walnut will be used for the finish in the lobby and in the apartments the finish will be mahogany and old ivory.

Marble and tile will enrich the entrance to the building and tile floors will be laid in the bathrooms. A massive fireplace faced with tile will be a feature of the lobby. Conveniences provided will include two elevators, steam heat, vacuum cleaning plant and telephones in each apartment. The total cost of the improvement will be approximately $100,000.

Diversion.

TWO DAY'S OUTING.

Members of Los Angeles Realty Board will Seek Pleasure at Modjeska's "Forest of Arden." Programme of "Eats" and Sports.

Modjeska's "Forest of Arden," in Santiago Canyon, Orange county, fifty miles distant from Los Angeles, will be the mecca for members of the Los Angeles Realty Board on Saturday, September 2. This beautiful spot has been chosen as the place for the annual outing of the Realty Board. It will be a two days' outing, covering Saturday and Sunday, and the committee in charge has arranged a programme of entertainment which is recommended as a tonic for that "tired feeling."

In a circular addressed to all the members, the committee admonishes the members of the board to assemble at the Realty Board rooms at 9 a.m., Saturday, September 2. Automobiles will be provided for the transportation of all guests to and from the "Forest of Arden." Accommodations have been provided so that all who attend may sleep at the resort. The "eats" are announced as follows: Alfresco luncheon Saturday noon, roast pig and beefsteak dinner Saturday evening, bullshead breakfast Sunday morning and farewell chicken dinner Sunday noon. Baseball, golf, boxing and aquatic sports are promised as a diversion.

The committee in charge of the outing consists of Herman Janss, chairman; Harry R. Callender, William H. Aikin, Harry H. Culver, Victor G. Kleinberger, R. C. Mitchell and Herbert L. Cornish.

CLASSIC STYLE HOUSE.

Residence on Occidental Boulevard Nearing Completion.

A house designed on classic lines for the Atlas Building Company is now nearing completion at No. 315 Occidental boulevard. The building will contain fourteen rooms with the living rooms finished in mahogany and the bed rooms in ivory enamel with mahogany doors. Walls of the principal rooms are decorated with silk tapestries and the ceilings are of ornamental plaster. There are four bathrooms which have tile floors and wainscot.

The house is of frame construction with white stucco exterior and green shingle roof. A garage will contain room for three automobiles and living apartments for servants.

LAND AT AQUEDUCT.

Lemon and Sugar-beet Growers are Keenly Interested in Acreage of Mission Land Company. Preliminary Work for Irrigation Started.

Keen interest is being manifested by the beet and lemon growers of Southern California in the large acreage belonging to the San Fernando Mission Land Company, according to W. H. Joyce, general manager of the company, as result of the recent report that work preliminary to the construction of the water-distributing system for the land is now actually under way. It has been announced that bids will be received without delay for the necessary pipes and other facilities for putting the system into full operation.

More than 11,000 acres of the unsold land of the San Fernando Mission Land Company is included in Municipal Improvement District No. 2 and, according to successful citrus and beet growers, a large portion of this land is peculiarly adapted to the growing of lemons and sugar beets. Results obtained with these crops this year are said to be extraordinary. The land adapted to lemons is said to be frostless, as it has been absolutely unscathed under the worst conditions during the last twenty years. Frostless lemon land is scarce in this State, and it is held at high prices wherever obtainable. Those who planted sugar beets on the land this year are said to be enthusiastic over the results.

The property of the San Fernando Mission Land Company is situated at the mouth of the Los Angeles aqueduct and is the first land served from the big reservoir. It is said the new water system will be completed by April 1.

Investment.

FLATS ARE IN DEMAND.

New Buildings in the Higher Class Residential Districts are Planned with Larger Suites—Many are of an Expensive Type.

As an investment, flat buildings continue in high favor with persons who possess a moderate amount of capital. A marked tendency toward larger suites in such buildings has been noted of late, however. Formerly suites containing three and four rooms were the rule. Now a demand for suites containing five or six rooms has sprung up, particularly in the higher class residential districts, and there is a noticeable tendency to meet this demand.

A two-story flat building containing four suites, each having six living rooms and two bath rooms, has been planned by H. J. Knauer for Mrs. Minnie Ford. The building will have an elaborate stucco front with ornamental iron balconies and terrace with cast-stone balustrades. It will be built on Berendo street south of Wilshire boulevard. The cost will be $15,000. Work has just been started on two four-family flat buildings on Serrano street north of Wilshire boulevard for David Beidler. These flats will contain suites of five living rooms and bathroom. They will have ornamental staff fronts, wrought-iron balconies and terrace with cast-stone balustrades. Plans for these buildings were prepared by H. J. Knauer. The cost of the two buildings complete is estimated at $28,000.

Four flat buildings, each to house four families, will be built by Tifal Bros. for William F. Tifal. Two of these structures will be located on Forty-first street west of Hoover street and two will be erected on Forty-first drive, east of Menlo avenue. These buildings will contain five-room suites with bath rooms and will have white cement exterior walls. The total cost will be $30,000.

J. R. King will build a two-story, four-family flat building for himself at No. 1826-32 South Hobart boulevard, cost $6000. Whiting Thompson will build a two-story frame and stucco four-family flat building on Magnolia avenue near Washington street for Mrs. Louis de Segrais; cost $6500.

H. L. Childs is building a two-story, four-family flat building at Nos. 6715-21 Yucca street. These houses will have white cement exteriors and will contain suites of five rooms and bathroom. The cost will be $15,000.

RESIDENCE BUILDING.

Activity Continues in All Parts of City of Los Angeles.

Among the new residences which have been planned and upon which construction has been started in Los Angeles are the following:

Seven-room residence for Mrs. Rose Rodge, at No. 209 South Van Ness avenue; seven-room residence for Mrs. M. M. McMahon, at No. 203 South Van Ness avenue; eight-room residence for J. B. Rapp, at Cocas drive, opposite No. 2216 Beechwood drive.

Six-room bungalow for Marie M. Vance, at No. 1321 North Hobart boulevard; eight-room double bungalow for F. W. Whomes, at No. 259½ West Forty-second place; five-room bungalow for O. W. Jones, at No. 6542 Bella Vista way; five-room bungalow for Cora B. Stilson, at No. 7406 Sixth street, Palms Annex; six-room bungalow for L. B. Davidson, at No. 1137 Farnsworth avenue, Sierra Vista; six-room bungalow for A. C. Tadlock, at No. 402 H street, Van Nuys; six-room bungalow for C. C. Mankey, at No. 5939 Carlton way; five-room bungalow for Charles H. Davis, at No. 7272 Sunset boulevard; five-room bungalow for Mary A. Armstrong, at No. 151 North Serrano avenue; six-room bungalow for J. E. Moltzer, at Sherman way and Rita street, San Fernando Valley; six-room bungalow for Mary I. Gates, at No. 118 North Hobart boulevard; five-room bungalow for Mrs. Elizabeth McArdle, at No. 1006 Curzon avenue.

Eight-room residence for Harry W. Elliott, at No. 820 Fifth avenue; seven-room residence for R. N. Lamberth, at No. 900 Westchester place; eight-room residence for California Bungalow Company, at No. 843 Edgemont street.

SALE OF BEACH LOTS.

Property in Demand and Cash Payments Large.

That there is a substantial demand for beach property is indicated by the recent auction sale at Manhattan and Hermosa beaches when a large number of lots at both these beaches were offered by George H. Cortelyou. On the first sale forty-seven lots were sold and at the second sale, two weeks later, fifty lots were sold at prices ranging from $365 to $1100 each for lots 30x70 feet.

Mr. Cortelyou cites as a significant feature of the sale that more than 90 per cent. of the purchase price on all the lots has been paid, whereas only 25 per cent. was demanded. R. A. Scott of San Francisco, who conducted the sale, declared it was the most successful of any in which he has ever been interested.

STREETS RENAMED.

Changes in Bairdstown District Recently Annexed.

Many of the streets and drives at Sierra Park, the bungalow subdivision of the Janss Investment Company, on Huntington drive, midway to Pasadena, have just been renamed by the city. This property is a part of the Bairdstown district recently annexed.

The following changes in street names were made, Hawthorne street to Oakland street, Sierra to Navarro street, Whitman to Portola street, Delmar road to Linda Vista Terrace, Grand View to Chadwick avenue, Freeman to Hallister avenue, Warren to Warwick avenue, Frances to Cornus street and Horton avenue to Copeland place.

The Janss Company report the sale during the week of ten lots at Sierra Park for $8000, all to be immediately improved with bungalow homes.

BUY FOR INVESTMENT.

W. V. Scott, of the Kissell Car agency, has bought a corner lot in the McCarthy Company's Van Ness Avenue Square tract, corner Westminster and Fourth streets, for $3000. Mr. Scott bought for an investment.

Mrs. Dougherty, proprietor of the Hoban store on West Ninth street, has purchased from the McCarthy Company, a lot on Hoover street near Seventy-sixth street, for an investment.

BUSINESS EXPANDS.

Wholesale Grocery Firm Leases New Quarters.

The W. Ross Campbell Company, through its leasing department, reports closing a long term lease on a large portion of the ground floor and the entire basement of the four-story brick building at Nos. 224-26 South Los Angeles street.

Ralph Cerf, who has taken the lease, is now located at No. 752 South San Pedro street, but rapid expansion of his wholesale grocery business requires more extensive quarters. His new location gives him more than 18,000 square feet floor space. Close proximity to the business section and trackage recently installed make this an attractive location.

This is the second lease closed by the W. Ross Campbell Company in the past ten days for Mrs. Florence Y. Boothe, the owner of this property.

WILSHIRE DISTRICT.

The Briggs Company reports a brisk demand for medium-priced houses and lots in the Wilshire and Hollywood districts. Among the sales reported by this company are the following:

Two-story, eight-room house on Melrose Court, west of Hobart boulevard, to John H. Austin, $6000; lot on Marathon, east of Oxford, to P. J. Schmidt, $1750; lot on Fountain avenue, near Harper avenue, to Elizabeth Mills, $2000; two-story, ten-room house to be constructed, lot 19, tract 1186, to P. L. King, $1650; lot on Marathon, west of Hobart boulevard, to E. F. Enking, $2000; lot 19, tract 803, to J. D. Stern, $1750; seven-room bungalow to be erected, lot 27, tract 1186, to F. M. King, $2500; lot on Melrose court, north of Marathon, to Lucie K. Harris, $1800; lot on Gramercy place, near Melrose, with contract for five-room bungalow, for Shirley McAndrew, $4500; lot 28, tract 1186, to Annie C. Metcalfe, $2500; lot on Marathon near Oxford to J. D. Stern, $2000, seven-room bungalow now under construction.

Progress.

NEW COUNTY STRUCTURES.

Half Million Dollars for the County Hospital.

Kitchen to Prepare Food for Four Thousand.

Work Started on Extensive Improvements.

Work was started yesterday on improvements at the County Hospital which will cost approximately $500,000. These improvements include a new service building, new buildings for tubercular patients and a complete new power plant. This work has been in contemplation for more than a year, the intervening time having been spent in working out the general scheme and preparation of plans for the various structures. A contract for the erection of the service building has been let and working drawings for the remaining structures are rapidly being perfected under the direction of J. Schulz, county consulting engineer on the county hospital buildings. Within another two months it is expected that construction work on all the buildings will be under way.

The service building, on which work has just been started, will be five stories in height with a basement, the dimensions being 73x110 feet. In the basement will be a cold storage plant, dishwashing department and room for the reception of foods and other supplies. On the first, second, third and fourth floors, will be dining-rooms for the hospital employees and convalescent patients. The entire fifth floor will be occupied by the kitchen. This building will be up-to-date and complete in arrangements and conveniences. It will be served by two electric passenger elevators, two electric freight elevators and three electric dumb waiters. Food for a maximum of 4000 persons, including patients in the wards, convalescents and employees, can be prepared in the kitchen. This building with all equipment and furnishings will cost approximately $100,000. It will be of fireproof construction with reinforced concrete frame, floors, roof and stairways and brick filler walls.

In point of arrangement and special adaptability the buildings for tubercular patients will embody the most advanced ideas for scientific treatment of this disease. The group will consist of six "V-shaped" units all connected at the angle with a corridor more than 1000 feet in length, which will extend to the dining-room for tubercular patients and the administration building. The wings of these units will each be 190 feet in length, with a ward for isolated patients in one wing, a general ward in the other wing, and service rooms, baths and toilets in the angle. Each of these units will contain accommodations for 48 patients. The structures will be one story in height and practically fireproof. Foundations and floors will be of reinforced concrete and superstructure and roof trusses of steel, the walls being brick. The roofs will be pitched, with skylights running along the ridges. A section of the roof from the eaves half way up on each wing will be movable, being operated by motors which will

FOR SALE—A MAGNIFICENT PIECE OF PROPerty in Fresno county, the center of the greatest raisin and fruit section of California; in 1915 the raisin crop of this district was 120,000 tons, bringing returns to the farmers of over $10,000,000. For the last fifteen years this land has been farmed to grain, never failing to produce heavy crops. In its immediate vicinity are fig, olive, orange, peach orchards and table grape and raisin vineyards, to the growing of which this land is well adapted. An abundance of water available from either wells or from one of the main canals of the Fresno Canal and Irrigation Company at a very low cost. It is the cheapest water in California, annual assessment not exceeding 62½ cents per acre. Farm fully equipped with good, substantial buildings and a hard-finished house of nine rooms for a family. Acreage in farm, 478 acres. Price $90 per acre—one-quarter down, balance in 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 years. Address

FOR SALE—"THERE IS A REASON" WHY OUR lima bean and sugar beet land is selling when other subdivisions are at a standstill. It is this, we are producing from 10 to 18 tons of sugar beets per acre WITHOUT IRRIGATION and our sugar percentage for several years has averaged better than 20 per cent., at present price of sugar beets this means from $70 to $126 per acre. Lima beans for several years have averaged $5 per cwt. or better. We have lands suitable for both products, also alfalfa lands for which we have large FLOWING artesian wells, some of them flowing over 100 miners' inches. Last, but not least, you buy direct from THE OWNERS, which explains the fact why our prices are from 1-3 to ½ less than is being asked for similar land in other localities, as we do not have to pay some realty company from 20 to 30 per cent. for commissions, etc. Write for maps, booklet, price list, etc. THE PATTERSON RANCH COMPANY, SALES DEPARTMENT, Oxnard, Calif.

SPECIAL INDUCEMENTS TO HOMESEEKERS
AT FONTANA.

A beautiful, productive orange grove home may be nearer within your reach TODAY than it ever will be again.

There never was a time when the business of growing oranges and lemons—in the RIGHT location, with GOOD trees, with careful methods—promised any greater returns or more sure profits than TODAY.

Thousands of diligent men have become independently wealthy growing oranges and lemons and selling them, in Southern California. Your opportunity is greater than theirs.

FONTANA is in the foothill district, high, well drained, no hard-pan, fertile limestone soil, with a remarkable record for immunity from frost damage. Has pure gravity water, at moderate rates; is on the Foothill boulevard Pacific Electric line, on two transcontinental railway lines; highly improved with surfaced roads, shade trees, schools and a high class of residents. Investigation should convince you that in a few years FONTANA will be at the forefront of the prosperous citrus growing districts of Southern California.

NOW—you can get and own a grove at Fontana. THEN—one may be far out of your reach. We are making it especially easy for a diligent man to buy a grove of good trees and to pay for them. We have splendid young groves 3, 4 and 5 years old, which we sell on such easy terms that the fruit should help meet the payments. We can show you how to meet your running expenses while the trees are growing.

We have special facilities for taking care of groves for non-residents. If you have a place or a business which is paying you a surplus, you can keep on with that, and have your trees growing at the same time.

THE MT. GAINES GOLD MINING COMPANY (REorganized.) Capitalization only $150,000. Property, over 500 acres in the famous Mother Lode Gold Belt of California. Over $1,000,000 in gold has been taken out of the Mt. Gaines workings and the ore has been opened up in only a few acres of this great gold-bearing estate. Oil flotation will be installed, production increased to 150 tons per day, and a saving of over $2 per ton made in production costs. With a production of 150 tons per day this saving should be approximately $124,700 per year. Enough in itself to enable dividends of about 80 per cent. per annum on the entire capital stock. As increased production means larger earnings in addition to this saving, Mt. Gaines should become one of the big dividend-payers of the Mother Lode.
Some stock offered now at 15c. Purchase should be made AT ONCE as the price will advance.

ROBBING THE GUARDSMEN.

High Prices Charged the Men on Their Way to Mexican Line.

[Richard Spillane in Commerce and Finance:] From various points along the line from the East to the Rio Gradne come reports that where trains containing troops stopped and the militiamen got out to stretch their legs to buy things to eat, to bathe or get shaved, the townspeople immediately raised prices and made the needs of the sildiers an opportunity for a money harvest such as is rare. A 5-cent sandwich immediately soared to 10 or 15 cents. A shave went from 10 to 25 cents. Restaurants raised prices on everything. So did friut dealers. Hotels, to which men went to get a bath because all the bath tubs of barber shops were insufficient for the influx of militiamen, charged $2.50 for "room and bath," although the soldier only wanted to get into a tub and get the cinders and the soot out of his hair and his skin and gave up the room so soon as has was cleansed.

The person who takes advantage of a soldier's needs to plunder him is despicable. Most of the boys who have gone to the Mexican border have left home, family, position, everything they hold dear, in response to their country's call.

It is a shabby return the price raisers have given to the men in khaki to rob those who offer their blood for the honor and the safety of the men, the women and the children of this nation—even for the safety of their plunderers.

AN INDUSTRIAL RESERVE.

As Necessary for National Safety as a Military Reserve.

[Engineering Record: That every country needs a great industrial force capable of supplying the material requirements of the armies in the field in time of war is the contention made by Howard E. Coffin, chairman of the Naval Consulting Board's committee on industrial preparedness. "England's colossal blunder at the outbreak of the war," said Mr. Coffin, "was to allow many of her skilled mechanics to go to the front. Some of her shops which could, with a slight readjustment, have been converted into munition-producing sources, were almost entirely stripped of their labor force. France did not make this mistake in the same degree. She had a close record of her labor through her system of universal military service and soon had most of her skilled mechanics back in the shops.

"Skilled mechanics in all lines of production," continued Mr. Coffin, "must be kept from enlistment in the army and must be retained in the factories, mills and mines for the production of munitions. They must be kept on the job also on the railways and in the telegraph and telephone services. It is essential, therefore, that the names of these skilled workmen be listed and that the men themselves be enrolled in the Industrial Reserve."

THE RELIGIOUS RAMBLER.

New Code Devised for World-wide Work of the Churches—Large Volume Especially Prepared for Missionaries to Be Used in Vast Project—System in Salvation Service—"Big Business" of Religion has Special Needs of Swift and Secret Communication.

TO THE average person the receipt of a telegram is an event, and a cablegram is an experience unknown. Nevertheless, that average person, if he be a church member, is engaged in a business which spends $15,000 a year in cablegrams, and which has needs for swift international communication so special and urgent that a strange big book of more than 700 pages has had to be prepared to meet the requirements of a distinctive cable code.

This is an aspect of the increasing magnitude and solidarity of foreign mission work that would not occur to one ordinarily. Yet we are frequently reminded that Christian missions are the most widely distributed enterprise on earth, and in many respects, including the amount of capiholders and the number of shareholders ,and the number of foreign agents, it is the world's biggest business. As such it has a strictly business side which calls for system, economy and efficiency. The spending of $30,000,000 a year, most of it paid out in the remotest lands on earth, calls for a great deal of organization.

Because the business of the church is unique, the existing commercial cable codes, of which there are a confusing number, have proven unsatisfactory for the transaction of mission messages. So the demand for a special code took shape through the annual foreign missions conference of North America, and a Young Men's Christian Association secretary from China, Charles L. Boynton, who had had ten years' experience with cable work, was assigned the bewildering task of creating a new book to be known as "The Missions Code."

MAKING TALK CHEAP.

When it becomes necessary for Rev. John Jones of interior China to return to America at once with his wife, who is ill, and for his place to be filled by a missionary transferred from some other station by order of the New York board and for the whole proceeding to be authorized, it looks as if a lengthy telegram is required. Cable tolls are $2 a word from his part of China, and the message would be expensive in plain language. What really would go to the board after the new missions code had been distributed to every mission station on earth (what a circulation for an author's book!) would be this luminous code message of four words, the first two being the address:

"Inculcate New York, Untogyluky, Wojomgoob."

Which, being translated, means, according to the new code:

"Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, 156 Fifth avenue, New York City.

"Owing to the health of my wife, we are ordered home, do you sanction this? Whom shall we substitute in my place?

"John Jones of Podunk. (Family to be notified.)"

This sort of message is common in the experience of every mission board. The annual expenditure for cables, under the old system of codes, is $15,000. Some relate to emergencies of the work, some to building operations, some to finances. In a big business like missions, it is not economy to wait for six weeks or three months for the closing of a transaction.

Other mesages of a different sort are no new thing in a mission board's experience. Here are a few that I have compiled from the new book showing the distinctive sort of intelligence required in missions that is not provided for in the commercial codes: "CHICVOPGAT." Translated: "Twins, boy and girl born today, mother dangerously ill. No hope. One boy dead. John Smith of Twingkiangpu, China."

"ERGOB." Translated: "Board feels that there is great danger; act with discretion, and exhaust every means for the safety of the mission force."

"UPUBCEDYSC." Translated: "There has been a riot at Bualdoga, British New Guinea, and the missionaries were beaten."

"UPURVIFTOH." Translation: "Mobs have destroyed all the mission property at Tungpeh, Honan Province, China, and the missionaries have narrowly escaped with their lives, but are now in the official yamen."

"MOCHSEHBIM." Translation: "Was probably in Diarbekr at time of the massacre, we fear the worst."

One glance at another sort of message for which commercial codes make no provision: Marriages between young missionaries on the field. Like good soldiers, these young people must get permission of headquarters before taking so important a step, and in answer to a two-word cable asking if their marriage can take place in Canton on October 3 the canny board responds: "MIZOT," which spells joy or sadness to the lovers according to whether or not they have completed a certain course of studies, for the translation reads: "Marriage sanctioned, subject to passing language examination."

Not infrequently the messages are after this order: "ILIHXILLAF," "We are prepared to pay into your account $5000 for famine relief."

THE WONDERS OF CODES.

Secrecy is usually less important in mission messages than economy; but every government and many large business houses have special codes which are meant to veil their dispatches. Edgar Ellan Poe says that no secret writing can be devised which cannot be deciphered. Once, in Peking an acquaintance whose own presence there could not be explained in the newspapers, offered to get for me a translation of any message that went out over the wires from any of the legations. The reading of rival codes is part of the "great game" of international intrigue.

Since the publication in 1903 of Whitelaw's 401,000,000 pronounceable words of five letters each, all the standard codes are changing to the five-letter word form, which permits the combination of two code words into one, ten letters being the limit allowed.

Formerly codes had to be made up from a list of 200,000 continental words, from six to ten letters long. Now since 1903, when the International Telegraphinc Convention was held in London, arbitrary words of five or ten letters are permissible, the only stipulation being pronouncibility.

There are many elaborate cable codes, some made doubly intricate by a system of translating letters into figures, with private "mutation tables," "transformers" and "condensing tables." Now the wide range of five-letter words [illegible] crowding these out.

There is an ingenious [illegible] detecting errors in [illegible] shown in a chart, in the [illegible] code, and a scientific instruction [illegible] cabling that makes one [illegible] there is more to the [illegible] work than preaching to the [illegible]

Up to the present time this [illegible] book, the missions code, is [illegible] American enterprise. The [illegible] tion of the mission leaders [illegible] that it will be adopted by all the missionary societies of the [illegible] To that end, it gives code [illegible] for all the existing mission [illegible] and organizations in existence. [illegible] also provides codes for the [illegible] individual missionaries as may be agreed upon between the boards and the missions.

The plan is to put a copy of the book into the possession of every mission station, and of every board and of interested persons in the home lands. As soon as the war is over the book will be registered with the cable companies and acquire doubtless the status of the four leading codes which the belligerents now recognize. Each mission will arrange with its nearest telegraph office the matter of expense—for often messages must be sent by bearers from remote interior points—and presto! One more girdle will have been put around the earth in the name of peace and good will to men.

THE RELIGIOUS RAMBLER.

CLEARING BATTLEFIELDS.

Novel Apparatus Devised for Locating Shells Underground.

[Pathfinder:] A considerable proportion of the explosive shells which the belligerent armies in Europe hurl at each other fail to explode. These shells—"blindgaengers" the Germans call them, meaning shells that have gone blind—are practically all of European manufacture; American-made shells always explode.

These "blindgaengers," which are to be found on every battlefield, are extremely dangerous, for a slight jar in handling them or an accidental push with the foot in walking over the field may set them off. Some shells, particularly those of French manufacture, lose their explosive nature after about two weeks of exposure on the field, but only an expert can distinguish between the nonexplosive and the explosive ones, and even the experts are [illegible] sometimes. Unexploded shells are carefully collected by the Germans, who remove and preserve the chemicals which they contain.

When it is desired to reclaim for agricultural purposes ground that has been fought over, measures have to be taken to remove the buried shells from the ground, for they constitute a serious source of danger, since they may be exploded by the plowshare or the horses' feet coming in contact with them.

A French engineer who was commissioned to devise a method for detecting shells buried in the ground in order that they might be removed, made use of an adaptation of what is known as the Hughes induction balance, two induction balances being used as one in the device. It has to be made without metal, as metal will interfere with the operation of the balance. The two windings of the [illegible] coil are placed side by side a [illegible] distance apart, in order that the mutual induction of the primary and secondary circuits may be brought to the neutral state and the telephone receivers may remain silent if there is no metallic mass near the device. Dry cells and an electromagnetic vibrator interrupter produce the primary periodic current.

With the original device a [illegible] caliber shell was detected at a [illegible] of sixteen inches in the ground. Telephone receivers clamped to the ears of the observer vibrate when there is any metal in the vicinity of the coils. By means of the [illegible] fragment of shell on or near the surface, and even a tin can, [illegible] be located. The sound produced by a fragment of shell differs from that produced by a buried shell, and after a little training it is possible to distinguish between them.

In using the apparatus the two coils, mounted so that they can be carried by a handle, are moved slowly a short distance above the ground. From the coils a flexible conductor wire runs to the receivers, which are worn by the observer, who walks some distance behind the man carrying the coils and who carries the battery, condenser, vibrator and other apparatus. Each coil covers a strip equal to its width, and strips, each about [illegible] inches wide, are examined [illegible] passage. Two men after a little experience can explore about [illegible] half acres of land in three hours.

GEN. GRANT'S OBSERVATIONS.

Was an Officer in the [illegible] of Gen. Taylor.

[Wall Street Journal:] U. S. Grant was a second lieutenant in the national army when Gen. Taylor was sent to the Mexican border to mobilize for the Mexican [illegible] 1843. It was by chance that [illegible] had his first experience with [illegible] bullets. He was riding a [illegible] from his regiment because [illegible] curious to see the "front."

Just when he reached the [illegible] the Mexicans opposing the Americans began firing and the [illegible] American regiment was ordered to charge. Grant, as he later [illegible] did not have the moral courage to turn back, so charged with the soldiers. A number of men were killed, but Grant escaped injury.

Shortly after he led his own regiment at Palo Alto. The [illegible] under Gen. Taylor faced a [illegible] larger force of Mexicans. The [illegible] armies watched each other as they drew up in battle line. There were no trenches. The Mexican [illegible] ammunition was inferior to that used by the United States and it was largely the superiority in artillery that permitted Taylor to sweep everything before him.

Regarding the Palo Alto battle Gen. Grant, in his memoirs, [illegible] "The Mexicans immediately opened fire upon us, first with artillery and then with infantry. At first their shots did not reach us, and the advance was continued. As we got nearer the cannon balls commenced going through the ranks. They hurt no one, however, because [illegible] strike the ground long before they reached our line and they ricocheted through the tall grass so slowly that the men would see them and open ranks to let them pass."

As for the flint-lock muskets then in use, Gen. Grant said: "At a distance of a few hundred yards a man might fire at you all day without your finding it out."

[illegible]OCK TRADING LIGHT, DUE TO STRIKE THREAT.

[illegible] Street's Keen Interest in the Railroad Labor [illegible] Subordinated All Other Considerations [illegible] Developments During Two-hour Session — Bank [illegible] Show Large Actual Cash Gain.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

[illegible] YORK, Aug. 19.—Wall [illegible]'s keen interest in the [illegible] labor situation subordinated all other considerations [illegible] developments during today's [illegible] session. Trading was light [illegible] narrow, some of [illegible] issues remaining un[illegible] [illegible] were slightly reactionary and United States Steel rose [illegible] within fractional limits. [illegible] lost more of yesterday's [illegible], the preferred denoting pressure on its extreme [illegible] of 3 points. United Fruit also [illegible] a part of its spectacular gain, [illegible] backwardness of Marines [illegible] was more than offset by a [illegible] record for Atlantic, Gulf [illegible] Indies at 72⅛ and an ex[illegible] gain of 5 points for Pacific [illegible] rise being coincident with [illegible]pany's resumption of trans[illegible] service. [illegible] investment stocks were at lowest prices just before the close when the financial district received word that the Washington conference had as yet been without definite results.

The bank statement was of interest chiefly because of the large actual cash gain, over $27,000,000, with an increase of almost $25,000,000 in reserves.

The day's bond dealings were extremely light with a steady tone.

Government bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

BRISK TRADING ON LOCAL EXCHANGE.

UNION OIL AND BIG JIM ARE FAVORITES.

Oil Leader Sells at Higher Prices—Big Jim Firm—Shorts Disappear—Broader Inquiry for Home Telephone Stocks—Tom Reed Advances.

Union Oil and Big Jim were the chief features at yesterday's session of the Los Angeles Stock Exchange. The former security advanced to 85.00 under strong buying power, 155 shares changing hands at that figure. It is expected that the stock will remain at this quotation or advance slightly from now on, but there are mighty few brokers who can see a decline in sight. The bonds of the same company were also in heavy call and 3 sold at 92, a gain of half a point over the previous day. It is reported that the East is behind the market for the bonds, as both San Francisco and this city have received buying orders from a prominent Wall-street house, which has been connected with the financing of the corporation for several years. Big Jim did not vary from a price of 82 throughout the entire meeting and 2400 shares were transferred at that figure. Shorts were not in sight Saturday, and the general impression on the board was that they have played their hand and are through, for the present at least. There was a broader inquiry for Home Telephone stocks and it is rumored that the merger deal is about ready to be O.K.'d by the State Railroad Commission. Whether there is any truth in the report or not, it is certain that the preferred stock was considerably stronger at 71.25 bid, and the common sold at 40.00. Tom Reed recorded a healthy improvement when closing sales were registered at 1.58. United Northern brought 10, but Gilt Edge was weak.

MARKET PRICES LITTLE CHANGED.

SHOWERS REPORTED IN THE SOUTHERN STATES.

Offerings will be Governed by the Conditions in Western Belts. Indications of Good Demand from Spot Houses—Speculation is Rather Quiet.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 19.—The opening prices in cotton showed little change from the final figures of yesterday. Some scattered showers were reported in Eastern Texas, Alabama and Georgia. The precipitation in the western section of the belt was very light. The market was a weather market, and will be governed for some time by conditions in the eastern and western belts. In the west general rain and cooler weather is needed, but the reverse is true for the eastern portion. There were indications of a good demand from spot houses. It is predicted that October will sell over December, but speculation is rather quiet. Liverpool was closed on account of a holiday.

COMMERCIAL.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Morocco grapes arrived in Los Angeles yesterday and they were immediately placed on sale at $1.35 a lug. This variety is a rather popular one and usually meets with a good demand from the public. Other grapes continue easy and unchanged. A break in the Belle-fleur market is due Monday and the first indications of the same were on hand Saturday. Receipts have been increasing for the past four days at quite a rapid rate and this means but one thing, a lowering of prices. Bartlett pears are very strong at present and dealers report that there has been a heavy amount of buying for canning purposes. The reduction in the price of sugar, which has been going on ever since the first of the month, has resulted in the average housewife becoming interested in canning again. Quinces remain quiet and are being offered at rather cheap prices. Citrus fruits are very firm and oranges, in particular, are bringing fancy quotations. The Sunkist varieties are selling for $4 a box, and in the opinion of a great many of the largest jobbers this price will be boosted in a few days. Grapefruit is also due for an advance and limes are still selling for $1.10 a basket.

There were a number of price changes incorporated in the vegetable list yesterday, and as a general rule the alterations marked a rising market. Green corn was raised to 45 and 55 cents a lug or $1.45 to $1.50 a sack. Cucumbers of the best sort are bringing from 35 to 45 cents a lug and further advances are anticipated this week. Green beans continue to sell at strong prices, but there has been no visible slackening in the demand since the higher values went into effect. Potatoes droped to $2.40 and $2.60 a hundred yesterday, which represented a loss of 10 cents over the previous day's quotations. Continued declines are predicted for this commodity.

As there was no session on the Produce Exchange yesterday morning, prices of the chief staples remained the same as on Friday. Receipts were large and comprised the following: 288 cases of eggs, 70,100 pounds of butter, 2850 pounds of cheese, 2264 sacks of potatoes, 600 sacks of onions, 23 sacks of beans, 91 sacks of sweet potatoes, 1216 boxes of apples, 206 boxes of plums, 1571 boxes of peaches, 61 boxes of nectarines, 25 boxes of figs and 115 crates of grapes.

NEW PRICES SET IN WHEAT PIT.

VOLUME OF TRADE SAID TO BE LARGEST ON RECORD.

Top Mark is Five Cents Over that of the Day Before—Heavy Profit Taking Sales Absorbed on the Bulge—Sharp Advances in Oats.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—The volume of trade in wheat here today was said to have been the largest on record. New price records for the crop were attained. Top prices were 5 over yesterday. Heavy profit-taking sales were absorbed on the bulge but the close showed net gains of 3⅝ to 4⅝. Corn advanced 1⅛ to 2; oats, ¾ to 1, and provisions closed 2½ to 65 up. Snow's estimate of a total wheat yield of 596,000,000 bushels against domestic requirements of 610,000,000 bushels was the big new bull factor in the market for that cereal. The market for corn also attained a new price altitude. The factors were dry, hot weather. Snow's estimate of a crop of 2,565,000,000 bushels, and the fact that spot corn was selling at a good premium over September and bringing the best prices in twenty years. There was some recession from the top on profit-taking. Further sharp advances were witnessed in oats. Higher hogs and the strength of grain brought about an advance in provisions. Shorts in September pork bid that market up 65. Lard was the most active commodity. May lard lost 2½ but December advanced 5 and September 10. Ribs gained 2½ to 5 cents.

be started or stopped with a push button. When the weather is favorable, sections of the wards can be unroofed at will. The general scheme of these buildings will afford a maximum of light, air and sunshine in every ward during both the morning and afternoon. The cost of this group of buildings will be approximately $250,000. Working plans are now practically completed and contractors will be asked to submit bids within a few weeks.

By no means the least important of the improvements will be the grouping of all the power machinery and equipment in a central fireproof building. This structure will be 80x100 feet and it will have a reinforced concrete stack 130 feet in height. The boilers now in use will be moved to the new power building and there will also be installed a 200-kw. genrator, two 250-h.p. boilers, a new heater and separator, a 14-sweeper vacuum cleaning machine and other equipment. A rearrangement of the distributing system will also be required, new conduits being constructed to carry power and heating lines to the various buildings. A total expenditure of approximately $100,000 will be required for the new power plant.

SAYS FILIPINOS DESPISE JAPS.

Believe Themselves Superior to the Nipponese.

Had European Civilization for Four Hundred Years.

Islands Have Thrived Under Rule of Americans.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

TOKIO, July 15.—Dr. Inazo Nitobe, a Japanese scholar well-known in the United States, where he spent several years, has just published impressions of a recent visit to the Philippine Islands and his articles have attracted wide attention in Japan.

Dr. Nitobe said he heard many Americans in the Philippines express belief that the islands would ultimately pass into the hands of the Japanese, but he believed the attitude of the natives might be quite different.

"The natives," said he, "believe they are superior to the Japanese, having enjoyed a European civilization for four hundred years and having used a language derived from the Latin. As a matter of fact the Filipinos are no equal for the Japanese in politics, national defense or industry, but possessing as they do such foreign ideas and customs, though ancient, they rather look down upon the Japanese. It remains a serious question whether they would condescend to look up to the Japanese as their superiors.

"They have, furthermore, not neglected to pay close attention to the Japanese administration in Formosa and Korea. While Japan's administration is not without its faults, it has been as a rule a great success, and yet when comparison is made between Japan's colonial administration and that of America in the Philippines, they are widely different.

"In the Philippines the natives enjoy unlimited liberty of speech; they write and discuss as they like, and no official intervention takes place. Viewed from this respect alone, would the Filipino welcome Japanese control, when he realized the present condition of Japan's policy in Formosa and Korea?"

The writer referred to the many political liberties and prerogatives possessed by the Filipinos under American rule, and spoke particularly of the fact that American teachers in the public schools are gradually being replaced by native instructors. He added: "Visit the primary schools and you will see the native instructors teaching very patriotic songs, with the spirit of independence the dominating note, such as 'My Native Land, the Philippines, the Philippines.'

"In the high schools native books are used as text-books, encouraging the spirit of political independence. There were more than eighty dialects in these islands, but today English is the common language, thus uniting the diversed inhabitants into one.

"Our wonder grows, then, why the natives under such favorable conditions should desire to discard American rule to be replaced by that of Japan."

Dr. Nitobe pointed out that the United States spends the huge sum of $30,000,000 annually in the Philippines. Add to this the immovable capital already invested in the islands, something like from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 more. It was not necessary, he said, to enumerate the blessings that have been brought about to the natives by the inflow of such a large amount of specie. Their wages have increased and the standard of living has been raised. Should the Philippines be transferred to Japan now, for instance, it would be hard to gain such advantages as these in the immediate future, even if good might come in the long run. The writer added: "Try as I will, it is hard for me to find a reason to welcome the Japanese. It seems to me that the desire of transferring the ownership in some fitting form comes from the American inhabitants rather than from the Filipinos themselves."

In conclusion Prof. Nitobe declared that it was absurd for Japanese to talk about the acquisition of the Philippines. Their cry should be "Southward Ho" in commerce, but not in territorial aggrandizement. He felt confident that the American government would not object to economic enterprise by the Japanese in the Philippines. Indeed, he had been informed on his visit that in not one single instance has a business proposition by the Japanese been oposed by the authorities.

DEMAND FOR HOMES.

Cooper-Pyle-Clopine Company reports the sale of a new ten-room frame and plaster residence at No. 434 South Oxford boulevard for Ella I. Cooper to Fred G. Williamson for $13,500 cash. The same company has sold a lot at the southeast corner of First and Serrano streets for Mr. Angel to Carrie Schrader, and has a contract to build a seven-room colonial bungalow for the new owner, making an investment of $7500. In connection with C. H. Elmendorf, the company has sold two lots on the west side of Serrano street, south of Fourth street, to W. E. Baker and S. C. Lentz, respectively, and has contracts to build eleven-room cement plaster houses for both owners, making an investment of about $15,000 for each.

UNIQUE HOUSE COURT.

Plans for twelve Italian style houses to be built in a court at Franklin and Whiteley avenues in Hollywood have been prepared by R. S. Rankin for a local investor. The houses will be grouped with a large open court on the street front, the owner contemplating elaborate landscape improvements. Work on the houses will probably be started within two weeks. The buildings will have white cement exteriors and shingle roofs.

A SUBMARINE'S ESCAPE.

Its Nose Was Blown Off by a Mine but it Sailed Three Hundred Miles to the Safety of Its Home Port.

[London Correspondence New York Sun:] "In a certain dockyard in England there is to be found a splendid tribute to the prowess of British submarines and the skill of those who man them. It is one of the finest of the British undersea boats, which, with her bow twisted and bent as the result of a collision with an enemy mine in enemy waters, covered a distance of almost 300 miles under her own power and arrived safely in a home port. Through the courtesy of the British Admiralty I was permitted to see this submarine and talk with her officers and crew.

"She is in harbor, with her bow facing torn into strips and two of her torpedo tubes crushed. Her plates are crumpled, two of her bulkheads are broken away at the bow; but in her tubes are two unexploded torpedoes. Their casing is twisted and staved in and the mouth of the aft tube is jammed. But the quality of the high explosive in her torpedoes and the mechanism controlling it prevented an explosion, thus saving her from total destruction.

"She struck a mine head on. The collision smashed two of her bulkheads, broke all glass aboard her and sent the crew sprawling to the floor of the compartments. But her torpedoes did not explode; her engines did not stop; her dials did not fail to register. She dropped to the bottom of the sea and the water flooded in under the doors of the torpedo tubes aft. But within ten minutes after the collision she had been righted, come to the surface and turned her nose toward home. When I looked at her lying there with her exposed tubes shining in the sunlight and her bulkheads in strips of rusty iron, it seemed incredible that she had been under the coast guns of the enemy, that she could have made in her damaged condition a journey of 300 miles, returning to a safe harbor with the information that she had been sent to obtain. And added to this was the fact that she had made the voyage in a high sea; that for twenty hours, defenseless, she evaded the enemy patrols.

"I had heard stories of German submarines sunk by a single shot, so I asked one of the officers how his boat had survived the tremendous shock of a mine explosion.

"'She held because of her strength,' he said. 'It broke her nose and it tore off two of her bulkheads. But she held. The efficiency of the pumps was not impaired. Within two minutes we had them working.'

"He asked me if I would not go below and see the marks of the disaster. So I followed him across a gangway and upon the narrow iron deck which already was beginning to show red patches of rust. The hatch was open. Below I could see a white compartment with brass fittings.

"I do not know what I expected to find, but when I stood in this compartment I could see no traces whatsoever of the catastrophe. Directly in front of me the four rear doors of the torpedo tubes, painted a brilliant white, and to my right and left the great shining torpedoes were clamped in their racks. Only the wheel controlling the bow rudder was not true. The slender brass rod supporting it had suffered from the vibration.

"This was the only mark made by the mine of the enemy. Not that it was to be estimated as minor damage, for the rudders have their part to play in the rise and dive and it was necessary to come up from the bottom of the sea. Not a simple matter with the rudders not under control.

"'You see,' one of the officers explained to me, 'we didn't know what had happened—the water was pouring in aft and broken glass was everywhere. We didn't know how much of her was gone. We knew that every man aboard had been knocked flat on his face, that the glass off the dials was rattling about under foot. But we didn't know what was to become of us.

"'It was fine, you know, to see the crew. They got on their feet and at their places before the commander had time to order them there. In two minutes the order to rise had gone through the engine-room and the pumps were going But whether we were going to rise or not remained to be seen.

"'It was still enough, down there, after all of the noise of the explosion and the smashing of the glass. You could hear the motors turning—it's not much of a sound they make—and the testing of the wireless. We were glad enough to hear that. And when we saw the bubble in the clinometer was still registering inclination we knew that matters were not as bad as they might have been.

"'Then they threw in the levers. We waited. That was a bad minute. Then the broken glass began to rattle around under foot again. We were moving. We weren't long in getting up. At any time there's nothing like coming up into the air and sunlight after you've been under for a bit. But this was different. Yes, this was a bit different. So we started looking her over for the damage.'

"This was how he told me the story of the black interval when these officers and the men of the crew waited, submerged, at some 200 feet below water level, not knowing whether or not their bulkheads were destroyed, whether their instruments were irreparably damaged, whether or not they would ever come up again into the sunlight. It was his ship that he seemed to think of above all other things.

"'We found out what we'd come into,' he said. 'Then it was whether we could make a port alone. The wireless was working. That is, we could send; we couldn't receive. We took a look at the bow facing at the bulkheads. They looked pretty bad, hanging loose in strips. But we decided we could make it. The engines were right, and there wasn't a broken dial aboard her. The periscope was true. It was only her nose and her rudder that were gone.

"'So we started back. If we picked up anybody on the wireless we knew that they had work of their own to do. So we drove along under our own power. It was a bit of bad sea, but we made it. The waves broke over the bridge and pounded the one bulkhead we had left forward.

"'And so,' he said and smiled, 'we came home.'"

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Aug. 15.—Pr ident Wilson has been asked to in Arizona politics and to pro Gov. Hunt from attacks made Federal officeholders, espec postmasters. Rather, it should told that he has been asked to in struct officeholders to support H in his candidacy for re-election.

This unusual demand has from William B. Cleary, a Bis lawyer, counsel for the labor ions of that camp, now sojourn in Venice, Cal. Initially, the co munication is an attack upon Se tor Henry Ashurst, whom the P ident is asked to direct to call his Arizona appointees from th vociferous support of Olney Governor. P.A.A. Athletes Make the Most Points.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 19.—Amid the breaking of records and the defeat of many champions, the Pacific Association won the Far Western track and field meet from the Southern Pacific Association by a margin of twenty-nine points. With the running of the relay and the closing of the meet the Pacific Association had a total of 101 points, the Southern Pacific Association seventy-two points, the Northwestern Pacific twenty-nine points and the Intermountain Association five points.

The meet was a fast one and many thrills were furnished the 5000 spectators out to see the athletes perform. Chief among the events was the come-back of Fred Kelly in the high hurdles by beating his rival, Earl Thomson, by a body's breadth and tying the world's record at 14 4-5 seconds.

SOLDIER.

Fred Kelly knew that it was up to him to win, or his chances for a come-back in the national championships would be small. Another fact that lends greater importance to his winning is that he has been at the military training station at Monterey and has hardly had any time to train since his return from the north. With the crack of the gun Kelly was away to a yard lead over his opponents and held it until near the last, when Earl Thomson made a slight gain on him by plowing through two of the hurdles in a desperate attempt to win.

Next to the come back of King Kelly was the disappointment furnished by the disablement of Howard Drew. Drew ran in excellent form in his heat of the 100-yard dash and won easily in 10 seconds flat. However, his old injury to his back bothered him in the last forty yards of the finals and he was unable to run his best and was defeated by Henry Williams of the Spokane Athletic Club in 9 4-5 seconds.

Drew's injury kept him out of the 220-yard dash completely. In the clubhouse following his breakdown

Gruelling Five-set Match Gives Casino Cup to Ichiya Kumagae, Five-time Conqueror of Peck Griffin—American Wilts Under the Terrific Heat.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEWPORT (R. I.) Aug. 19.—Ichiya Kumagae of Tokio furnished the biggest sensation of the tennis season today by wresting victory from William M. Johnston of San Francisco, national champion, in the finals of the annual tournament for the Casino cup. It was a five-set match filled with brilliant performance in which both experts went to the limit of their skill to achieve the mastery, and in which the amazing steadiness and endurance of the Japanese champion gained him victory.

Kumagae had the better of the Californian in the first two sets and although Johnston rallied and captured the next two sets, he showed signs of weariness in the final and went down to defeat before the even, accurate play of his steady-going opponent. The scores were 6-1, 9-7, 5-7, 2-6, 9-7.

The victory gave Kumagae a leg on the Casino cup, the trophy put up last year when R. Norris Williams II of Philadelphia was the winner.

With Clarence J. Griffin, his fellow Californian, as his partner, Johnston later in the day was defeated in the doubles final, losing to W. F. Johnson and J. J. Armstrong of Philadelphia. The score was 4-6, 6-2, 6-1.

A gathering reminiscent of the old days of national championship contests of the Casino courts occupied the stands and thrilled with excitement over the varying fortunes of the singles contest. Most of the tennis talent in the gallery had picked Johnston to win and the betting was 100 to 60 on the match. The sky was clear and a hot sun beat upon the courts, somewhat to the disadvantage of Johnston, who appeared to feel its effects more than his adversary.

Kumagae went in for the first set with an exhibition of placing which the Californian clearly was unable to equal. The Japanese was uniformly accurate as he placed his long shots from the back court, hitting the dropping ball with his peculiar topping stroke and rarely having an "out." Johnston made good on his own service in the second game, but in succeeding games Kumagae outplayed him.

THE SECOND SET.

At the beginning of the second set the national champion lost his service, and when the Japanese won a love game in the third encounter by a series of line drives down the forehand of the American, it was apparent that Johnston was worried. He was not at all sure of his own placements, and Kumagae's driving line shots seemed to dazzle him at times when he attempted to take the net.

With the score 5 to 3 against him, Johnston showed a flash of brilliancy and brought the games to 5-all. The Californian's wonderful shooting to EUROPEAN ARMIES FAIRLY BUZZ WITH EVER-HUSTLING MOTORS.

Officers in London Sputter Around in Fords while the German Staff Officers Thunder Across the Country in Huge Benz and Mercedes Machines — Our War Department Doesn't Seem to have Ever Heard of an Automobile.

BY HARRY CARR.

ANYONE who has seen European armies in the field is amazed at the lack of modern equipment of our own troops. This is especially true in regard to automobiles.

America is the home and habitat of the motor car; but the War Department has apparently not yet discovered that there is such a machire. It is probably more just to say that the fault is with Congress and not with the army.

NO MACHINES.

The business of handling the mobilization of troops on the Mexican border and the administration of military affairs after the mobilization had taken place was seriously hampered for lack of automobiles. The distances between concentrating camps at El Paso was considerable and the officers had no way to get about except in jitney busses that they hired themselves.

Although Germany was cut off by the blockade from the great automobile factory centers of the world, in spite of the fact that gasoline was scarce and a rubber famine made pearls of great price of tires, still the German army fairly buzzed with automobiles.

Every officer of high rank had several cars attached to his staff. The aides who formerly dashed around the battlefields on foaming steeds now dash in automobiles.

In London I noticed that the British officers used a great many small cars—lots of Fords. In Germany the favored motor car for military purposes was a big old battleship. Most of those at the front seemed to be Mercedes and Benz cars. I saw no small cars.

Way down in the south of Poland I rode in the most magnificent car I ever saw.

AUSTRIAN CLASS.

We had left Warsaw after the siege of Novo Georgievsk and were working our way southward. At Ivangarod we came to a place where the rails ended and the troops were moving on with wagon trains to the siege of Brest Litovsk. Two divisions had started across country and the general in command was about to leave in their wake the night we arrived in Ivangarod.

The Austrians are charming people and, learning that we had had nothing to eat and were in no danger of getting anything to eat, the general delayed his departure and had his cooks get up a big dinner for us. He sent all the cars belonging to his staff to our train. Among them was his own car. I chanced to be assigned to this car.

SOME CAR, THIS.

It was a big Mercedes limousine. In times of peace it had belonged to a famous Vienna beauty. When war broke out the government impressed her automobile into the army. It was like a fairy palace on wheels, the interior being upholstered with quilted white silk.

Although it had been on military duty for over a year, the car was still in spic-span condition. Its chauffeur was one of the head mechanics of the Mercedes factory, who had been called into the service as a military reservist. He guarded this wonderful car as a mother would a baby.

TO THE ARMY.

There were a large number of these cars called into the service of the army. I was told that the owner of every big, high-powered auto in Germany lost it. The government did not seem to care for the small cars.

I met an American woman in Berlin who had a Ford in her garage. She was forbidden by the government to use it, but they didn't want it for the army. The reason they refused her the More Packards than any other make of truck were asked for by the War Department in their recent order.

Five hundred and ninety-four Packard trucks were ordered, making a total of 716 Packards purchased by the Government since March 20.

The same qualities that have made the Packards so conspicuously successful in the army service have made them indispensable to owners in more than 200 lines of commercial service.

BLASTING CLAY BIRDS FROM AUTO.

NEW SPORT PROVES DIFFICULT AND POPULAR.

Olds Scout Eight Bounces the Crack Shot Around but He Finally Gets the Range and Breaks Seven Out of Ten Birds. Stunt Provides Test of Shooting.

Blasting clay birds on the run is the latest thing that Owen Council, the crack shot of the Los Angeles Gun Club, has found in the way of amusement. After winning a diamond medal, the Hercules trophy for sixty-five straight, the Western Shell trophy for ninety-seven out of a possible 100, and then scoring 291 out of 300, Council suggested that he try it out from the deck of an automobile.

An Olds Scout eight was brought on and Dr. Friend pressed into service to handle the hand trap. This is probably not the first time that shooting has taken place from an automobile, as it seems to be quite the popular thing over the way, along the battle line in Europe, but then it's a lot better to be shooting at clay birds than at men.

ROUGH GOING.

The first test was made in the stubble fields back of the Gun Club range. The going was a little rough and Dr. Friend had some trouble holding his poise with the hand trap and for this reason gave Council some very fancy shots. The car was set at eighteen miles per hour over the open country and Council scored seven hits out of ten. He is of the opinion that this is a much better test of accuracy than any other form of shooting, but it would hardly be possible to hold a shoot under these conditions, unless the affair was staged in some wide country place, for at eighteen miles per hour an automobile will cover quite a bit of territory. Then the officials would have to be furnished with either motorcycles or flying machines in order to keep out of the way and at the same time get the results of the day's work.

AFTER DOVES.

When the fall season opens Council is going after doves and ducks via this method, just to see what can be done with the live shooting. Doves will be first in line, as the season opens September 1.

Along these lines it may be of interest to note that Maj. Ryus of the Automobile Reserve Corps is going to try out some very interesting stunts regarding rifle fire from moving machines this fall.

Blasting clay birds on the run.

Owen Council, crack shot of the Los Angeles Gun Club, discovered a new form of amusement the other day. He procured an Olds Scout Eight from the Oldsmobile Company, a hand trap, a gun, and a man to work the trap. Then he started out in the machine to see how many clay birds he could smash. He discovered that hitting a bird from a car is a different proposition from the ordinary process.

ACCESSORY FIRM IN BIG CHANGE.

One of the most important announcements that has been made in the motor trade—for a long time is that of Chanslor & Lyon Company in which they give notice of the discontinuance of their retail department. This change is to be effective September 1 and after that date they will devote their entire energies to their wholesale business.

To those in the trade this step has been anticipated for some time, as the enormous growth of Chanslor & Lyon's wholesale business in the past few years has been little short of phenomenal.

Gosh!

TIRE MILEAGE NOT CONSIDERED.

CUBAN MOTORISTS WANT CASINGS TO LAST FOREVER.

Tires Travel Over 13,000 Miles in Three Months and Cuban Enthusiast Kicks Because They do not Give Service for a Few More Months—Distance is no Item.

American motorists have become so accustomed to reckoning the life of their tires in terms of miles that many of them will undoubtedly be surprised to learn that in Cuba, where American automobiles have rapidly been increasing in numbers, actual mileage service is rarely taken into consideration. It is seldom that the Cuban motorist can tell you the mileage of any of his tires, as the worth of an automobile tire is based almost entirely on the length of time it has been in service.

"This unusual manner of determining tire satisfaction is well illustrated in an experience which one of our representatives has just reported," says J. C. MacFadyean, manager export department the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Akron, O.

NOTHING DOING.

"Our representative recently called on a Cuban motorist who had been using Goodyear Tires, with the object, of course, of keeping him supplied with them, but was met with the frank statement that no more Goodyears would appear on his car. The last one had lasted only three months.

"When asked concerning the mileage secured he merely gestured toward the speedometer, stating that the tires came with the car. The Goodyear man might see for himself.

"The speedometer registered 13,000 miles. But when this remarkable mileage was explained to him, he remained as unmoved as Mt. Olympus, declaring with a shrug of the shoulders: 'The Goodyear did not last long enough.'

PECULIAR.

"When it became known that he had purchased a tire of other make, a Goodyear tire was offered him free if the new tire would show as great mileage as the Goodyear just taken off.

"This is but one of the many problems which the introduction of American-made tires has encountered in other lands, and emphasizes the need of studying the consumer's viewpoint, and at the same time point out the standards by which tire satisfaction should be computed.

CHALMERS TOURISTS REACH YELLOWSTONE

Piloted by the Chalmers six-30 which blazed the Twin Cities-to-Yellowstone route two months ago, eighty-five tourists in twenty-seven motor cars checked in at Gardiner and enrolled as enthusiastic boosters of the National Parks Highway.

Most remarkable among the features of the tour was the fact that many of the roads encountered had been laid down almost overnight. When the Chalmers pathfinder blazed the trail in May, detours for washouts were a matter of course. Yet six weeks later the big tour went through on schedule over 1200 miles of roads closely akin to boulevards. The Chalmers six-30, which piloted the tour the entire distance, averaged over twenty-three miles an hour for the trip, although no attempt was made to register unusual speed.

That the Yellowstone tour opens a route of infinite variety to American motorists is conceded by all who made the run. From the time Minneapolis dropped behind on the horizon until Gardiner gateway hove in view, the tourists ran the whole gamut of American topography. Lakes, plains, mountains and valleys came in turn, and the trip through the Bad Lands of North Dakota and Montana proved to be the most unusual and spectacular eye-opener to the Yankee tourist in his home country.

Excellent Results.

HERE'S SERVICE IN AUTO TIRES.

ROUGH ROADS PUT RACINE TIRES TO SEVERE TEST.

Heavy Machine and Trailer Travel Over All Sorts of Roads and Mountain Grades Without Any Harmful Effects on Tires. Original Air Brought Back.

Mr. William Gregory, one of the pioneer automobile dealers of this city, and party returned this last week from a month's outing to the Yosemite and other points of interest, and because of the excellent results which were obtained from the Racine country road tires, with which all three of the machines of the party were equipped, another strong indorsement was turned over to Mr. F. H. Osler, of the Osler Racine Rubber Company, local distributors for this popular tire.

All of the tires of Mr. Gregory's car had been run several thousand miles before the start of this trip, and in spite of this fact and in spite of the conditions of the roads over which they had to travel, which in some places were very bad, Mr. Gregory says he had absolutely no tire trouble, and brought the original air in all four tires until he had practically reached the city limits on the return trip, when a large nail was picked up and a puncture resulted.

A trailer carrying a complete camping equipment was attached to Mr. Gregory's big Moline-Knight Fifty, and the daylight hours were spent entirely in sightseeing, and the nights were spent in camping along the road wherever they happened to be.

The road conditions, taken as a whole, were very good, according to Mr. Gregory, although there were one or two places which were bad and required mostly low gear and which were naturally hard on tires, but nothing was experienced which would in any way interfere with most any driver making the trip.

NEWMAN ESSICK TAKES A TRIP.

Yosemite was the first spot to be visited by Mr. Essick and his party. After seeing all the wonders of the national park, the bank official drove his Saxon six up over Tioga Pass to Lake Mono on the Nevada State line. From Lake Mono the tour was continued to Lake Tahoe, and from Tahoe back to Los Angeles via the San Joaquin Valley.

Mr. Essick covered in all about 2500 miles. He estimates that fifty miles of that distance was made in low gear. Another machine was towed for seventeen miles up grade. The climb over the Tioga Pass, at an altitude of 10,000 feet, was made on a very hot day. The heat in the San Joaquin Valley was nearly sufficient to evaporate the water out of the radiator. Nevertheless, on his entire trip, Mr. Essick added only one gallon of water to the radiator of his Saxon six. The lone gallon was put in at Tahoe, and then as Mr. Essick said, "Just on general principles."

Racine Country Road Tires on Mr. William Gregory's Moline-Knight 50. The machine with trailer attached was driven on a strenuous camping trip over all kinds of roads and the tires which had already been run several thousand miles came through without a puncture.

AUTO TRAILERS GREATLY IMPROVED

One of the most rapidly-growing industries which took its development from the motor car industry, and therefore might be classed as an offshoot, is swiftly forging to the front in Los Angeles.

As transportation facilities increased by reason of more and better roads and motor cars, ways and means to transport goods and commodities of all kinds, was found necessary, and the motor trailer as we now know it came into being.

Southern California being one of the largest motor-car owning districts in the world, and being possessed with an abundance of good roads, the demand for trailers of all kinds and for all purposes has created the success of a local manufacturer.

The Los Angeles Trailer Company of Seventeenth and South Main streets has developed a line of vehicles which has met with popular approval, not only in this locality, but also in South America and Asiatic countries to which shipments are going forward regularly.

The City Council of Springfield, Mo., has amended the motor vehicle ordinance, to provide that green and yellow lights specified must be kept burning during darkness—an omission from the ordinance that prevented prosecutions. Jitneys must use green lights, and taxicabs yellow.

The New Series Franklin Car

Here is the solution for motorists of America of a difficult mechanical problem that is engaging the attention of some of the world's greatest engineers today. The method by which the Franklin Company has eliminated in the Series 9 Franklin 400 pounds from an already scientific-light-weight car is an achievement that is five years in advance of current engineering practice.

NOW that every informed motorist realizes how superfluous dead weight adds to expense, lessens safety and takes away from comfort, you are going to hear more about light-weight cars.

For 15 years, the principles of scientific-light-weight have been studied, developed and built into Franklin cars.

The achievement in weight elimination, marked by the New Series Franklin, is based on the knowledge of how to cut down the forces which wear out a car—not mere weight cutting.

Making the Franklin car resilient instead of rigid, is the reason for the Franklin always being the lightest car in its class—the cheapest to own and operate, the easiest, safest and most comfortable to run.

LET the man who is looking for an automobile which gives maximum service—and by maximum service we mean more comfort, more safety, more reliability and less cost of upkeep and depreciation—consider the facts:

The Franklin car holds the world's record for tire economy and gasoline economy.

The New Series Franklin Car will deliver its owner 17 per cent. more tire economy and 20 per cent. more gasoline economy than the Franklin cars which established these world's records.

The Franklin car is acknowledged to be the easiest riding car in the world.

The New Series Franklin Car is a smoother rolling, easier riding, easier controlled car than any of its predecessors.

HERE in the New Series Franklin is a full-size five-passenger car weighing only 2280 pounds.

How has it been done? Note the aluminum in body, mudguards, engine base, oil pan, transmission case and cover, rear axle gear case—150 aluminum parts in all.

In the transmission gears is electric furnace nickel steel; in springs and axle shafts, electric furnace chrome-silico-manganese steel; in axle tubes and universal joints, 3½ per cent. nickel steel.

You will be interested in seeing how a given amount of metal has been redistributed and a stronger part produced, or a less amount of metal used and a part equally strong produced.

The diminished weight—and particularly the diminished unsprung weight—means another increase in tire economy. Think of relieving the tires from direct pounding of unnecessary weight by making the front axle 30 per cent. lighter and the rear axle 25 per cent. lighter!

Then the reduction of friction! Ball bearings, the closest approach to frictionless mechanism, are used everywhere.

With all this weight saving and elimination of "drag" comes greater ability at less expense, more comfort, greater safety—a saving of trouble and dollars.

THE New Series Franklin incorporates all the established principles of Franklin construction: Six-cylinder direct-air-cooled engine; full-elliptic springs front and rear; wood chassis frame; flexible drive through the springs; large tires (cord type).

Built in eight types: Touring Car, $1850; Runabout, $1800; Four-passenger Roadster, $1850; Cabriolet, $2650; Sedan, $2750; Brougham, $2700; Limousine, $3000; Town Car, $3000.

An inspection of the car now on our salesroom floor will make these points plain. Driving it will open up a new conception of motoring pleasure.

Upon each new Jeffery Six there appears the device shown at the bottom of the illustration.

It is more than a trade-mark. It is the symbol of mechanical accuracy and refinement—an appropriate identification for the Car of Mechanical Precision.

It stands for the ideals of accuracy upon which the great Jeffery organization is built. And as such it is the owner's guaranty of inherent worth.

The New Jeffery Six

A Long, Low, Hammock-Hung Body—A Motor Without Vibration at Any Speed—Yet, at a Lower Price—$1365

MEET this new Jeffery Six—the Car of Mechanical Precision. Stand back a bit. Take in the long, fashionably low lines—the rich, deep-toned Midnight Blue finish—22 times painted and varnished—all Jeffery-done—a gala attire that will always distinguish the car.

Bigness and beauty blend in the coach construction of the new Six. The long, sweeping lines, softened by the rich, lateral roll-edges, merge gracefully into the massive-shouldered hood.

It is a stately, impressive car, with that feeling of agile fleetness, so sought after today. There is perfect poise in this deep-chested road-conqueror—long and lithe and low-hung.

Click open one of the generous-sized doors. Set foot on the low, easy entrance step. Note the convenient placing of control units—all for your good comfort.

Step inside. Try the seats—soft, pliant cushions, real leather over real hair—and find the ease of a luxurious library chair. You pass easily from rear to front seats through the ample aisle provided for you.

The Car of Mechanical Precision is winning a new owner, and you admit it. Never have you so completely yielded to the charm of any automobile.

A Lower Price—$1365

You hear the price—Thirteen Sixty-Five! You are amazed. You had judged much more.

But Jeffery Precision and Jeffery Home-Construction bring you the triumphant new Six at this astonishingly low price.

Actually 93 per cent of the car is Jeffery-built. Virtually no parts are purchased, a Jeffery policy which means much today when parts-makers' prices are higher. Then add greater and even better standardized production with further economies effected by the new and greater Jeffery Company, and this phenomenal value is explained.

Vibrationless Motor—Inherently Balanced Crankshaft

A motor without vibration at any speed—that is the engineers' triumph in the Car of Mechanical Precision. And such extraordinary smoothness, we are free to declare, is exclusive to Jeffery motors.

The inherently balanced oversized crankshaft, is largely responsible for the wonderful softness of the motor, and is the result of tireless effort on the part of Jeffery engineers.

Every motor, before being placed in its chassis, is subjected to longer and more severe tests than we have ever seen employed by any other maker.

Without Vibration

The vibrationless feature of the new Jeffery Six motor is an exclusive development of Jeffery engineers.

The motor is without vibration at ANY speed.

This wonderful softness is largely the result of the inherently balanced oversized crankshaft. All Jeffery motors are subjected to the most rigorous tests given in any factory.

Performance

You ask a demonstration, and find this car a very savage in power, refined to submission and eager to serve. You feel its stamina in every metal sinew. Every mite of red-blooded power, almost brutal in its vigor, is bridled and docile—ready to serve at your quiet command.

You may glide along as gently as in a gondola while only a murmuring swish reminds you that your motor is at ease. Or, on an inviting stretch, urge on the speedometer until you read 50 and even 60 miles. The same mellow smoothness remains in your engine. And within the compass of these six cylinders there is all the obedient power you will ever want—and more.

Springs that are long and flat and hammock-hung, add to the comfort the soft motor brings.

Service vs. Care

The new Six gives maximum service, asks minimum care. Rugged simplicity distinguishes the chassis construction. The car's honest make-up delights.

It is more than a luxury. It is an investment.

That is why Jeffery cars are almost unknown in the second hand market. They always bring unusually high re-sale prices.

For Jeffery owners are contented owners.

Doubled Production

Jeffery expansion, bringing doubled production this year, comes without sacrificing the Company's ideals of mechanical nicety.

With this greater output we hope to be able to fill the demand. Still, nothing can be gained by delay. Promptness alone, on your part, in placing your order with us will gain an early delivery for you.

We are ready now to show you the new Jeffery Six.

The Only Motor That Improves With Use

The Willys-Knight motor appeals to every true economist.

It is the only motor in the world that improves with use.

The longer it runs, the smoother, sweeter and more powerful it becomes.

All motors are more or less good for the first three or four thousand miles. Then the wear, tear and friction start their deadly work and gradually eat their lives away.

But the sliding sleeves of the Willys-Knight Motor get smoother and smoother and smoother. Each 1000 miles you run add to its economy and efficiency.

No Willys-Knight Motor has ever worn out.

No carbon troubles, no pounding and banging, practically no gear shifting. Just a gentle operation that's as smooth as silk and as soft.

No valve grinding. Carbon makes it run the smoother—the only motor in the world that makes an advantage of carbon.

The Knight Motor is the power plant preferred by Kings, Queens and royalty of Europe. They all use it.

And now you can have the same thing—at a popular price.

No other car in the entire history of the automobile business ever attracted such international attention. No other new car in the same price class ever sold so rapidly.

Stop in and have a look at the Willys-Knight motor. Drive it yourself and feel its wonderful power, pep and flexibility.

Once you own a Willys-Knight motored car, you'll never be content to drive anything else.

Come in and see it at once.

ANOTHER ROAD TO BIG BEAR.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BIG BEAR VALLEY, Aug. 15.—A new road into Big Bear Valley was opened today when the county road building forces completed the work on connecting the Clark Hill road with the Barton Flats road. The connecting link was through Snyder Creek Canyon, through the upper Santa Ana Canyon and to the Clark road just below the ranch-house.

This new road materially shortens the distance into Big Bear Valley. Stage drivers were the first to make the trip over it and they say that it is in good shape although the county forces will be kept at work for several weeks yet smoothing the road. There are no bad grades on the new road and it is fairly wide for a mountain highway.

Up until this time all automobile traffic into the valley has been over the Crest road or over the desert road.

One of the best ways of cleaning the reflectors of headlamps is to procure some jeweler's rouge or fine whiting and apply it to the surface with a soft, moistened cloth. Having cleaned the dirt and other foreign matter off, rub the surface dry with another soft cloth, obtaining as high a polish as you can.

TAYLOR TO STUDY MOTOR [illegible]

Cecil Hamelin Taylor, [illegible] engineer on the staff of the [illegible] Motor Truck Company and [illegible] the Curtiss Aeroplane Com[illegible] leaves this week for England [illegible] France.

The war has developed [illegible] twenty years in as many months [illegible] Mr. Taylor, with his wide [illegible] and knowledge of motor [illegible] ments along both automobile [illegible] aeroplane lines, should return [illegible] much valuable data for Am[illegible] manufacturers of aeroplanes.

Explaining the headlight situation.

Lieut. Butler, head of the traffic squad, demonstrating the exact angle at which headlights should [illegible] comply with the law. Forrest Arnold, sales manager of the Pacific KisselKar Branch, is holding [illegible] line on the top of the lamp, showing the angle necessary to do away with glaring lights. The [illegible] Kissell "Hundred Point Six" proved to be set at exactly the right angle.

BIG INDORSEMENT FOR RACINE TIRES.

Another strong indorsement for Racine tires was brought to the Osler Racine Rubber Company last week, when Mr. J. G. Hunchberger, Glendale agent for the Buick, returned from an outing trip to the Yosemite, which covered about 1500 miles, aand took one month, of contact with the road, in many instances increases the pressure to the which three weeks were spent in the park itself.

Going in by way of Fresno and the Wawona road, the party returned by the Tioga Pass road, via Mona Lake and Bishop, and report the roads in fine condition, with the exception of about forty miles, which lay through a deep volcano ash which is exceptionally bad on tires, as twenty-five miles of this stretch is absolutely low-gear work.

Park regulations require an equipment of two extra tires, but in this case, the extra tires were never unstrapped from the rear of the car, as the four Racines made the entire trip with the original air in them, and during the month only about five pounds additional were put in them.

JUST GAS.

BY W. W. FOWLER.

WITH the limelight beginning to point around in its direction, the racing situation in Southern California looks interesting. Seven entries have already been received for both the Vanderbilt cup and international grand prize races. Earl Cooper signed one of the official entry blanks last week and signified his intention of driving a Stutz to victory.

Barney Oldfield is credited with being the initial entry. Oldfield handed in his entry a couple of weeks ago, but failed to state his mount. The entries to date for each event include:

Car not named……Barney Oldfield
Mercer…………Driver not named
Mercer…………Driver not named
Mercer……………Eddie Pullen
Mercer……………Joe Thomas
Mercer…………Guy Ruckstell
Stutz………………Earl Cooper

The entry of Earl Cooper has started the well-known dopesters going full tilt. Racing fans who know the diminutive Stutz pilot claim that he is the most consistent driver in the speed game today. Beginning with the 1912 Santa Monica road race Cooper has nailed up a long string of heady, well-driven victories and his consistency has alway been credited for his tremendous success.

There are several cars in town now which are being overhauled in preparation for the big races. The Tahis car is simply a number of lose parts. It has been torn down until it has lost all the characteristics of an automobile. But Mr. Robinson predicts that the rebuilt machine will be a contender in the Santa Monica races.

Most of the race drivers are in the East and will not be out here for weeks. But they are already beginning to wonder who will be the racing hero of the day after the Ascot Speedway events and the Santa Monica classics are pulled off.

George Bentel has just returned from a trip through the East. Besides visiting the [illegible] Mr. Bentel paid particular [illegible] to the racing situation. All of the drivers are [illegible]ning to enter the Southern C[illegible]nia events. In fact, they [illegible] whether they want to or not. Forrest Arnold, Kissel[illegible] manager, knows that the [illegible] officers of this city are [illegible] the job. Arnold was traveling at a good snappy gait the [illegible] when he happened to [illegible] a couple of the above [illegible]. Another promising [illegible] man has bidden farewell [illegible] days. Walter Lord, son of [illegible] Lord and brother of Harry [illegible] of the Lord Motor Car [illegible] Maxwell distributors, left [illegible] for Chicago where he will [illegible]ried on September 1 to [illegible] Davis of La Grange, Ill.

"I always thought I [illegible] Fiat from a Ford," said [illegible] Shephard of Carlton-[illegible] Bowles, Inc., yesterday, "but [illegible] sure any longer. A man came [illegible] sales room several weeks [illegible] seemed very interested in [illegible] machine. We gave him [illegible] illustrations, etc.

"A few days ago I noticed [illegible] appeared to be a baby Fiat [illegible] up the street and I began [illegible] who it belonged to. As I [illegible] nearer, however, I discovered [illegible] someone had constructed [illegible] exact duplicate of a Fiat [illegible] a Ford chassis. The interested prospect had come pretty [illegible] ping something over.

"It was a good imitation in [illegible] respects, but one look at the [illegible] springs and the game's up," concluded Shephard.

W. E. Lanphier has a [illegible] offer for the shortage of [illegible] present time. The Jeffery Six.

DISTINCTIVE LINES ATTRACT ATTENTION.

PLANS for the greatly-increased production of Jeffery pleasure cars and trucks are rapidly being undertaken at the factory, and with C. W. Nash, the new president of the company, already on the job, they will go forward in a speedy manner. An active selling campaign throughout the country is under way and bids fair to place the Jeffery in the ranks of the largest producing factories of the United States before another season.

EXCELLENT START.

The new representatives of the Jeffery for Southern California and Arizona, the Hartwell Motor Company, in their first two weeks of business, have gotten away to a good start in the local campaign. The first car of the new sixes was sent to Los Angeles, and so great has been the call for a view of this machine that it has been found necessary to leave it on the salesroom floor. Demonstrations will not be made until the arrival of the first shipment of cars for delivery, when the car now being used for showroom purposes will be placed in the demonstrating service.

The distinctive appearance and handsome lines of the new car won it many friends immediately. And the fact that Mr. Nash had taken over the affairs of the company added new prestige to the well-known line.

From the moment of his entrance into the automobile industry Mr. Nash has enjoyed a success almost phenomenal. When his resignation as president of the General Motors Company was accepted it was announced that the year's business for that company had totaled $135,000,000 and that the total net earnings were $26,000,000.

AN EXPERT.

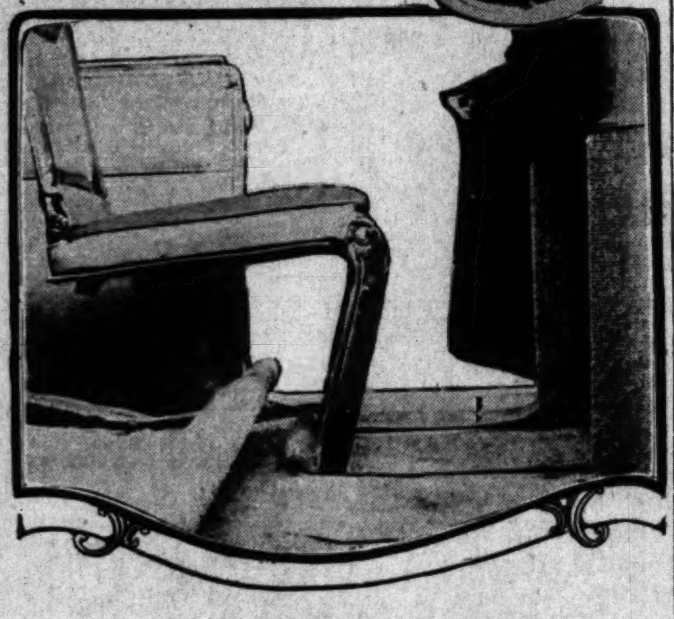
Mr. Nash is an expert on production and he will bring the Jeffery production up as rapidly as is consistent with quality. And that quality will be improved wherever possible. Mr. Nash will give personal attention to the details of manufacturing and marketing the Jeffery, and his experience in the motor-car world makes him the man best fitted for this position.

Already the magnetic force of his presence at the helm has been felt in the building and marketing of the new Jeffery six. While not in active charge of the company until the first of August he had no small voice in the design and construction of the new Jeffery, and his skill and handicraft are shown in the excellent lines, the fine construction features, the motor and the beautiful appearance of the new car.

One of the features, according to Manager Hartwell of the local organization, which has attracted the crowds to watch the new Jeffery, is the distinctly new lines of the body. Everything possible has been done to decrease wind resistance, to add to the appearance of speed and to decrease the places where dust or dirt might lodge. The result is a body on which there are no square corners. Every line and joint carries out this plan, gently rounding out instead of breaking in sharp angles.

RIDING COMFORT.

Another feature of the new car which has received the utmost attention is the riding comfort of the passengers. In the construction of the seats, the appointments of the tonneau, the upholstering, the generous size of both tonneau and driver's compartment, this aim has been kept in view, and the result has been a car that holds the road and gives the passengers exceptional riding comfort at all speeds.



Look! The new Jeffery.

One of the most sensational 1917 models. The beautiful lines and many new features on this machine make it one of the most interesting on the row.

But not only in the spring suspension, upholstering and leg-room has this been carried out. The switches, shifting and brake levers have been placed in such a position as to afford the most ease in driving the car.

In carrying out the plans for a perfectly-balanced and comfortable car much attention was given the proper relation of sprung and unsprung weight and the center of gravity. In working out this feature in the proper manner the motor has been hung low in the frame to help drop the weight-center of the car, and much experimenting was done to provide the proper relation of weight below and that above the springs.

The new body lines also have lowered the line of vision of the car about seven and a half inches without reducing the road clearance, and this has had much to do with the improvement in the appearance of the car.

FORMER COACH HERE.

W. E. Day, president of the Intermountain Association of the A.A.U., and one of the best track and field coaches in the country, arrived in Los Angeles from Salt Lake yesterday while on his way to San Diego to boots the Far Western track meet. Mr. Day is well known to many of the local sportsmen as a coach and booster for athletics. He was formerly the coach of Otto Fritsch, commissioner of the Far Western meet.

SUN LIGHT SIX MAKES BIG HIT.

"The new Sun light six four-passenger roadster has been pronounced by all who have seen it as representative of the highest art of the body builder," declare Sundberg & Foot, No. 1018 South Los Angeles street, distributors for the Sun light six in this territory.

"The long sweeping lines, the double cowl, the pleasing curves of the rear deck—all blend harmoniously and unconsciously impress you with the superlative beauty of the car.

"The front seats are divided—the passageway generous. The rear seat is built for two and there's plenty of leg room. The seats are deep and luxurious—Turkish rocker springs are used. The backs are high and form fitting, giving that restful comfort which augments the pleasures of motoring.

RACINE HORSE SHOE

THE THOROUGHBRED

TIRE

The Tire That Has Made Good Right From the Start

During the past seven months that the Racine Horse Shoe Tire has been on the market in Southern California not one has been returned to us for adjustment. This is a record without parallel.

Even though the Racine Horse Shoe sells for considerably less than other tires of comparatively the same high quality, it is guaranteed for 5000 miles.

Note the unique tread. The anti-skid horse shoe cups are sunk into the tread—not elevated. When the cups eventually wear smooth there remains a thickness equal to a plain-tread tire.

The High-Gear Performer on America's Hardest Hills

Boston—Corey Hill on high, 27 miles an hour at the top.

Cincinnati—Clifton Hill on high, 30 miles an hour at the top.

Kansas City—Hospital Hill on high, 38 miles an hour at the top.

Denver—Lookout Mountain, on high all the way, reaching 7,800 feet elevation.

IF YOU are looking for high-gear hill-climbing to prove power and performance—here are specific Hupmobile instances.

Dealers report them from demonstrations.

If they sound extraordinary, permit us to remind you that to Hupmobile owners they will merely confirm their own every-day experiences.

Hills that are Play for the Hupmobile

Boston motorists regard the Beacon street side of Corey Hill as their worst climb. Few cars, even with a running start, hold high gear to the top.

C. E. Jeffery, Jr., says his favorite demonstration is to come down the hill, turn at the bottom, and at this slow speed start back on high. The car is usually traveling 27 miles an hour when it tops the rise.

Hills encircle Cincinnati, and Clifton Avenue is one of the longest.

In demonstrating, Fred T. Larson drives the Hupmobile half way up at 30 miles; cuts the speed to 15 miles; and picks up again to 30 miles, finishing at that gait—without shifting gears.

Ten leading cars sold in Kansas City do not take Hospital Hill on high. The Hupmobile does; and W. G. Howard, the dealer there, says a hurricane must be blowing against the car any time it fails to clear the top at 38 miles an hour.

Omaha reports a brick paved test hill, 20 per cent rise, a block long. The Hupmobile, carrying five passengers and registering seven miles an hour at the bottom, skims it on high gear.

Thousands of tourists know how the Lookout Mountain trip in Colorado tests the high-gear power and the cooling efficiency of motor cars.

The Mark of Superior Motor Car Service

High Gear All the Way on Lookout Mountain

The Denver dealer regularly makes this trip—to Idaho Springs and return—without shifting gears or taking on water. The climb is 2300 feet; the greatest elevation 7800 feet.

Think what this means, when each 1,000-foot rise robs an automobile motor of about 3½ per cent of its efficiency.

Is there any reason why Hupmobile owners should envy the performance of other types?

11,000 Owners Rate Efficiency at 99%

In other directions—pick-up, flexibility, smoothness and steadiness of the motor action—Hupmobile performance is equally good.

Eleven thousand owners give the car an efficiency rating of 99 per cent.

You begin to see now why 50 8/10 per cent of Hupmobile owners will have no other car. Why 24 2/10 of our owners come from the ranks of those who have owned costlier cars and cars with more cylinders.

They prefer the Hupmobile, because it does all they expect of a car; and because the Hupmobile coupon service system has shown them the value, in dollars and cents, of expert, definite service.

This system assures them—without a penny of cost—skilled care for their cars each month and eight monthly inspections of every unit of their cars. They pay with coupons supplied free of cost.

Call on us for a performance test as severe as you like.

MOUNTAINS PRIVE NO DRAWBACK.

Based on the new transcontinental record of the Marmon "34," which is a record for all cars at the same time, there is no further terror in the Rocky Mountains viewed from a military standpoint.

The Marmon record tour, five days, eighteen hours and thirty minutes from New York to San Francisco, was operated on exact schedule. The Rockies offered no handicap. The trip, which was made under the auspices of the American Defense Society, pleased the officers of the society in that it indicated a certainty in military movement.

The Marmon "34," equipped with Lynite aluminum parts, was taken from regular production and sent through without a jarring note of its engines.

LITTLE WATER IS NEEDED ON TRIP.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Early of Blackfoot, Idaho, recently completed a record trip from Blackfoot, Idaho, through the Yellowstone Park in an Overland roadster. The pair left Blackfoot at 6 a.m. on Thursday morning, July 13, went into the park on Friday morning at 7 a.m., made all the schedules as set by the government, registering at the Lake Hotel for dinner and for the night. Saturday was spent sightseeing and traveling over the famous Dunraven Pass, where they reached an altitude of 9000 feet. The little car made the long climb with ease. On this trip the car passed through huge snowbanks. The return to Blackfoot was completed on Monday night. During the entire trip of 490 miles not even a quart of water was put into the radiator.

Mitchell NEW SERIES $1440 F. O. B. Los Angeles

Don't Throw Away 26 Extras

John W. Bate, the efficiency engineer, has created for us a model motor car plant.

It covers 45 acres. The buildings are new, all designed by Mr. Bate. They are equipped with 2092 up-to-date machines.

In the past six years, by investing $5,000,000, he has cut our factory costs in two.

Now 98 per cent. of this New Series Mitchell is built in this model plant. It is built for much less than other factories could build it.

Get the Results

Part of the saving shows in the Mitchell price. No other car of this size, power and grade sells so low as this does.

Part of the saving pays for 26 extras, which other cars omit.

See these extras at your Mitchell showroom. Judge what they mean to you. Note how you would miss them.

All of them are wanted. But all are costly. And factories less efficient cannot afford to include them.

73 New Conceptions

In this new series Mitchell you will also find 73 new ideas. Each means added beauty, comfort or convenience.

We completed this model after the New York Shows. There our experts inspected 257 new designs, including all the latest creations from Europe and America.

All the best of these new styles are combined in this one car. So in this you will see the most complete car on exhibit.

The body design was voted the handsomest which appeared on any touring car. It is so striking—so impressive—that wherever it goes people stop to admire it.

Exclusive Values

This new series Mitchell is the only car with Bate cantilever springs. This makes it—as your dealer will prove—the easiest riding car in the world.

It is the only car in its class with oversize, ball-bearing steering parts. That makes it by far the easiest car to drive.

It holds, we believe, the endurance records. Six Mitchell cars have averaged 164,372 miles each. That's more than 30 years of ordinary service.

It is the only car with 440 drop forgings and steel stampings—tough and light—in place of heavy, brittle castings.

And it is the car which engineers select. Your dealer has a list of 37 noted engineers—men who stand at the top—who have selected the Mitchell for their personal car.

Every man who keeps up on motor cars should inspect this new series Mitchell.

Some new features in the traffic situation.

Just outside the congested districts in Los Angeles motorists have been noticing little white [illegible] street intersections. These discs were placed last week by the traffic department and are [illegible] order to stop corner-cutting. The Saxon Six (above) ran around the wrong side of one of these [illegible] other day and had the matter carefully explained by an officer waiting on the other corner. [illegible] hundred have been placed already and over a hundred more are wanted to complete the [illegible] traffic controlling device (below) is being tried at Third and Broadway. The whole [illegible] operated from one corner and an automatic device raises and lowers the signals. Whether [illegible] is practical or not is yet to be determined.

A BIG FEATURE.

One of the features which added immeasurably to the success of the Lake Huron convention tour of the Society of Automobile Engineers on the steamship Noronic, recently, was the newspaper which appeared each morning. News of the outside world was furnished through the wireless station of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company at Detroit.

HILL CLIMB MAY BE TRIED AGAIN.

MOTOR DEALERS FAVOR PLAN FOR MOUNTAIN RACE.

Road to Forest Home is One of the Safest Mountain Roads in the South and Would be a Perfect Course for a Hill-climbing Contest.

Los Angeles dealers have met with favor the announcement that the famous Forest Home hill climb probably would be revived this fall. There is every prospect that the affair will be staged during the fall months, either in October, or just following the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize in November.

One feature which the dealers favor is that the race be limited to stock cars, with all special racing machines barred. This would make it a test of the models actually placed on the market. The Forest Home course is the best to be found anywhere in Southern California, for while there are other grades which are steeper, they are unusually dangerous, and would offer too many chances for serious accident.

On the drive to Forest Home, however, there are no places where the drivers would be in any greater danger than on an ordinary boulevard, and this factor will have much to do with inducing owners to enter their cars.

The first few miles of the course are over paved boulevard, and here the cars would be able to make their greatest speed, as the gradient is not heavy. This would give those cars capable of high speed a chance to show their ability.

After entering the canyon, however, the grade is a steady 10 per cent. climb to the home, which nestles high among the pines in Mill Creek Canyon.

AMONG THE FANS.

Joe Reyburn, who has been winning laurels at "chicken dinners," met his match recently in the form of a spider. The spider had evidently heard of Joe's eating capacity and, fearing for his safety, got in the first bite, which put Joe "hors de combat." After a severe illness of several days, Mr. Reyburn is again "on the job."

Harry Leiberman is back in Kansas City, after a several months' tour of the Atlantic Coast, from Florida to Northeast Canada. Here's hoping that when he starts his next tour he will include Los Angeles in his itinerary.

Alfred Jordan is spending the week in San Diego.

Ira G. Hoag started Wednesday on a sixty-day trip to the Eastern States. He will no doubt score many games with his famous "Shasta" opening during his travels.

W. J. Wood has contributed four problems, which will be published soon as prize problems. Mr. Wood has offered one of his new problem books for the best solutions.

GLIDE OWNERS BUY NEW CARS.

The new Glide Light Six, which was received last week by Mr. C. S. Anthony, Southern California distributor, has been very much in demand and several sales have resulted, which has made it necessarly for Mr. Anthony to telegraph orders to the factory to hurry additional shipments.

The majority of those who have shown this interest in the car have been previous owners of Glide cars, who were attracted by the announcement that the new models had arrived.

We have found, says Mr. Anthony, that the easiest sales we make are to previous Glide owners, and in almost every case, they come to us when they are ready for a new car, because their old car has given them such complete satisfaction.

One of the oldest cars built, and made by a factory that has been under the same management for years, the Glide has never come out with any striking or radical changes, but has rather shown a gradual development embodying all the refinments and improvements that have come up in the manufacture af automobiles.

Charles B. Durborow, the Philadelphia bank clerk distance swimmer, is ambitious to swim the English Channel. Only two swimmers have accomplished the feat. In 1875 Capt. M. S. Webb, after sixteen attempts, swam from Dover, Eng., to Cape Griz Nez, France, in twenty-two hours and thirty-five minutes, while in 1911 William T. Burgress swam from Dover to Calais, France, in twenty-one hours and forty-five minutes on his second attempt.

Motors in War.

use of it was to conserve gasoline and rubber tires.

FEW PERMITS.

Big commercial houses were allowed to use a few automobiles in Berlin for delivery purposes, and physicians were allowed to use automobiles to pay professional calls. If a doctor used his auto, however, to take his family out for a pleasure ride he was liable to arrest.

There were a few automobile taxicabs in Berlin. Their tires were in rags and they were all compelled by law to use benzol.

It may be remarked on the side that John D. Rockefeller needn't lose any sleep over the fear that benzol will displace gasoline. The Germans all used it, but they said it smelled badly and didn't develop anything like the power of gasoline.

HEAVY CARS.

The typical army motor car in Germany was a Benz or a Mercedes with a body made on a special design. The body was always painted field gray, and on the running-board in a rest were two army rifles for the chauffeur and an orderly.

The speed at which these things traveled was something fierce. A German officer of the staff once told me humorously that he considered his days at the front to be days of comparative safety. He said the real danger was riding around in army automobiles. The only way those army chauffeurs seemed to know to drive a car was to open the thing as wide as he could and step on her hard.

SOME DRIVER.

The wildest auto driver I ever saw was the Kaiser's youngest son, Prince Joachim of Prussia. He was a cavalry captain and, in Warsaw, was attached to the staff of a lieutenant-general. They used to bring a big Benz up to the hotel. His Highness would light a cigarette, jump in, open her up and disappear down the street like a runaway skyrocket. One day I saw him come within about half an inch of being killed by a trolley car. He looked up and grinned and shot the hop into the car and dove down through the traffic with a roar and an open muffler.

Around Warsaw, during that siege, there were all kinds of motor cars. We correspondents had set apart for our use a large automobile bus very much of the type of those which ran to Venice a few years ago, except that all the seats were inside—none on top. As I remember, it was a White.

IN THE SLUSH.

We drove around Warsaw for nearly two weeks over the most fearful roads, slipping around through mud a foot deep. As is usual with battlefields, it had been raining for weeks on end and it was more like motor boating than automobile driving. But only once did the old bus complain. That time it was only a fractious headlight.

All the ambulances that I saw in operation around the front were motor-drawn. In our army they are still using mules, a ridiculously inadequate means of moving wounded. We saw a great number of army wagons drawn by little Polish horses, but we also saw a lot of commissary wagons that were drawn by motor.

I well remember the day before Novo Georgievsk seeing a long string of motors carrying ammunition to the front for the artillery. Trees and brush had been lashed to the sides of every motor. As the battery of wagons went to the front it looked, from a short distance, like an innocent grove of trees.

ARMORED CARS.

On the west front there were a lot of armored automobiles which were used largely against enemy cavalry scouting parties. It is considerable of a shock for a party of light cavalry armed with lances to turn into a road and have one of these little rolling forts come whirling into the midst of them spitting death out of protected machine guns.

The British used great flocks of motorcycles, not only for scouting parties but for messenger work. The Germans used these also, but I was surprised to see among the Germans so many old-fashioned bikes.

MOTORCYCLES.

In El Paso they have a company of infantrymen mounted on fast motorcycles, which are used mainly in connection with the military police for getting reinforcements quickly to the provost marshal. One night last month they stopped a serious street-car riot by sending men from Fort Bliss on these fast cars, one soldier driving and one riding in the little side car.

The officers on the border believe if we ever go into Mexico it will be an automobile-truck war. Horses have shown a surprising lack of endurance in this campaign. Infantry officers claim that their men on foot can march faster than the cavalry can ride. They are anxious to have the army provide itself with a sufficient number of army trucks to transport most of the infantry.

They contend that it would be quicker and more effective to transport men as far as possible by truck and then let them walk over bad places than to try to send them in on horseback. They are looking forward to the invention of a new type of truck designed especially for this work of carrying soldiers at great speed and over rough places.

Hans Wagner, shortstop of the Pittsburgh National League team, is unique in baseball in several ways. Besides being the only man who ever batted for .300 in seventeen successive years and never being a holdout, he has worked for only one man in his twenty seasons in major league baseball. He went to work for Barney Dreyfuss in Louisville in 1897 and he is still drawing his salary from the same owner in Pittsburgh.

APPEARANCE ON ROAD SELLS MOON ROADSTER.

THE sales of a Moon four-passenger club roadster was made this week under rather unusual circumstances, and was a distinct compliment to the beauty and lines of the car, as the sale was made because a woman had seen the car on the road, and liking its appearance so well, she decided she wanted one for her own use.

This incident happened when one of the salesmen of the Reilly Motor-car Company, local distributors for the Moon line, was demonstrating one of these cars on Wilshire boulevard, and he was signalled to stop by a passing automobile with the request from the lady driving it for some information as to what make of machine it was and other facts regarding it.

It seems that Mrs. Frank Payton had been attracted by the car as it was passing along the street, and had followed it for some time, and after stopping the car and securing this information, she asked to have one run to her home for a demonstration, which resulted, as stated above, in the sale of another one of these popular cars.

Mrs. Payton is having a special job of painting, and in addition to having wire wheels, she is to have a Victoria top on it, and has been promised delivery of this car by September 5.

Manager Reilly of this company, states that the demand for this Moon car, in both the 6-66 and the 6-43 models, has been very large, and in spite of the frequent shipments which have been received during the past month, it has been almost impossible to make deliveries, but several carloads coming as the result of a special order will make it possible for this company to make immediate deliveries on this car.

Hudson Character

"FOUNDED on the rock of 'Quality' rather than quantity; of 'satisfaction to owners' and 'economy of operation,' the Hudson Character remains paramount in the Super-Six.

"IN this model, with its patented motor, you find a pride of ownership rarely if ever before enjoyed.

"YOU will find beauty and luxury, in addition to a greater power per cubic inch of displacement than in any motor heretofore built. Truly, a strong statement.

"YOU will find a luxury of motion—due to lack of vibration—you never before have experienced; a motor which by every official test holds unquestioned supremacy.

"YOU will find extra reserve power that means a wonderful leveling of all grades; a flexibility and quick response full of satisfaction every time you drive.

"NO car heretofore built has matched the endurance tests to which the Super-Six has been subjected.

"IT would take five years of hard personal driving to equal the excessive pace and maximum strains successfully endured by the Super-Six in the world's records it has recently annexed.

"—It has every attribute you most prize in your ideal of a motor car. Prove it by road comparison.

"BUYING a fine car, you will certainly select the Hudson Super-Six."

Come and see it.

FAMOUS CHALMERS RIDING COMFORT

Chalmers comfort on the road is unsurpassed by any automobile manufactured. This is a strong claim and it is amply reinforced by the construction of the 1917 Chalmers 3400 r. p. m. trio—the seven and five-passenger and roadster.

The Chalmers 1917 is perfectly balanced at center. Front and rear weight exactly the same.

A strong flexible steel frame combines the essential features of reliability and resiliency.

Long, flat springs of sturdy steel eliminate all rebound, returning gracefully to normal position.

Seats that are moulded to the most reposeful position of the body feature the 1917 models.

In the 3400 r. p. m. motor the Chalmers people have found the happy medium that yields high speed without vibration at one and the same time. Think of it! A power plant without vibration. It's true.

Long jaunts with the family—all day, all week, all month—find the 7-passenger, 1917 Chalmers still yielding the same delightful degree of restful traveling as the first thrill. It is generally agreed among all who know the Chalmers 1917 that aside from its scores of other foremost attributes its genuinely pleasurable riding qualities give it a unique position as the family car of the nation.

In interior finish, rich, deep upholstering, graceful lines, perfect workmanship and unsurpassed ease and control of operation, the Chalmers this year is the distinguished leader of its class.

INTERNATIONAL WANDERER ARRIVES AT MARSHFIELD.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MARSHFIELD (Or.) Aug. 19.—Good roads and an all-coast highway from Mexico to Canada received great stimulus here during the past two days, when Secretary Charles Heffer Linderman of the International Highways Association and Al G Waddell and Jack Griffin of the Maxwell trail blazing party were in conference with Coos Bay boulevard boosters. As a result of the Maxwell visit definite steps will be taken at once to float bond issues, survey the route and to generally organize.

IN CHARGE.

Manager Richardson of the Chamber of Commerce publicity department took charge of the Maxwellites on their arrival here. The famous no-stops car in which the party was riding was a center of attraction, for with it the tourists are proving that the ordinary standard made machine can make travel easy up and down the coast. The car has already run more than 35,000 miles, the first 22,022 miles being when it traveled for forty-four days without a stop of the motor. It is still going, and Coos Day residents vied with each other in riding around to near-by points of interest.

REAL WORK.

The real work of the Maxwell explorers will begin when they leave here. There is no definitely defined road following the Coast line from here north, and one must be blazed through forests and around deep rivers. Information gathered shows that for the most part the all-coast highway is entirely feasible, although it will take strenuous action on the part of both automobile and pilots to get through.

Al G. Waddell, who is gathering data which will be presented to defense advocates on conclusion of the trip to Vancouver, stimulated Chamber of Commerce members to a marked degree when he briefly outlined the history of good roads, and the beneficial results accruing to those communities which spent their money for real highways. California was cited as a leading instance.

"Coos county realizes fully the advantages to be had from a good highway system," declared Mr. Richardson at a meeting of boosters. "Naturally, we have not sufficient population to do things as pretentiously as more favored sections, but little by little we hope to work up to a network of roads that will make Coos county stand out as a leader. When the all-coast road is surveyed we will be on the direct line of travel north and south, and will be in a position to take care of our visitors in fitting manner."

Members of the Maxwell party report a most enjoyable trip from Tia Juana, Mex., to here. Not even a puncture marred the pleasure of the run, although in some places rough roads made the going rather slow. The old car used by the tourists has never seen the inside of a repair shop from the day it was first put on the road, last November, and it is running as smoothly as a new machine.

Prominent athletes will instruct public high school pupils of the San Francisco High Schools and interclass competition will also be added to the athletics of the boys' and girls' schools in an effort to promote their physical welfare.

HUDSONS COME THROUGH ON HILLS.

Few motoring events in America have caused more widespread comment than the battle between the great racing cars of America when they negotiated the Pikes Peak climb last week.

Harold L. Arnold, the distributor of Hudson motor cars in Southern California, last Monday received a telegram from Tom Botterill, the Hudson distributor of Denver. This telegram stated: "In the Pikes Peak climb for cars with piston displacement from 231 to 300 cubic inches, Mulford's Hudson was the first to reach the top, in 18 min. 24 sec. Patterson's Hudson was second in 22 min. 15 sec. Buzane's Duezenberg was third in 23 min. 48 sec.

"In Saturday's free-for-all, driven in a great storm, Lentz won in Romano Special with 175 horse power motor in 20 min. 55 sec. Mulford's Hudson, a stock super-six, was second, only 45 seconds behind his more powerful rival."

The Pikes Peak record made by the Hudson super-six will long stand unchallenged and will probably remain as the record for many years.

WEEK-END TOUR TO NIFTY LAKE.

ZACA LAKE OFFERS UNUSUAL AND VARIED ATTRACTIONS.

Charming Camping Grounds are Located in Pine Forest—Excellent Fishing and Canoeing Enjoyed by Motorists—Inaccessibility Makes Lake Interesting.

A new week-end tour of more than usual interest to Zaca Lake, [illegible] miles from Los Olivas in the Santa Barbara Mountains, has been discovered by L. G. Thompson of the Saxon Motor Sales Company.

Situated amidst a pine forest, Zaca Lake is one of the beauty spots of Southern California. Although it offers splendid fishing and canoeing, the lake is not a popular resort for motorists because it is so inaccessible.

The road to Zaca Lake from Los Olivas is fairly good for the most part, but the last two miles is a climb severe enough to call for all the reserve power in a motor car. A parking space is provided at the point where the real grade begins. A majority of the automobile parties leave their machines there, and go on to the lake either on horseback or by stage. Others, from necessity, drive their cars half way to the lake.

Thompson was warned not to attempt to drive the last two miles, but made the trip to the edge of the water. Then he discovered that his Saxon was the third car which had ever been able to negotiate the entire climb. Although it was necessary to make the last mile in low gear, Thompson reports that his little six did not overheat.

Re-discovering interesting spots in Southern California.

Many of the old land marks in the history of Southern California have been almost entirely forgotten. The widespread interest in touring during the last few weeks has led to the re-discovery of many of these land marks. Above are the ruins of Pio Pico's old oven in the San Fernando Valley. This oven was built by Pico when he came south from Santa Barbara to intercept the invading Fremont forces. The old [illegible] (below) near Pasadéna was constructed in the early days of California by padres from the San Gabriel mission.

Not to be outdone by counties of the Northern and Eastern States, Dallas county, Texas, is going to place road signs at every mile in Dallas county and also at every road. These signs will be on steel posts and will be of the very latest style.

A new phase of the safety first campaign which is being waged in Pittsburgh, Pa., was sprung when a number of delivery cars of downtown department stores and retail establishments appeared with large traffic banners on their sides.

CONWELL BACK ON AUTO ROW.

Former Dealer Opens up with a New Line.

Monroe Distributing Point is Located Here.

New Machine Creates Decided Interest on Row.

With the western agency for the Monroe line of roadster, touring car and light commercial, Councilman J. S. Conwell is back in the automobile game. Six States are included in this western territory and the distributing point for the entire section will be Los Angeles. Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Arizona and Idaho are to receive cars from the Conwell-Hathaway Company of this city.

Councilman Conwell, who has been out of the automobile business for a little over three years, is enthusiastic over the prospects for the new line of cars. For many years Conwell held the Maxwell agency in Los Angeles, but gave it up to enter the political arena. The dean of automobile row, as Mr. Conwell is often called, has a comprehensive grasp of the automobile situation in the West and especially the Pacific Coast. Mr. Conwell has been in the automobile game in Los Angeles ever since there was such a thing and is thoroughly experienced in every angle and turn of the motor car industry.

"It is certainly a great pleasure to get back on Auto Row," said Councilman Conwell yesterday. "Conditions have changed considerably in the last three years; cars have changed and the improvement in every line has been wonderful. But we think that in the Monroe line we have something which is even with the times in every respect. The machine is light, flexible and has all the power in the world.

"After getting the western agency for the Monroe," continued Conwell, "we immediately selected Los Angeles as the distributing point. Los Angeles is the great automobile center of the Pacific Coast and facilities for taking care of the six States in our territory are better here than anywhere else.

"And, as you know," concluded Councilman Conwell, "there's only one city in the West for me, and that's Los Angeles."

Mr. Hathaway of the Conwell-Hathaway Company is an experienced automobile man of Kansas City. Mr. Hathaway has established several western agencies for different machines and has been instrumental in selling more cars than any one man in the West.

B. B. Benjamin will make a tour of the Far West with William Hoppe, "Chick" Wright of San Francisco, Charles Peterson of St. Louis and Jake Schaefer. Mr. Benjamin has all four players under contract and plans to have 250-point balk-line billiard games with Hoppe always as one of the contestants and the others alternating against him. Peterson will give an exhibition of fancy shots, and Wright will give a thirty-minute lecture on the game, with Hoppe demonstrating.

FUEL TESTS ARE SENSATIONAL.

The result of fuel tests conducted at the Moreland Mojor Truck Company this week according to experts are practically certain to revolutionize transportation costs all over the world. Kerosene put through the Moreland gasifier and mixed by an automatic patented appliance with the correct amount of water, produced results that bordered on the sensational.

The new process will in no way affect the operation of Moreland trucks in California owing to their already established success and the abundance of distillate fuel. This low-grade fuel is peculiar only to this State, but in countries where gasoline costs are exorbitant and there is no distillate the Moreland trucks, with their adaptability and success of kerosene, will no doubt open new avenues of usefulness for the commercial car.

INFLATED TUBE TURNS BALLOON.

FIFTY POUNDS PRESSURE EXPANDS IT TO TRIPLE SIZE.

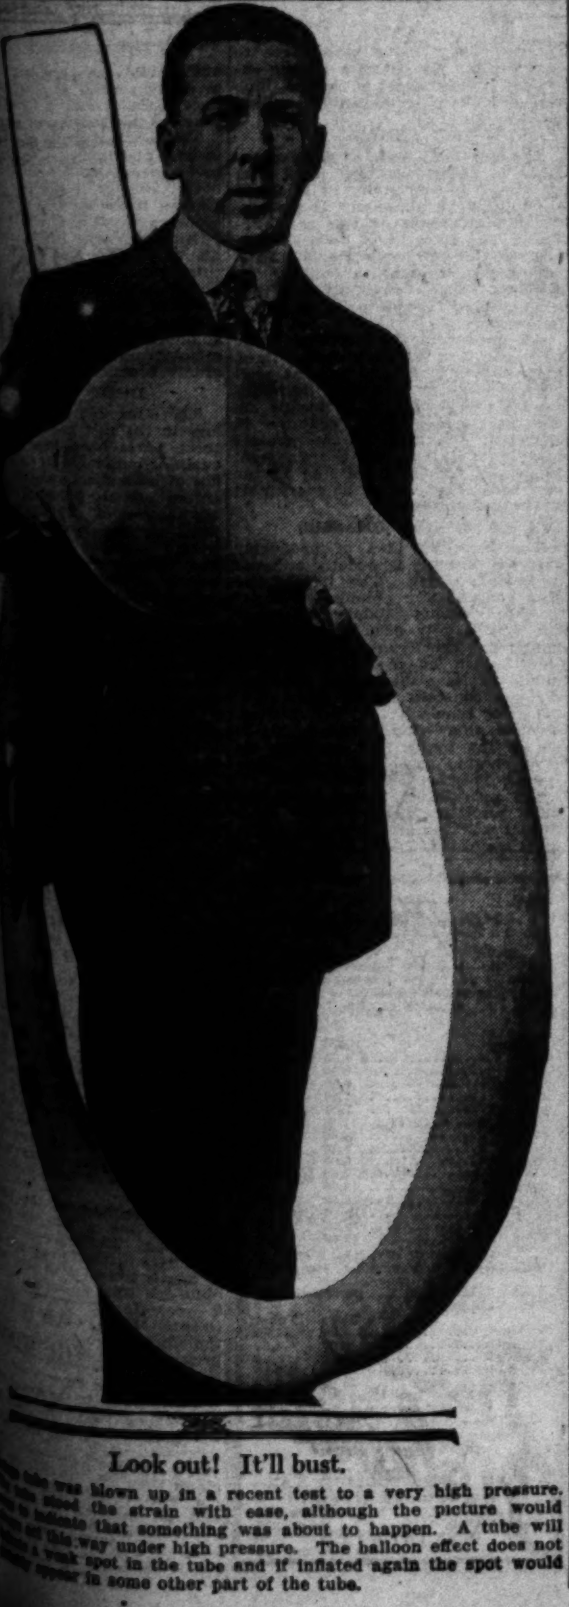
Air is Allowed to Remain Inside for Twenty Minutes and When Released Tube Returned to its Original Shape—Balloon Spot is Two Feet in Diameter.

A rather unusual test was made last week with a Portage tube, when John G. Boss of the Portage Rubber Company inflated one of these tubes to show its unusual strength and elasticity.

A tube was selected at random from stock, and between forty and fifty pounds of air was then put into it, with the result that the tire was expanded to several times its normal size. A peculiar feature about this was that the air seemed to accumulate in one place, bulging the tube out to nearly two feet in diameter. The air was then worked all around the tube, showing that the strength of the tube was the same in all its parts, and several pictures were taken, showing this tube in this freakish state.

After keeping the tube thus blown up for twenty minutes or more, the air was released and the tire went back immediately to its normal shape, and after being placed among other tubes it was impossible to tell which tube had thus been mistreated, as it went back to its exact original shape and size.

This test was the result of an argument as to whether or not a Portage tube was built strong enough to withstand this great air pressure, and if it did, whether or not it would go back to its normal size. The outcome resulted in Mr. Boss' having a fine dinner at the expense of one of his friends.



Look out! It'll bust.

[illegible] tube was blown up in a recent test to a very high pressure. [illegible] stood the strain with ease, although the picture would [illegible] to indicate that something was about to happen. A tube will [illegible] this way under high pressure. The balloon effect does not [illegible] a weak spot in the tube and if inflated again the spot would [illegible] appear in some other part of the tube.

Very Large League.

THREE LOCAL RACES MAY DECIDE CHAMPIONSHIP.

ASCOT SPEEDWAY of Los Angeles has received a distinct honor from the American Automobile Association. The first and only mile course to be so recognized, the speedway in this city, has been included in the list of foremost tracks which figure in the A.A.A. championship award events of 1916.

George R. Bentel, chairman of the Ascot Contest Committee, returned last week from a month in the East with the word of the honor conferred on Ascot in recognition of its importance in the speed sport. At a conference with Richard Kennerdell, chairman of the A.A.A. contest board in New York, Bentel was informed that the sweepstakes to be run at Ascot would be made a championship event, with possibly 700 points value in the final score.

DECIDING VALUE.

Thus the November racing in Southern California will have a deciding value in the award of the $13,500 cash prize to the speed kings, the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize at Santa Monica being worth 1900 points.

"I found the interest in the coming winter of racing here very keen in the East," said Bentel yesterday. "I carried east with me entry blanks for the Santa Monica classics, and I believe that more drivers will ship west than ever before.

"The Mercer factory is sending its three new racing cars with Eddie Pullen, G. E. Ruckstell and Joe Thomas as the drivers. Not only will these cars be seen at Santa Monica, but the Mercer factory considers the Ascot events of such importance that the entire team will remain here throughout the speed season. This is the first time that an eastern factory has given such recognition to California racing.

"In addition to the three new Mercers the famous No. 4, which still holds the world's road race record, and its companion, will be entered at Santa Monica and also at Ascot. The drivers of the latter two cars have not been named.

"I found the drivers deeply interested in Ascot, the drivers who competed there last spring having carried the word of square dealing East and all are anxious to come here for the winter season. More and more the making Los Angeles the headquarters for the teams in the eastern snowball season is gaining in favor.

"We will have some excellent racing here following the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize at Santa Monica. Eastern race officials and drivers alike declare that the coming races at Santa Monica will be the greatest road events ever run."

INCREASED PRODUCTION.

While in the East Bentel spent a week at the Mercer factory. While there he saw the preparations being made to increase the production 50 per cent. for 1917. That means, he says, that 1500 Mercers will be built instead of 1000 as this year.

"Following the same policy as has been adopted by many other of the more important factories, the Mercer company is decreasing the number of dealers throughout the United States," said Bentel. "The demand for the cars is so great that forty dealers can handle the entire output.

"By my contract for the coming year the Mercer factory agrees to put cars here on certain dates. That means that we will be able to make imediate deliveries at any time. This is an unusual condition for the Mercer because the entire 1916 output went practically at a premium and most purchasers had to wait for weeks for deliveries."

Tough Test.

MASTER CARBURETOR MAKES THE GRADE.

HILL CLIMB FAILS TO CAUSE ANY SERIOUS TROUBLE.

Contest is Staged in Driving Storm of Rain, Hail and Snow. Changes in Altitude and Temperature Offer Severest Kind of Carburetor Test.

The victory of Rae Lentz and his Romano racing car in the free-for-all at the Pike's Peak hill climb was a victory for the Master carburetor, Lentz wrote after the climb. The race proved one of the most severe tests of carburetion ever devised. The course of twelve and a half miles involved a climb of nearly 6000 feet, the entire distance being a steady pull upgrade from start to finish, and the weather conditions were not conducive to the best carburetion, as they were constantly changing with the change in altitude.

Much of the event was contested through a living storm of rain, hail and snow, with plenty of wind thrown in for good measure. The temperature changed rapidly as the cars ascended, and the carburetion difficulties of many cars not Master equipped caused them no end of trouble.

Lentz attributes much of his success to the Master. "I did not have to adjust my carburetor from start to finish," he said. "I had the carburetor adjusted so I was able to meet the varying conditions of altitude and weather with the air control on the dash, and at every mile of the course I was getting the proper mixture and the maximum speed from my car. As I topped the summit I had the air control not quite as far forward as it would permit, and could have climbed about 2000 feet more without adjustment."

TRUCK SOLVES A TOUGH PROBLEM.

FURNISHES SUPPLIES FOR TOWNS IN THE INTERIOR.

Quick and Efficient Transportation Insured by Speedy Motors. Vegetables and Other Perishable Goods are Brought in During the Morning with Little Trouble.

One of the problems in feeding the members of a desert mining camp is to secure good fresh fruits, vegetables and other perishables. Especially is this true in the summer, and in towns far removed from the main lines of railroads. But for the camps of Atolia and Randsburg it has been solved by A. D. Deitrich. He holds a contract with the stores of the two towns for the hauling of this class of freight from Mojave, on the main line of the railroad, to Randsburg and Atolia.

In order to provide the quickest and most efficient method of transportation, he determined on a light, fast truck. After careful investigation of the field he selected a three-quarter-ton G.M.C. truck with express body as best suited for this work. Now, instead of an all-day trip, with the fruit arriving at the camps late in the evening, it is shipped from Los Angeles one evening and arrives at the stores early the next morning, thus assuring that the consumers receive it in the best possible condition.

The day's picking of berries and fruit in this way is on the tables in the desert camp as soon as it is in Los Angeles. Another use to which the three-quarter-ton truck has been put is the delivery of tobacco for the Haas-Baruch Company.

AIRLESS TIRE IS ON EXHIBITION.

B. F. Wade of the Wade Tire and Rubber Company, California distributers for the Dayton pneumatic and airless tires, has arranged for an exhibit of these airless tires in connection with the Fire Chiefs convention, which is to be held the week of August 21 in San Diego at the Maryland Hotel.

This Dayton airless tire, which is made by the same people that make the Dayton pneumatic tire, is the standard equipment for the American-La France fire engines, and because of this connection, this tire is, of course, of general interest to the fire chiefs, and therefore Mr. Wade has planned this large exhibit for them.

How About This?

ARE OLD STARS THE BEST ONES?

What do Present-day Racing Drivers Lack?

Consistency vs. Reckless Dash in Racing.

Many Old-timers Dropped from Speeding Game.

"Do the automobile racing drivers of the present day equal or excel those of the earlier days of the sport?"

This question arose during a recent discussion of races and racing drivers, and was brought forth by a fan's statement that Tetzlaff's record of 78.72 miles per hour would surely be shattered during the running of the Vanderbilt Cup and Grand Prize classics at Santa Monica in November. It was finally agreed to leave the answer to Vincent McDermott, who is known to thousands of racing followers as "Ventura Mac," and who is recognized as an authority on racing matters in general because of his close association with the high speed game in the past twelve years.

HARD TO ANSWER.

"The question is one that is exceptionally hard to answer," said "Mac." "Of course, we all know that 99 per cent. of the 300-cubic-inch cars of today are faster than any of the free-for-all cars of five years ago, so all we can base our judgment on is the daring and the skill of the drivers themselves. To be utterly frank, I believe that I would trail along with the speed kings of yesterday. Many have quit racing to enter less strenuous lines of business and many have met death in races. With the exception of Oldfield and De Palma, there is not one driver left in active competition today who piloted racing cars ten years ago.

OUT OF IT.

"The three greatest European drivers, to my mind, were Lautenschlager, Boillot and Zuccarrelli, all of whom have been called to the great beyond. Lautenschlager was killed while fighting in the trenches for his beloved Germany; Boillot met death while flying over the enemy's lines in an aeroplane which carried the tricolor of his native France, and Zuccarrelli was crushed to death while practicing for the French Grand Prize on the Dieppe circuit in June, 1913. I had an opportunity to study the driving of Zuccarrelli and Boillot at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway in 1913, and it was just three weeks to a day after I had bade Zuccarrelli farewell in Indianapolis that he was killed in France.

"I know many will disagree with me, but my choice for an all-American team to compete against the foreign triumvirate—could such a meeting have been arranged—would have been Eddie Rickenbacher and those two beloved drivers who have passed away, Bob Burman and David Bruce-Brown. These three drivers were absolutely without fear—more on the order of the great foreign drivers than any other wheelmen. Bruce-Brown and Burman had their schooling on the dangerous road courses and the treacherous one-mile dirt tracks long before the comparatively safe speedways of today were built and before racing automobiles had reached their present stage of perfection, and their schools were the same as those of the foreign drivers whom I have named. The speedways today, especially the two-mile board tracks at Chicago and New York, are too wholly mechanical to be spectacular. The driver in the fastest car will win, barring accident, as all he has to do is to set his car in what is termed the "groove" and hold it there. The point I want to convey is that it takes little driving skill on those banked board speedways. Tracks like the Indianapolis oval and our own Ascot track require great driving skill.

RAH FOR 'EM.

"Taken all in all, man for man, I believe that I would put my faith on the stars of yesterday could they come back into the Mercurian competitions of today."

CROSS-COUNTRY RUN TESTS EVERYTHING.

Driving an automobile 3476 miles from New York to San Francisco and establishing a record of five days, eighteen hours and thirty minutes depends upon more than drivers, according to S. B. Stevens, chairman of the motor reserve division of the American Defense Society.

"I wondered at the marvelous tenacity of the Marmon '34,'" said Mr. Stevens, when he had ended the trip. "Near Salt Lake City, where the roads were awful, we went behind schedule. That meant extra tension. But the Marmon '34' walked through."

The Franklin from several angles.

The newest arrival of the 1917 season. This machine has been expected for several weeks and its arrival created a great deal of excitement. The new body lines are the important change but several refinements and added features make the machine a sensation. The emergency brake is on the left side. Perfect stream lines are used and the new hood is a wonder.

TOURING WEEK A BIG SUCCESS.

National touring week came and was a great success. Motorists all over the United States were curious to see just what this new celebration would be like. Many of them, out of mere curiosity, put off their vacations until that week so they might take them in their automobiles seeing America first. Everyone is satisfied that national touring week is a good institution, and as such will live.

"See America first by seeing your own State first" is a most fitting slogan for national touring week. It has already caused hundreds of motorists to look on the familiar scenes of their own States through new eyes. They never before realized the wealth of beautiful scenery waiting at their own "back door" to be discovered and enjoyed. The old idea, held by so many motorists, that one must go a long way from home in order to see beautiful scenes and enjoy a tour has been banished in the minds of those who either would or could not see the beauties of their own States.

Murphy has worked Directum I faster than 2:00 for a mile.

Here it is at Last.

NEW BODY LINES ARE FEATURE OF FRANKLIN.

FUNDAMENTAL principles upon which it is conceded that the greatest degree of efficiency in automobiles from any standpoint must be based are embodied in series nine, the new model of the Franklin car, the first shipment of which has been received by Ralph C. Hamlin. The car arrived Wednesday and every day since there has been an almost uninterrupted line of interested spectators to view the car.

It is doubtful if the arrival in Los Angeles of any automobile that did not represent a decided departure in mechanical construction ever attracted so much attention as the series nine Franklin. Among those to show the deepest interest in the car have been dealers and salesmen representing competing makes. They have been free to congratulate Mr. Hamlin on the excellent appearance of series nine and predict a remarkable selling season.

NO ANGLES.

The new body style of the car appeals to those who see it at first glance. The continuity of line and elimination of all angles is a striking characteristic of the car's design. The effect has been accomplished through refinements and a new hood, different in contour yet unchanged in the distinctiveness that has marked Franklin construction for years.

All improvements involved in the new car are along definite lines. They center in the paramount purpose of reducing weight while maintaining strength. This means an increased measure of economy in operation and maintenance, greater ease in operation and a refinement in details which is reflected in the new body lines as well as every part of the mechanism.

A SINGLE CHASSIS.

The Franklin idea of producing only one chassis is strictly adhered to in this series. The weight has been reduced 400 pounds compared to the previous model. The new car weighs only 2280 pounds fully equipped. The Franklin always has been known as the lightest automobile in its class and redesigning and the constant use of aluminum and alloy steels have made further advance along these lines. This is one of the many features that always creates comment from those passing judgment on the car.

The mechanical features of the series nine are probably the most distinct marking any American made automobile that has been [illegible] in many years. In the effort to reduce friction and weight, only [illegible] bearings are used.

The new engine is slightly [illegible] in bore and lighter. The gears had several pounds shaved off [illegible] both axles are lighter. The engineers have worked with a [illegible] scope in hand and wherever [illegible] possible to save even a fraction of an ounce in weight without sacrificing anything to strength, it has been done. More forgings and [illegible] castings are used and aluminum takes a bigger part than ever [illegible] spite the increase in cost of [illegible] metal from thirty cents a pound to ninety cents.

DROP FORGINGS.

There are 133 separate drop forgings in the new car. In many [illegible] these parts have been made previously of malleable iron castings. The use of both sheet and cast aluminum enters into 150 pieces. Typical of the abundance of aluminum are such units as the rear axle gear [illegible] engine base and oil pan, valve [illegible] and covers, gear case, carburetor body, mudguards, running [illegible] shields, body and hood.

Series nine will be offered in [illegible] larger assortment of body designs than ever made by the Franklin company. The five-passenger touring car will be the leader of the line, but seven other models will be offered, including both two and [illegible] passenger roadsters, brougham, sedan, limousine, town car and cabriolet. The inclosed cars will be distinguished by a V-shape glass [illegible] which will reduce wind resistance and afford driver and occupants [illegible] better view of the road.

NORTHERN HOME FOR CARBURETOR.

The Miller Carburetor [illegible] Corporation of Los Angeles has established an agency in San Francisco with the Miller Carburetor Sales Agency, consisting of A. S. Barhman, George Hill, Jeff Crofford and Stanley Davis. George Hill is remembered in Los Angeles as being an old racing driver and formerly mechanic for Barney Oldfield. Mr. Barhman is the manager of a large gas engine manufacturing company in San Francisco. The San Francisco territory embraces all of Northern California.

It is also announced that the New York and New Jersey territory has been given to Gaston Morris, Mr. Morris being an old time carburetor man, having been formerly located in Omaha with another well-known carburetor.

GOODYEAR TIRES SNATCH HONORS.

Goodyear Cord tires took first, third, fourth and fifth in the big northwestern auto racing event at Tacoma, Wash.—the [illegible] and golden potlatch 300-mile trophy race. Fourteen of the big racers of the country were starters in the speedway classic of the Pacific Coast —Rickenbacher, Henderson, [illegible], Moosey, Taft, Sorensen, Johnson, Lewis, Chandler, De Palma, [illegible], DeAlene, Oldfield and [illegible]. [illegible] these started the race on Goodyear Cord tires—and four finished in the money.

Rickenbacher, winner of the trophy, driving a Maxwell, Goodyear-equipped, completed the 300-mile run after a terrific grind of [illegible] of nearly ninety miles per hour, with only one stop for a tire change, a precautionary measure [illegible] tires on the fifty-fourth lap, although no punctures or blowouts had been experienced.

Jitneys must go in Dallas. This is the edict of city officials. The city has reached the point where either the jitney or the street railway company must stop business, because the street railway company claim they are losing money in Dallas. The jitney has cut the last six months' earnings of the street railway company more than $100,000, [illegible] being obtainable.

COBB TOO CLEVER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 19.—Cobb's clever work on the bases in the tenth inning turned today's game in Detroit's favor, 6 to 2. With two out in the tenth Cobb got a base on balls. He stole second by a great slide and then started for third drawing McElwee out of position. At the same time Veach hit the ball past the spot vacated by McElwee and Cobb scored. Detroit then hammered out two doubles and a single, which, with two errors, sent in four runs. Johnson and Coveleskie had a splendid battle for nine innings. The score:

Central control of municipally-owned motor vehicles by a division of the city government is under consideration in Milwaukee as a result of a survey made by the citizens' board of municipal efficiency, which finds that the use of motor cars for municipal work has grown so rapidly that its extent is hardly appreciated and heavy losses are resulting from the lack of co-ordination of activities.

BEES WALLOP TIGERS TWICE.

Johnny Kane's Homer Takes Second Contest.

Fittery's Pitching in the Pinches Wins.

Bunny Brief Lines Out Two More Homers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SALT LAKE, Aug. 19.—The Bees played like champions today and defeated the Tigers in both games of the double-header, 5 to 2 and 6 to 5. Fittery's great pitching in the pinches won the first game and little Johnny Kane, ex-Bengal, cloutedthe ball over the left-field fence in the ninth of the second to drive in the winning run. Since Dick Bayless, another former Vernonite, was on third with the needed run, the league averages next fall will give Johnyy credit for only a single.

Bunny Brief, the big Salt Lake first-sacker, hit two over the fence for real home runs and thus brought his season's record up of twenty-four, within six of the league mark established by Ping Bodie Art Griggs also hit one for four sacks in the first inning of the second game.

Singles by Griggs and Callahan and a stolen base gave Vernon a run in the seventh inning of the first game, and similar punches by Griggs, Mattick and Callahan gave it its other score.

Salt Lake's first three runs in the opening contest came in the shape of gifts. Two infield outs, an error each by Risberg, McGaffigan and Callahan and Quinlan's single did the business. Quinlan's double and Brief's single hung up the fourth, and Brief's first home run added the fifth.

The second exhibition was a giveaway affair for about five innings, when the two clubs finally settled down and played sensational ball. Blankenship again started Chester Hoff, the new southpaw, who had nothing with which to puzzle the opposition. With two down in the first frame Risberg singled and went to second when Quinlan booted. Griggs drove him in with a home-run drive over the left-field wall.

Salt Lake tied the score in its half of the first in exactly the same manner. Bayless got on with a double and Brief sent one over the wall to hang up two.

Two walks, a passed ball and Risberg's sacrifice fly meant another marker in the third, but it also saw the departure of Hoff. Hall pitched good ball for the balance of the afternoon, but his team-mates got him into trouble in the fourth. With one out, Downey booted McGaffigan's grounder. Mitze hit for three bases, scoring McGaffigan. Mitchell bunted to Hall. Bert fielded it nicely and had Mitze for an easy out. The ball slipped out of his hands as he started to throw and all hands were safe. Doubles by Shinn and Orr gave Salt Lake a run in the fourth and made the score 5 to 3 for Vernon, where it looked good to remain, as both Mitchell and Hall pitched gilt-edged ball.

The Kansas City Automobile Club, Kansas City, Mo., is spending $10,000 on its country clubhouse south of Kansas City; adding a story, providing a dance hall and other facilities, and will make it a country club equal to any in its accommodations. The installation of an electric light plant will give current for lights, and for small power uses.

ONE-MILE SWIMMING TITLE OF COUNTRY AT STAKE TODAY.

LUDY LANGER before the sun sets—in fact, probably before lunch—will have his third national swimming championship for the year all hung out on the family line. Today at 12 o'clock sharp the national one-mile swimming championship will be decided over a 220-yard course just off the beach at Ocean Park. Competing will be Ludy Langer, national 440 and 880-yard title-holder; Herbert Vollmer of the N.Y.A.C., 100 and 220-yard holder; Ted Cann of the N.Y.A.C., Norman Ross of the Olympic Club of San Francisco, Elliott Burns and Charley Shields of San Diego and a whole flock of other ambitious ones.

Langer is naturally the favorite for the race and should win without trouble. The main excitement will come over the other places, and there are many who think that Burns and Shields of San Diego will give the visiting wonders something to think about before the race is over.

BIFF'S HOME RUN WALLOPS OAKS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19.—"Biff" Schaller's home run with the bases full in the third frame of today's game with Oakland gave San Francisco a lead which the Oaks were unable to overcome, the Seals winning, 7 to 2. Three singles and an error had sent one Seal across the plate previous to Schaller's four base clout, which was his third in two days. San Francisco scored two unneeded tallies in the ninth. The Oaks bunched two hits in each of the fifth and eighth frames, making one run in each inning. Score:

SHANNON HAS BIG JOB NOW.

Eddie Shannon, Pacific Coast lightweight champion, will engage in the hardest battle of his career with Eddie Brewster at the Vernon Athletic Club next Tuesday night. Brewster is the greatest sensation ever started in the four round game here. He has a style of boxing that pleases the fans and a knock out punch with his right hand.

RUSSELL PUTS ONE OVER ON BROTHER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, Aug. 19.—Setting a new record for climbing Santiago Peak, the highest peak of the Santa Ana range, Russell Adkinson is crowing over his brother, Ray Adkinson, star athlete of Pomona College. Russell, who graduated from the Santa Ana High School in June, climbed the peak in one hour and fifty-six minutes. The best previous record was held by Ray. The "kid" brother cut thirteen minutes off of the athlete's record. The distance is six miles, much of it over a trail that was washed out last winter.

Too Bad.

ANGELS HAVE NOBODY HOME.

Use Care-free Methods when Running Bases.

Wherefore the Beavers Win a Ball Game.

Old Joe Gum has the Time of His Life.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

Aside from running bases like they were blind in one eye and couldn't see out of the other, and a peculiar inability to think on both sides at once, the Angels played a fair game of ball.

Out of the mess Portland dragged its first victory in ever so many days, 5 to 4.

It was a see-saw game with Portland doing most of the sawing, and the Angels unable even to see.

OFF IN LEAD.

Portland got away to a one-run lead in the first, only to have Beef Koerner bat two walks around for a couple of runs in the second half. Portland scored two in the fifth, Los Angeles tieing it in the same inning. But when the Beavers battled two more around in the eighth, the Angels couldn't stand the strain any longer, and never did ketch up again. They got one across and then just naturally petered out with two on bases. By the ninth Grover C. Lowdermilk was past the fermentation stage and did not allow a walk or a hit.

This was by far the poorest game that Lowdermilk has pitched since arriving on the Coast. But he lost the good ones, and won this one, which all goes to show that nature, if allowed to take her course, generally evens up matters, either in this life or the next. Time and again, and also repeatedly and frequently, the Angels were on the verge of a scoring celebration only to stampede and fall all over themselves as well as each other.

RIGHT THERE.

Old Joe Gum had the time of his life. He was here, there and everywhere, and managed to get into nearly every play. Joe covered more ground than he has in many a day.

Chance is deeply puzzled over the unnatural conduct of his men and is thinking of taking a gimlet and boring into their heads to see what is inside. He is curious to know if any of their heads contain corn-beef hash and, if so, how it got there. This is a condition which might be caused by overeating. However, as this is the first time they have acted this way, he will give them the benefit of the doubt and refrain from drilling into their knobs if they get busy and take both games today.

Charley Hall did not appear to be himself. Who he was could not be learned, but it is certain that he was not himself. In fact, he was so wild that he looked almost more like Lodwermilk than Lowdermilk does. This circumstance is regarded as one of the most peculiar in the history of baseball. In addition to passing six, he was swatted for ten hits, which is too many. He courted all kinds of trouble, and came near getting away with it, too.

Even though going back, the Angels went ahead at the same time and gained half a game. This strange spraddling feat was made possible by the double defeat sustained by their deadly rivals, the Hampats.

Gus Fisher suffered an injury to his valuable right leg in the eighth. Great Gus stole second, and the strain of stealing a base proved too much for his leg. The incident shows that one touch of nature makes the whole world akin. Teammates of Great Gus, who ordinarily would not lend him a chew of tobacco in view of the hard times, carried him to the clubhouse on their shoulders and didn't charge him anything for it. Skilled physicians immediately were summoned from the grandstand. They were agreed that Great Gus was painfully hurt, his actions plainly denoting physical anguish. Whether or not, however, the leg bone was cracked above the ankle was a matter on which they were in some doubt. They could neither feel nor see a crack, but had a haunting suspicion that a crack might be there. Consequently, Great Gus was removed to a hospital, which is a better place to search for cracks than a clubhouse. The bone in his leg will be submitted to an X-ray, and this is expected to clear up the mystery. The crack, in case it is there, will not necessarily prove fatal. It can be filled with putty, and the bone made to look as good as new. But crack or no crack, Fisher's ankle proper is badly twisted, and he probably will be out of the game a long time. Next time he will think twice before stealing a base. This probably means at least another week's work for Dad Meek. It is an crack in a guy's leg that also does not blow some good. Dad and all the little Meeks can now eat aagin.

Harl Maggert was unable to attend. Harl was at home tossing on a bed of pluriesy and for that reason was in no position to play center field. Joe Jackson, Jr., who has no bed of pluriesy on which to toss, got out and tossed the ball in from center field.

After Hall had whiffed Wilie in the first, scratch hits by Evans and Rodgers got him into trouble. He then passed two, forcing in a run. Hall slowed down Fisher's hot liner just enough for Butler to get it and make a double play. That is what is technically known as getting out of a hole.

Like Hall, Lowdermilk started his great performance by fanning somebody. His victim was Jackson. Satisfied with what he had accomplished, he eased up and walked two. Koerner sent 'em both across with a powerful double to right. Rounding second, Beef ran amuck, and before he could stop, was hounded to death on the line.

Murphy's error and doubles by Wilie and Evans in the fifth gave Portland two runs and the lead. In the same inning, Murphy's walk, a single to right by Ellis and Ward's failure to hold Nixon's throw-in let across the tieing run.

A walk and singles by oSuthworth, Fisher and Ward yielded two for Portland in the eighth. For the Angels, Koerner walked with one down in the eighth. Galloway's single, and another pass loaded the bases, Koerner scored on Murphy's out. Jack Ryan, batting for Butler, fouled his fair, young batting life away.

Portland tried to get messy in the ninth, and came near doing it. Lowdermilk singled off Hall's knee, driving the knee cap around on the back side of his leg. This made Charley's leg bend the wrong way when he walked, but he gamely continued standing on it. Wilie came within a foot of putting the ball in the right field bleachers. Lowdermilk thinking that it would be caught got only to second. Willie, thinking that it wouldn't be caught washed madly along to second. Looking up he was surprised to see Lowdermilk standing there. The latter broke for third, but too late, Murphy's relay of Wolter's throw already being in the massive hands of Galloway. It seemed certain that Jim would get one or both men, but he couldn't get the situation straight in his mind and both runners scurried back to their bases with Jim's massive hands still wrapped around the ball. Jim's actions showed that he was highly displeased with himself. He said he thought he could do better if they would le him try it over again. Evans hit into a double play, Lowdermilk taking third. Hall walked two, filling the sacks. Rather than go to the trouble of cleaning them, Guisto grounded to Butler. The score:

FISHER'S LEG IS FRACTURED.

An X-ray examination taken last night showed that Gus Fisher, Portland catcher, sustained a Potts fracture of the fibula, a bone located just above the ankle, in yesterday's game. Fisher was moved to his hotel after the leg had been placed in a cast. Dr. Clough, the Portland trainer, believes that Fisher will be out of the game for the remainder of the season.

Too Much Pep.

deep court was causing Kumagae a lot of trouble at that stage, and the Japanese was performing acrobatic stunts as he tried to make recoveries. In the end Kumagae's persistent steadiness gained the advantage, while Johnston, who seemed to be tiring, played badly in attempting to cut the ball off too short at the net, and the Tokio champion won the set, 9-7.

A BEGINNING.

Johnston made a good beginning in the third set. He was up at the net much of the time, crossing Kumagae's fast drives and keeping him on the run. He gained a lead of 5-2 on games and, although the Japanese rallied and carried the score to deuce at 5-all, Johnston forced the going in the next two games so that he had his opponent completely smothered. The set ended 7-5 in Johnston's favor.

The opening of the fourth found Johnston still working with good effect. He obtained a 3-to-1 lead and was encouraged by the applause of the crowd. Kumagae ran away with the next game in this set on Johnston's service, but the Californian managed to keep the upper hand in the struggle and outplayed the Tokio man for the rest of the set by variations of pace and profitable attacks on his back-hand side.

Johnston lost his service at the beginning of the fifth set by making the mistake of attempting to split the lines when he shot for the corners. Kumagae was exhibiting always the same cool, deliberate play while the American showed signs of weariness and took his time to get into position between the rallies. After Kumagae had captured the second game the Californian displayed more of his accustomed snap in the third and fourth, which he won. Kumagae took the fifth. Johnston brought the tally to deuce games and from then on the advantage alternated until the Japanese shut the American out completely in the fifteenth and ended the set and match by a victory in the sixteenth.

The Marion Cricket Club, near Philadelphia, where the amateur golf championship will be played starting September 4, has two courses which will be used for the qualifying round.

Shades Record.

he announced that he would be unable to go to Newark for the national championships this year and that he would retire from track athletics, except the few races that he would compete in for the University of Southern California next year.

Johnny Norton, who was forced to take third-place honors to Fred Murray and Meredith House at Stanford this last season, sprung into fame by setting a new world's record for the low hurdles on a curved track. Verle Murray of Whittier College had a good lead during the first part of the race, but a wonderful spurt by Norton after they had cleared the final hurdle gave him a slight lead. Norton's record of 24 1-5s. lowers the record made by Fred Kelly this last season by one-fifth of a second.

PADDOCK RUSHES.

Henry Williams, a slight built lad from the Spokane Athletic Club, sprung into fame in the 100-yard dash by passing up Howard Drew right at the tape and then winning the 220-yard dash from Charles Paddock of Pasadena in 21 4-5s. At the 100-yard mark Williams had a five-yard lead and looked an easy winner, but the speed and strength of Paddock brought him within a yard of the winner as they sprang for the tape.

Kirksey, the star Olympic Club sprinter, was another unfortunate athlete. In his heat he had an easy lead within five yards of the tape when a tendon in his leg gave way and he rolled over the tape and was carried from the field.

Ray Adkinson struck a snag in the half-mile in the person of C. A. Hoenisch of the Olympic Club of San Francisco, and was forced into second place.

Karl Nippo of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, the walker who holds all of the walking championships of Germany from the mile to the seventy-four-mile, added another win to his long string of victories by winning over George Foster of the same club in a close race. The time of 7m. 31 4-5s. was the best time made on the Coast for a long time.

RATHER BLUE.

Walt Sturges, the Pomona College miler, feels rather blue over being disqualified in the mile run. Walt was running in third place right up to the finish, but was disqualified for running off the track. Near the finish there was a post that signified the end of the sprints, and Walt, thinking that was the end of the mile, jogged off tc the side of the track. When he found his mistake, he got back onto the track and finished, but was disqualified.

The quarter-mile, as was expected, turned out to be a corker. This race saw the defeat of another champion, Frank Sloman, holder of the world's interscholastic championship. Karl Goeppert, a team-mate of Sloman, and another San Francisco high school lad, was the one to turn the trick. Goeppert finished with a two-yard lead.

The relay ended the day with another victory for the Pacific Association. Karl Goeppert started things by taking a three-yard lead over Tuffy Conn in the first lap, only to have "Pa" Gates come back and leave Carroll five yards in the rear at the end of the second lap. After that the Pacific Association team slowly increased their lead over Anderson and Beal, finishing five yards to the good.

Surprises were also in store in the field events. Chief among the events that turned out as they were not expected to was the pole vault. In this event Fred Watkins, the lanky Los Angeles club aviator, took the measure of F. W. Johnson of the Olympic club and Sam Bellah of the Multnomah club of Portland. The defeat of Bellah was a great surprise, as he is the national A.A.U. champion. Watkins hoisted himself over the bar at 12 ft., 4in., which was high enough to defeat the best man in the West. Watkins also won another medal by coming through with second place in high jump.

Following is the summary of events:

Reo —on the subject of —Service

WE REO FOLK DON'T PRATE of "service afterward" as volubly as some—in the ads.

REO SERVICE is the kind that, like true charity, needs no exploitation. It benefits him who gives more than he who receives. Besides, why should we promise that which, in honor, we owe to every buyer of Reo? 'Twere superfluous.

THAT WORD "SERVICE" is the biggest word in the language—and sorry to tell, the most misused and abused.

TO US REO FOLK it is not merely a catch phrase or a selling slogan. It is a very real thing—no less than a Reo promise—a sacred obligation assumed, even though not spoken.

REO SERVICE IS BUILT into the car—that's better than much service "afterward." That's why Reo owners need so little of the latter kind of service.

REO QUALITY IS SUCH TOO it costs us little to give the utmost that any owner, reasonable or unreasonable, can desire.

"WRITE YOUR OWN GUARANTEE, WE'LL SIGN IT"—we say to a buyer—for there's nothing you could want or ask us to do that we are not more anxious to do.

IT MEANS MORE TO US that your Reo—that every Reo car—gives the utmost of satisfaction, the superlative of motoring pleasure, than it can mean even to you, the owner.

AND OUR RECORD PROVES that we feel that way about it.

ASK ANY REO OWNER ABOUT REO SERVICE—he'll tell you more than we could, in reasonable modesty, say here.

YOU ALREADY KNOW that Reo quality of materials and workmanship, backed by the Reo Guarantee, constitutes the strongest combination known in the Automobile World.

BUT YOU MAY NOT KNOW what real service is. We sometimes suspect that that privilege is reserved for Reo owners alone. The purchase of a Reo of any model initiates you.

THERE ARE EIGHT Reo models now—shown at left.

REO THE FIFTH "the Incomparable Four" is now standard in three body types. The five passenger touring car—the most popular car in the world. More than 100,000 now in use.

THE THREE PASSENGER roadster on the same chassis, and the new all-weather body.

THE NEW REO SIX also in three forms and priced as shown.

THEN THERE'S THE TWO truck models—the 1500-pound Reo "Speed Wagon" and the marvelous 2-Ton Reo—a truck that habitually hauls twice its rated load and yet has proven the most economical in upkeep of any 2-Ton truck ever made. We have the figures to prove it.

AND REO SERVICE—Reo satisfaction—goes with each alike.

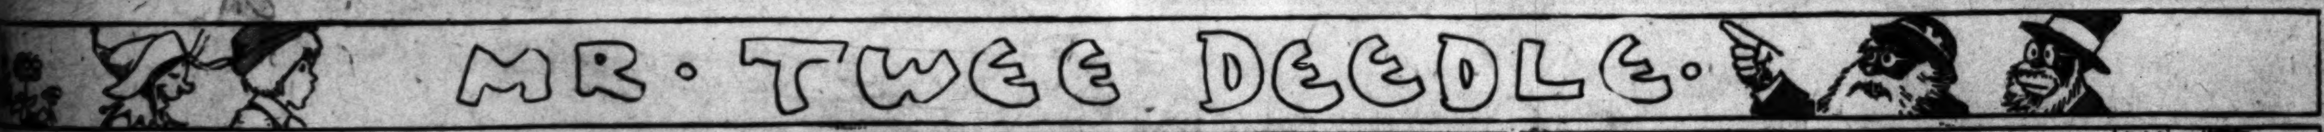
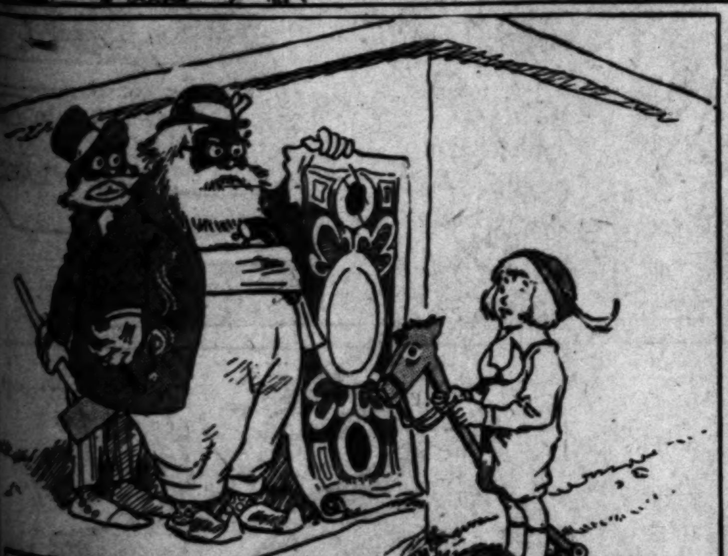
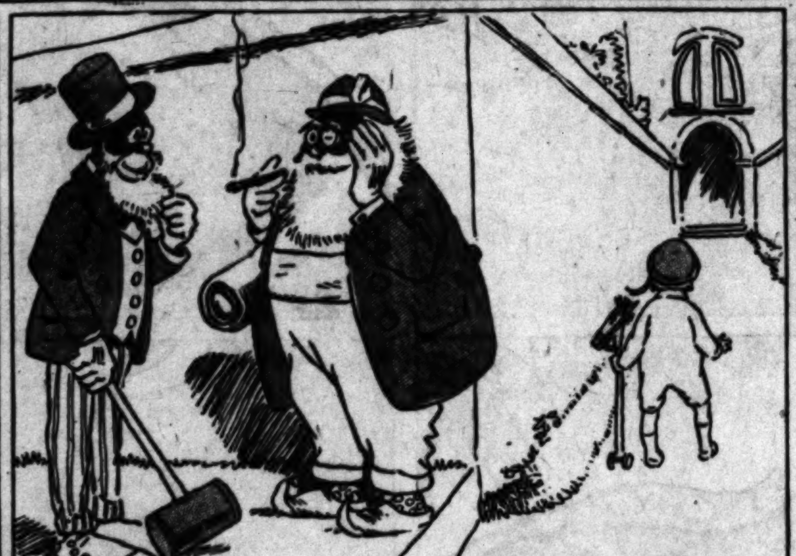
MR. TWEE DEEDLE

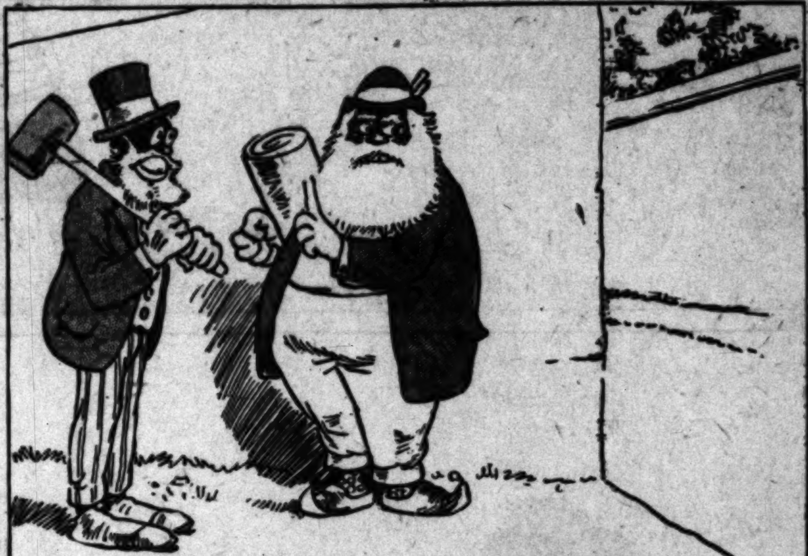




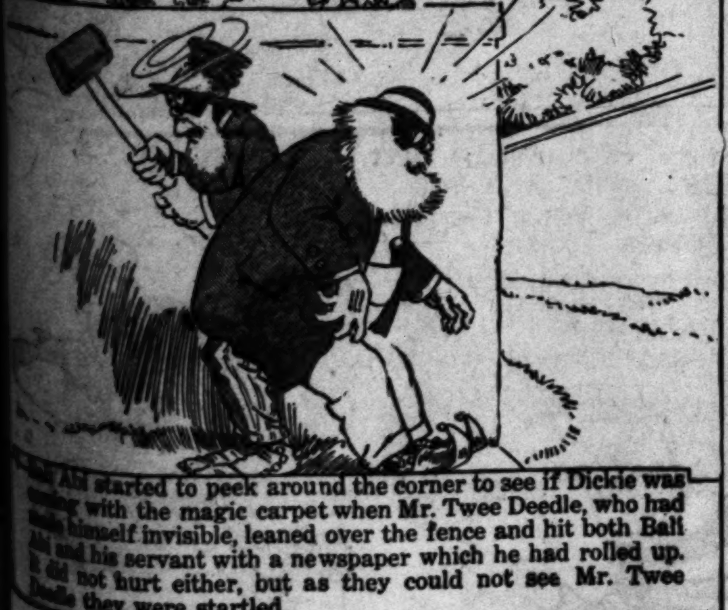
1—One day Dickie was playing out in front of the Princess' castle when two men walked up to him. They were Bali Abi and his servant disguised as merchants. "We give you new carpets for old ones," said Bali Abi. "I believe the Princess has an old magic carpet!" Dickie told them. "I'll go see if she would like to exchange it for your new one!"



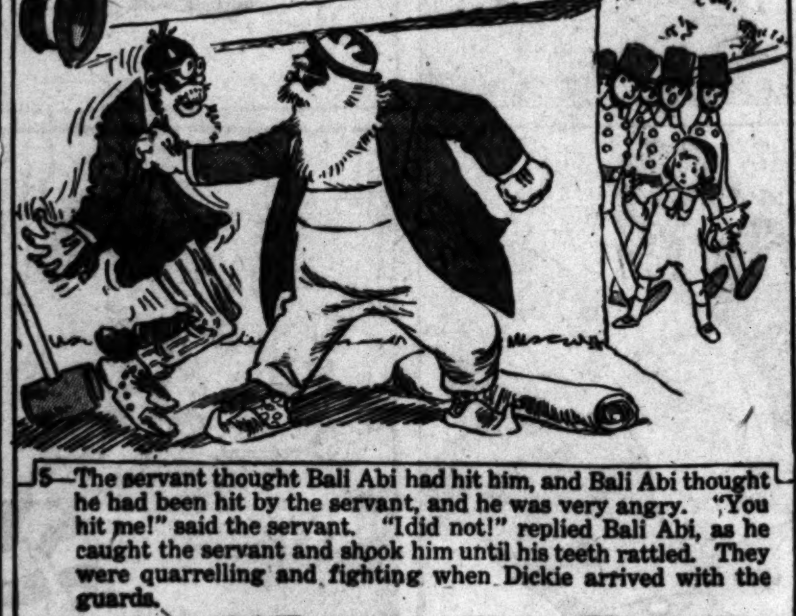
2—"This is easier than I thought it would be!" exclaimed Bali Abi, as he winked at his servant. "Now when we get the magic carpet we will fly into the castle and carry off the Princess again!"



3—"Now remember," said Bali Abi, "if that little Twee Wee, or whatever his name is, comes along and tries to give us another magic pill you must hit him with the rubber hammer!"



4—Bali Abi started to peek around the corner to see if Dickie was coming with the magic carpet when Mr. Twee Deedle, who had made himself invisible, leaned over the fence and hit both Bali Abi and his servant with a newspaper which he had rolled up. It did not hurt either, but as they could not see Mr. Twee Deedle they were startled.



5—The servant thought Bali Abi had hit him, and Bali Abi thought he had been hit by the servant, and he was very angry. "You hit me!" said the servant. "I did not!" replied Bali Abi, as he caught the servant and shook him until his teeth rattled. They were quarrelling and fighting when Dickie arrived with the guards.

6—The guards captured Bali Abi and his servant and put them in the stocks, so that all the people could see them. Both Bali Abi and his servant were crestfallen at their predicament, but could not help themselves. "You see," Mr. Twee Deedle said in his speech to the people, "how those who are always scheming to do some one else an injury usually end by doing the most harm to themselves." And Bali Abi agreed with him.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

CASH OR CREDIT ACCOUNTS?

"Anyhow, my husband feels we spend too much money on housekeeping."

"I WOULD like to have your personal opinion and that of the Corner on the matter of household accounts," writes L. J. M. "Perhaps I can show you better what I want by telling my dilemma.

"In my girlhood home I had little to do with the housekeeping, but I knew that my mother always had everything charged, that the bills were handed to my father and that he paid them once a month. He was in comfortable circumstances and I can't recollect any trouble about the plan. My mother looked over the bills when they came in and if there were mistakes she found them and had them straightened out.

"When I married, about two years ago, I took it for granted that I would follow the same plan. But perhaps I haven't as much sense about such things, for the scheme doesn't work well. For one thing we have less money to spend than my father and mother had and must be more careful about our expenses. Then I forget about the things I have bought and by the end of the month I can't recollect if it was three and a half pounds of sugar or seven pounds that I got three weeks earlier. Of course, I keep the slips the grocer sends home with the goods—I have a spindle to stick them on—but it is an awful business looking them over and comparing them with the regular bill and adding up the columns of figures and I am afraid I get a little careless about doing it.

"Anyhow, my husband feels we spend too much money on housekeeping. He isn't cross about it, but he just thinks we could keep house for less money if we paid cash, and while I want to do what he wishes I don't like paying cash. It is such a bother, especially when marketing by telephone, and so I am writing to ask you and those of the constituency who are older and more experienced housekeepers than I what you think about it all.

"Is it a saving to pay cash for all you buy? When you consider the trouble it means is it worth the fuss? Understand, I am willing to do it if it seems best, but what I want to be sure of is that I will really benefit by the change. What does the Corner say?

"I want to thank the friends who have sent me flower seeds and slips. My garden looks lovely now and I have named the bed planted with the flowers sent me my Helping Hand Corner."

I have printed this letter in full because I believe it describes a state of affairs which puzzles many housekeepers of small experience and some others who have let themselves drift into careless ways with their housekeeping accounts.

I have no hesitation in saying that the most expensive method of running housekeeping is by means of monthly bills. Every one who has tried it can echo the lament of L. J. M. over the trouble there is in recollecting just what has been bought weeks before, while the labor of comparing the purchase slips with the full bill and of adding up the items makes the first of the month, when the bills come in, a period of distress and worry. Both in effort and in cash the monthly account plan comes high.

On the other hand, I recognize the annoyance of paying cash for everything. The change is not always at hand; one is in a hurry and does not wish to stop when the purchases are footed up and change made; it is a convenience to stop and leave a hurried order or to send it by a child or a maid, or by telephone. I will come back to that question, of telephone marketing a little further on.

In nearly every condition in life you must make a choice as to what coin you will pay in. I have referred to this before in the matter of buying low priced cuts of meat. The finer pieces may be cooked simply and quickly; the cheaper pieces demand time and trouble and seasoning to render them palatable. The woman who has more of these commodities than she has of money buys the less costly meat and pays thought and consideration and work, instead of cash.

The case is the same with regard to household accounts. If you can afford to lose money, to expend more than is necessary upon the provisions for your table; if your time is worth more than the cash you lay out in this way, then keep up your monthly accounts. If, on the other hand, you desire to save the odd pennies and nickels and dimes and to have them in your pocket instead of in the till of your grocer or meat merchant, I advise you to settle outstanding bills and begin now to cut out monthly accounts.

If you are not convinced of the wisdom of the counsel, experiment a little. Take the sum in cash which equals the last payment of a monthly bill and put it by itself. Pay ready money for everything you get for the next month, taking pains to see that there is no unusual call upon your purse which will exceed the average cost of living. For example, this is the season of the year when you are putting up pickles, jams, and the like, and the cost of the fruit and sugar, etc., for these should be extracted from the monthly allowance for groceries, since you had nothing of the kind in the month with which you are making a comparison.

Then at the end of the month look over your cash and the faithful statement you should have set down of all your expenditures since you began running on a cash basis, and see if you are not better off financially than you would have been on the other plan. This does not take into consideration the cessation of the labor of comparing the purchase slips and the final bill and of adding up the figures of the grocer or the meat merchant. That cost you time and trouble, but did not make a pull upon your pocketbook.

Unless I am much mistaken, you will find that you have kept house for less in the month when you paid cash than you had heretofore done. I do not understand what the psychological reason is that makes it so much more difficult to pay out "hard cash" for any article than it does to have it charged and pay it with equal certainty at the end of the month, but the situation exists. When you have to open your purse and take out a bill and receive back for it a disappointingly small amount of change, it is easier to say "no" to a temptation than when you do not have to part with the actual money to pay for a purchase, but can put off the day of reckoning for a more or less definite period.

This is a matter upon which I would like the opinion of other housekeepers. Does their experience in this respect duplicate mine, or are they as economical with a charge account as they are when paying cash?

A compromise may be effected for the sake of those who find it peculiarly inconvenient for any reason to settle their bills daily. The weekly account is far less precarious than that kept by the month, since it is a poor memory which cannot keep track of purchases made five or six days back, and the work of comparing the statements for a week with the daily slips sent in is far less exacting than the monthly comparison. It is a simple matter to discover errors made in such bills and to have them rectified while your memory and the recollection of your provision merchant are still fresh. It is a protection to his honesty as well as to your purse, for even the bookkeeper inclined to make errors in his own favor will hesitate to do this in too barefaced a fashion when he knows that the accounts will all be examined at the end of the week and mistakes can be discovered and pointed out.

And this leads me back to the question of marketing by telephone. I have spoken on this matter before, but I do not feel I can let the occasion pass without uttering a protest against this method of purchasing household provisions. It has absolutely nothing to commend it except its convenience to the housekeeper. When she is not well, or when the weather is bad or when an occasion arises on which it is necessary to send a hurry call for some unforeseen item, the telephone may be permitted, but the woman who wishes to keep house economically and to buy to the best advantage should go to market herself and see what she is buying, watch meat cut off and groceries weighed, unless she possesses a paragon of a merchant whom she can trust absolutely—and such men are too rare for many housekeepers to be sure these miracles have come their way.

The woman who goes to market gains several advantages besides those of being sure of getting correct weight. For one thing, she can often find items she can buy to better profit than would be possible did she not see for herself what the market had to offer. She may go out with the idea that she will buy fresh peas and discover that these, which would have been sent to her in response to her order over the wire, are not up to the mark and that a wiser choice would be string beans or squash or young beets. She may learn that for some market reason a certain variety of fish is selling at bargain prices and is as good as the more expensive kind she would have bought over the telephone. Or poultry or eggs may be down and she may find it better to buy one of these than the article she had considered purchasing when planning her meals for the day.

More than this, she has a better variety in her bills of fare by going to market herself. She sees fresh fruits or vegetables or other items she had not thought of while she sat at home, and so is able to offer her household something different from the stereotyped menu all housekeepers are prone to drift into giving.

I have referred to the likelihood of getting better weight in meat if you see it cut off yourself. This does not mean that the butcher intentionally cheats you. But there is a fatally easy trick in his knife of cutting off half a pound more than you wish or need if you are not there to see it done. When you are on the alert you will get what you ask for, or you can refuse to take the piece that has been cut. You can see for yourself also that the meat, poultry, and fish are fresh, that the vegetables and fruit are not withered. You can pick out what you want, instead of leaving the choice to the haphazard selection of the merchant. He will give you what is left after the woman who goes to market for herself has made her choice of the best on the stand.

So go to market yourself and pay cash, or at the worst have a weekly bill. This is my opinion, as asked by L. J. M. What is the judgment of others of the constituency? She requests them as [illegible] and I hope I shall receive them in plenty and print them on the page for her and for others struggling like her to keep house to the best advantage.

—go to the market yourself!

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

In Exchange for a Saddle.

"I WANT to ask if there is any young woman who has some kind of a saddle she has no use for. I have a baby carriage I would trade for a saddle. The carriage is in good condition, but I have no use for it now. I do not expect much of a saddle in exchange, for I know they are high priced. I have a colt that was given me and I want to make a saddle horse of it. I have often seen saddles lying around that no one ever thought of using. I wish some one who had such a saddle would think of me. I could pay freight on it and would send the carriage parcel post. If no one wants the carriage in return I could do plain white or colored embroidery to pay for the saddle. I could often give eggs for setting or do some embroidery for a Cornerite who lived near me. E. H. B."

I trust E. H. B. may get the saddle she wishes. Like her, I have often known of saddles which were no longer in use and it seems probable there is some such article lying forgotten in a stable or attic which would help E. H. B. in her effort to train her colt for a saddle horse. The baby carriage she offers would be welcome to some mother or the white or colored embroidery might be more attractive. In writing for this address I hope the stamped and self-addressed envelope for reply will not be forgotten.

Magazines to Pass Along.

"Can any one send me directions for making a hair switch from combings? I would greatly appreciate it. I have some magazines to pass along to any one caring to pay for postage on them; also some children's books. "MRS. B. M. T."

I do not know if any one who has not had professional training can make a switch from combings, but I print the request, secure that if the directions can be given in writing, they will be sent. The offer of magazines and of children's books will be gratefully accepted by some one.

Recitations in Negro Dialect.

"I want an old fashioned recitation called 'Mother Hubbard's Sermon'; also one named 'Kentucky Philosophy,' and others in Negro dialect. I think these pieces may be found in any city library, but I am far from such places. I want them for some talented but poor children. What could I give or do in exchange? "MRS. J. G. H."

Among our many Cornerites who are interested in recitations I am sure those pieces desired will be found and supplied to this correspondent. I am not familiar with them myself, but there must be some one who knows them and will provide them. If Mrs. J. G. H. will watch the Corner I am positive she will perceive some way in which she can be of use to one or more of our constituency. I will hold her address and send it on receipt of application accompanied by stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Anything Useful to an Invalid.

"I am a reader of the Corner and feel the need of sympathy. I am a widow and am slowly recovering from a most serious operation. I have souvenir booklets with colored embossed Lone Star flag and seal of Texas on covers and verses written by myself which I would be glad to exchange for anything useful to an invalid. "MRS. L. V. G."

Who will take advantage of this offer? I will glady send the address on receipt of stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Family in Need.

"I hope that some kind people to whom God has given health will take pity on a poor family I know. I think they are the most helpless I have ever known. There is a poor blind old grandmother, her son, who has just undergone a serious operation, and his wife, who has just had her foot cut off, so that she is a helpless cripple, but who has a 4 months' old baby. They are good people, but so awfully afflicted! Cannot some of our good friends help provide for this little family until the husband gets strong enough to be able to care for them? They are really in need of food! The baby is being raised on condensed milk and it would be such a help if some one could send them a case of this as well as other food. I wish some good church people could see their way clear to making up a barrel. The family has been pinched so long that anything to eat will taste good. Some little baby things would also be gladly accepted. I give the man's address below. HOPEFUL."

I am sure this appeal will not wait long for a response. I know the generous hearts of the Cornerites, and the great distress of this family is sure to touch them. I agree with the correspondent who makes the plea for them that they are surely most unfortunate and it would not be hard to find some one better off than they are and able to help them in some small degree. The initials of the man who is thus afflicted are A. S. B. I will send his full name promptly upon application.

Rhubarb Juice for Ink Stain.

"I wrote to you in reference to the inclosed clipping a year ago and had no reply and I have carried the cutting in my purse ever since. If you have any way of locating the little girl, M. G. G., I might be able to do something to please her. Maybe the following hints will help some one: To remove an ink stain pour through it the juice from unsweetened boiled rhubarb. To clean silver put it to soak over night or for two or three hours in sour milk, enough to cover the silver well. K. E. G."

I regret much that either your first letter to me or my reply to it must have miscarried and I am the more sorry because at this late day I cannot put you on the track of M. G. G. We are not able to keep the addresses so long as this because of the large number of fresh ones that are constantly coming in. The hints you send will undoubtedly be of help to our readers. Thank you.

Two Patterns Wanted.

"One of the sisters of the Corner asked for the pattern of the silk lampshade that appeared in the paper. I have two, but do not know which one she meant. Please send her my address. Two or three weeks ago there appeared a pattern for a crocheted breakfast cap. I wanted it for an old lady who is a shut-in and does fancy work to support herself. She felt badly that I had lost it, as she said she knew she could find a good sale for it. If anyone has it won't she please send it or even just loan it? It would mean so much to my old friend. MRS. J. B."

If the friends who wished the lampshade pattern had given the signature of the correspondent who sent it in we might be able to get it. The same state of affairs exists about the crocheted cap. It is impossible to trace anything of this kind without the signature, or better still, the cutting with the request or the offer. I am sorry and hope some one may be able to supply the pattern of the shade and of the crocheted cap.

Likes to Get Letters.

"I want to thank the kind friends who sent me so many magazines and silk scraps. I do appreciate them so much and I have many friends through correspondence. Since I wrote my last letter we have moved on a farm. We are far from the postoffice and have not many neighbors, but I rather enjoy it, as I am nervous and like the quiet. I still have some flower seeds that I brought with me and would be glad to send them to any one who wants them. I am working on the silk quilt that a kind woman sent and some day will have it done. I would like to get letters and will tell all I know about this country, if they will send postage. I look forward to my mail, as that is my great pleasure. S. E. C."

Who will send a stamped and self-addressed envelope for this address, either for the flower seeds or for correspondence?

Needed for a Cripple.

"I am making a request for an old lady I know, who is crippled. She can sit in an invalid chair on the porch, but she needs a steamer rug or blanket to place around her, as she is thin and suffers from cold. I also request an Episcopal prayer book for her, as hers is worn out and some of the leaves are lost from its use for twenty-five years. The old lady takes an active interest in all religious things; she also loves pictures and she would appreciate cheering letters. God bless the Helping Hand! "MRS. J. M. H."

Will not some one supply this old lady with the rug and the prayer book and write to her the cheering letters she would appreciate? I shall be glad to send her address on application, accompanied by stamp.

Makes Others Happy.

"I would like to help make others happy. I have nothing much to offer but magazines and papers just at present, but I hope to be able to be of service in the future. I am a nurse, and if there is anything along those lines I could do to help I would be so glad to do so. Perhaps I could give some advice to young mothers on the care of children, etc. Happiness is a perfume you cannot pour upon others without getting a few drops on yourself. E. M. H."

This offer strikes me as one which should be helpful. Advice from a nurse is most valuable in many cases, especially to mothers of little children, and I have no doubt I shall receive applications for this address as well for the counsel as for the magazines. The writer, I do not question, gives and receives much of the perfume of happiness to which she refers in her quotation. Her address will be sent upon receipt of request accompanied by a stamped addressed envelope.

Another Busy Mother.

"I have just finished reading a letter from 'an extremely busy mother.' Well, I am another one on the list. Sewing makes me nervous and I have so much else to do. I wish to say that I have loads and loads of quilt blocks which will come under the head of worsted. They are all colors and all materials, of convenient size, clean, beautiful, and pressed. I have also a few that would come under the head of washable pieces. Now, I simply have not time to work these up, nor do I want any one else to do it for me. What I ask for in exchange for these blocks is some good, serviceable material, such as heavy calico, gingham, or percale, light or dark. Any number of yards would be aceptable, from one yard up and the goods must be absolutely new, so that it will be free from any disease germs. You can buy remnants to send me and thus make a profitable exchange. Can some one send me about five yards of some thin summer material, pink, lavender, or yellow? It can probably be bought for a few cents a yard and if postage is paid on that sent to me I will pay postage on that I send. I can piece the lengths together in a short time; they will not make such pretty quilts, but will take the place of my blocks, for I need the bed clothes. So I will deal fairly. If only one yard can be sent by each who desires to make the exchange it will help me out. "MRS. T. C. W."

The exchange she suggests sounds reasonable to me and like one that will be welcomed by some of our many quiltmakers. I will be glad to send Mrs. T. C. W.'s address on receipt of stamped and self-addressed envelope.

FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

BY ADELAIDE BYRD

OVAL TRAY CLOTH.

[illegible] want to add to the engaged [illegible] happiness just get to work and make her an oval tray cloth. You'll be her friend for life. The [illegible] design offered today is one [illegible] work up most effectively, as [illegible] both solid and eyelet embroidery—a combination that is hard [illegible].

[illegible] placing of the design is somewhat different from the usual method. [illegible] tray cloth is shown in one-half [illegible] original size. Two large butterflies [illegible] ornament one end as indicated. [illegible] separate butterflies of smaller [illegible] are to grace the other end. [illegible] the smallest of all at the extreme end and let the other two be [illegible] at opposite points near the line [illegible] the cloth in half. Let the [illegible] of the insects point in opposite directions. Experiment on a [illegible] of paper if you think you may [illegible] difficulty in transferring the design. [illegible] a first-class quality of linen for [illegible] purpose, since it is never wise to [illegible] deal of handwork on inferior material. Of the two butterflies [illegible] together let the one whose antennae point toward the dividing line [illegible] in eyelets. Outline the [illegible] lines, including the antennae, [illegible] the extreme edge of the double [illegible] embroidered solid. The double [illegible] the shape of the butterfly [illegible] be filled in with solid [illegible]. Fill in the body with [illegible].

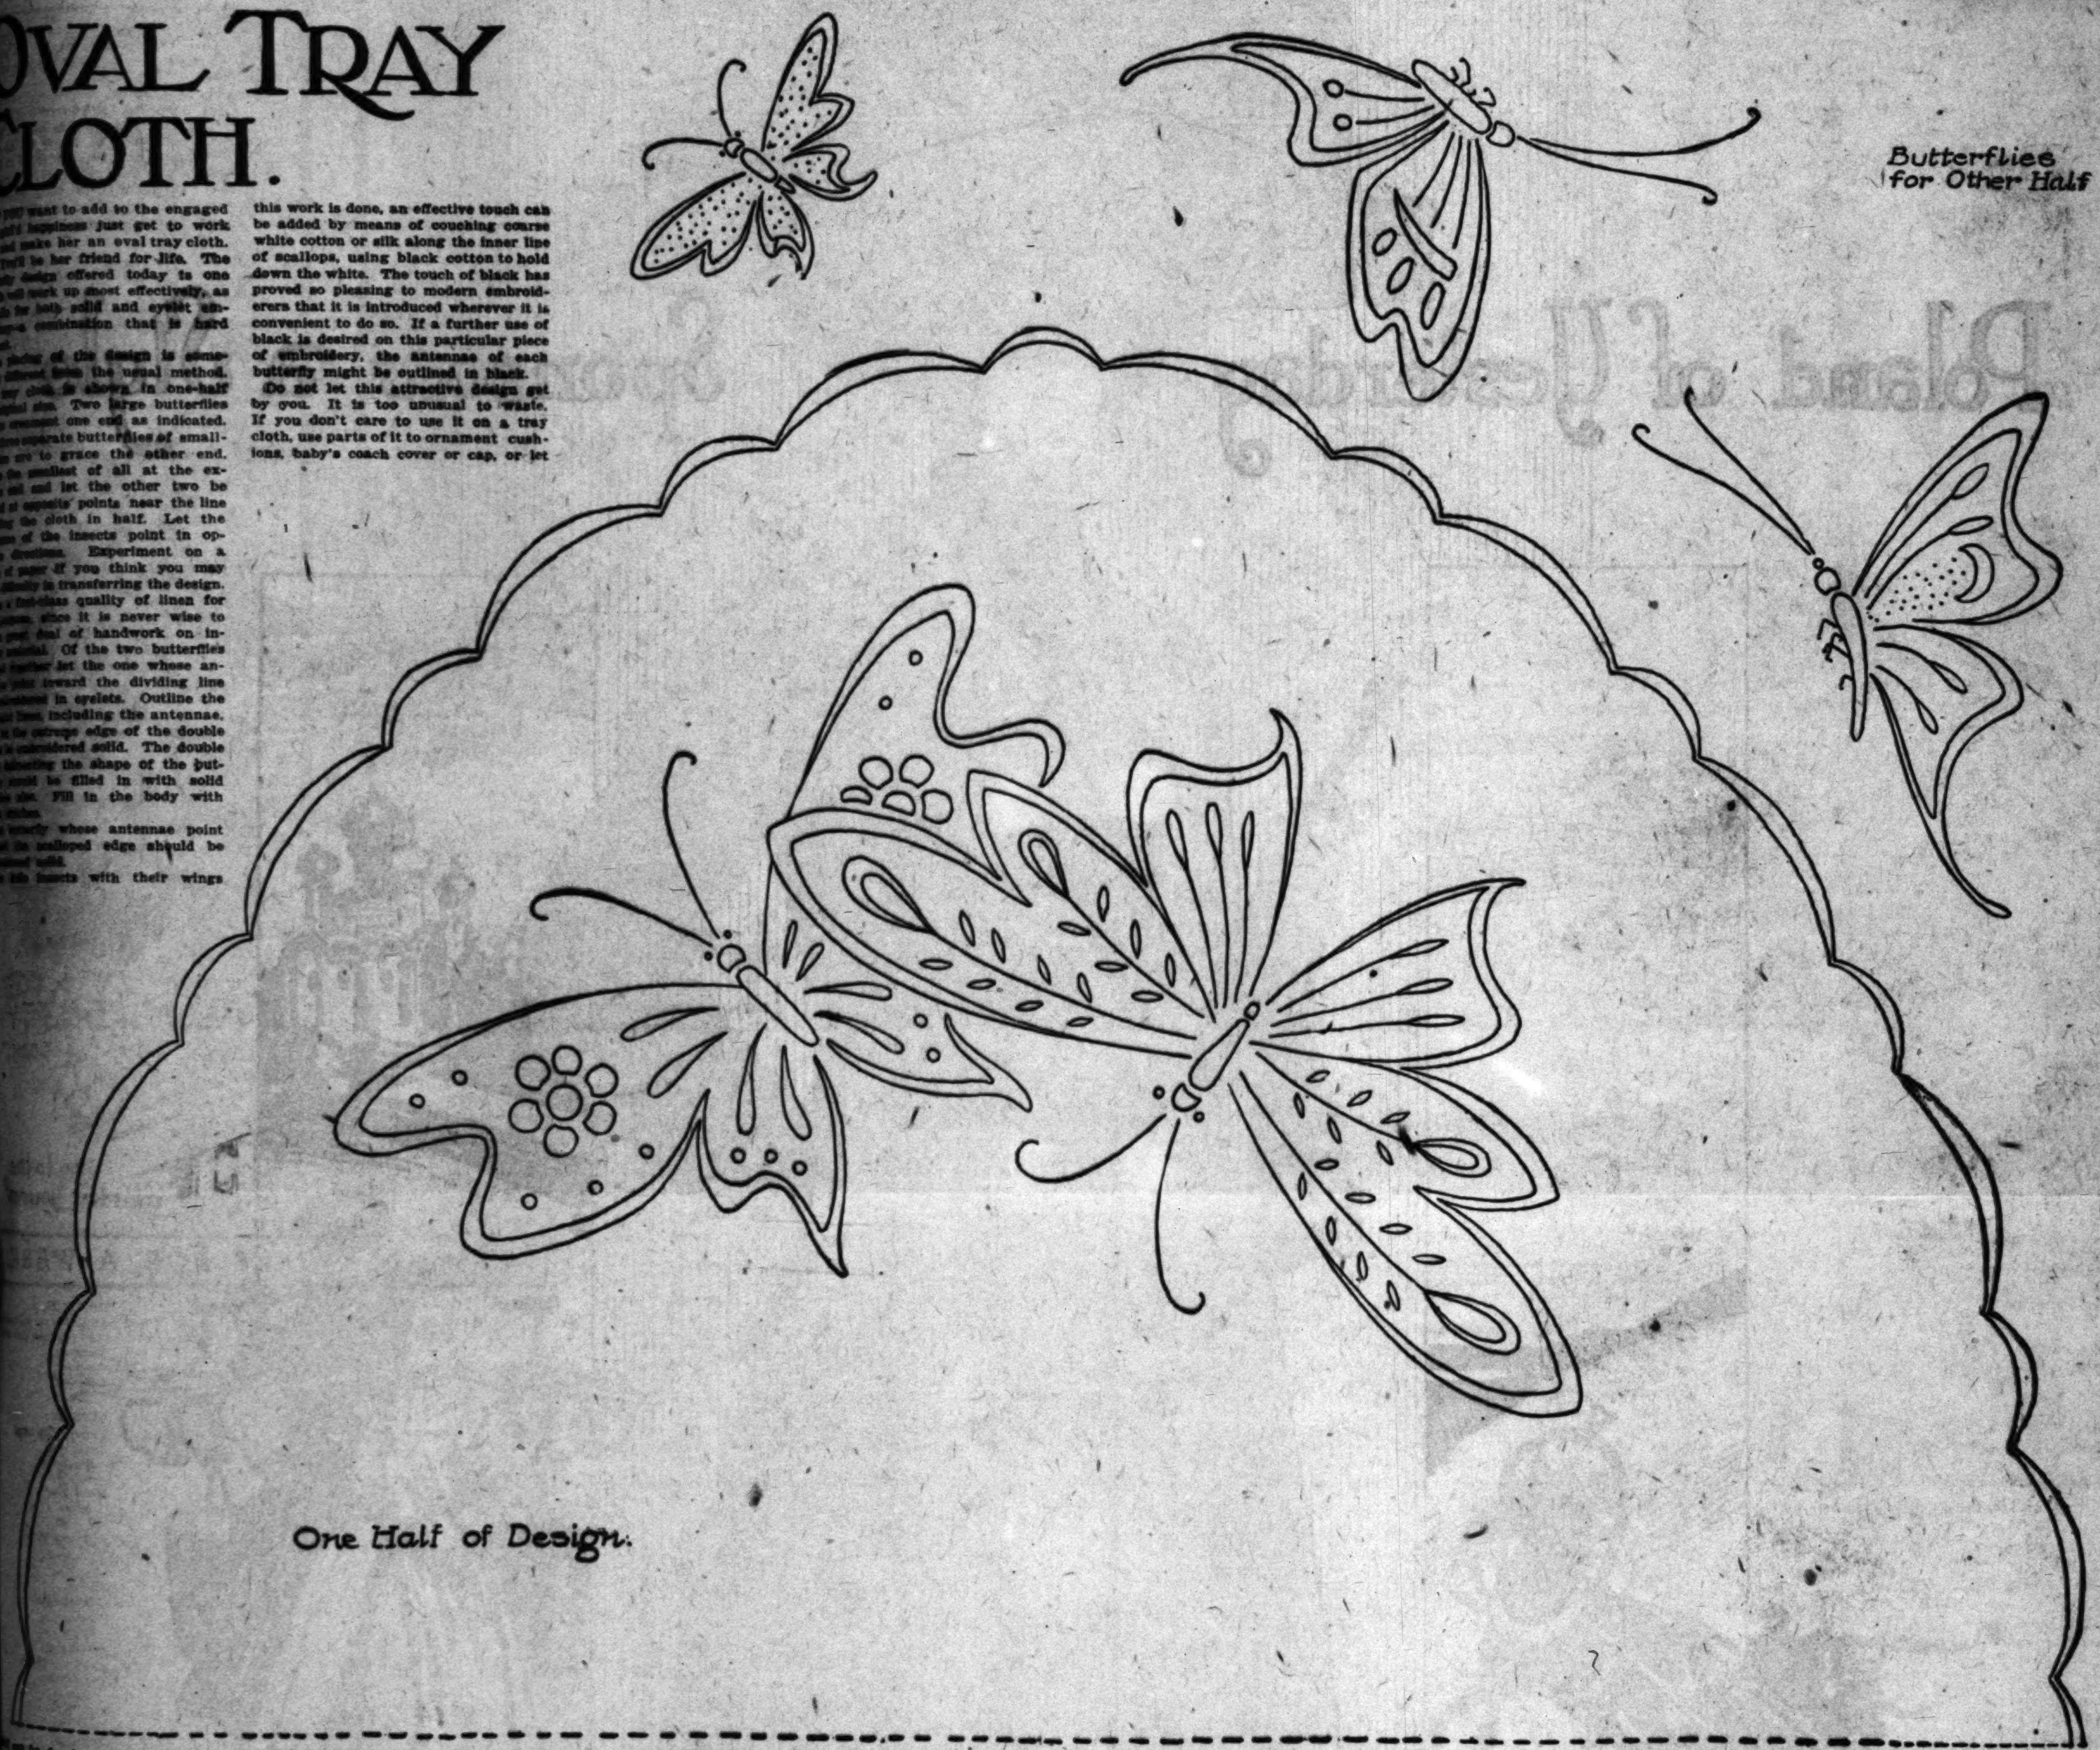
[illegible] insects with their wings [illegible] to be developed in eyelet and [illegible]. The dots, of course, [illegible] French knots.

[illegible] the effect of the butter[illegible] the scalloped edge [illegible]. First of all, [illegible] the lines neatly with darn[illegible] or braid and buttonhole over [illegible], being sure to place the [illegible] together and slanting [illegible] the proper direction. After this work is done, an effective touch can be added by means of couching coarse white cotton or silk along the inner line of scallops, using black cotton to hold down the white. The touch of black has proved so pleasing to modern embroiderers that it is introduced wherever it is convenient to do so. If a further use of black is desired on this particular piece of embroidery, the antennae of each butterfly might be outlined in black.

Do not let this attractive design get by you. It is too unusual to waste. If you don't care to use it on a tray cloth, use parts of it to ornament cushions, baby's coach cover or cap, or let one of the smaller butterflies finish off the ends of a sash.

I have not mentioned the use of color in embroidering the design, for I presume that all-white is desirable for a tray cloth. However, if one chooses to use colors one can be guided by the picture of a richly colored butterfly and thereby be sure to use the proper blending of shades.

Here's good luck to you!



Butterflies for Other Half

One Half of Design.

Crocheted Rugs

[illegible] with oriental rugs cost[illegible] of dollars you will [illegible] the large carpet and rug [illegible] either, woven or [illegible]. They cost from $5 up, ac[illegible]—something of a dif[illegible] or even $5000 for the [illegible]. And yet in their place [illegible] are just as appropriate [illegible] as the others.

[illegible] one? They are fas[illegible], almost as engrossing [illegible]. You may braid the [illegible] round and round or [illegible] them. The latter is [illegible] process.

[illegible] the hit-and-miss ef[illegible]; besides, it gives one a [illegible] all sorts of odds and [illegible]. Roughly speak[illegible] a pound and a [illegible] to make one square [illegible]. Thick woolen rags should [illegible] a half-inch thick; thin [illegible] and a half. They are [illegible] with a neat seam [illegible].

[illegible] rug, crochet a chain [illegible] with a needle to be [illegible] this purpose. It is extra [illegible] the chain in a ring and crochet around and around, widening as it seems necessary by putting two stitches of single crochet in one stitch. If your work is too tight the rug will curl; if it is too loose the rug will bulge and ruffle on the edges. You will have to be the judge.

For the oblong rug, crochet a chain of ten stitches, join and crochet around, making two stitches at the corners and increasing this number as it seems necessary in preceding rows.

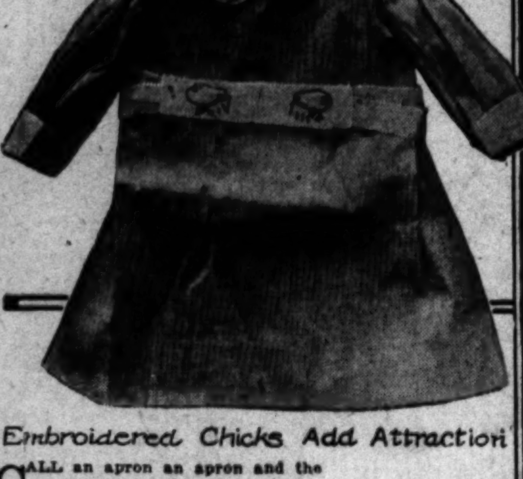
Beautiful rugs can be had by crocheting in rows of color. Black borders and rows can be made from old stockings—they are really more satisfactory than thinner rags. Rainbow effects are pretty, shading from a light color in the center to the deeper hues of the spectrum at the edge. You will find a dark border in every case most effective.

Don't despise your rags. Anything will answer that is clean and not too rotten from age. If you are striving for some special effect, dye some of your faded light materials to the proper color. If you do not possess a bulging ragbag you can buy mill remnants by the pound and still make your rug to fit your room color scheme much cheaper than buying it, besides having the fun of making it.

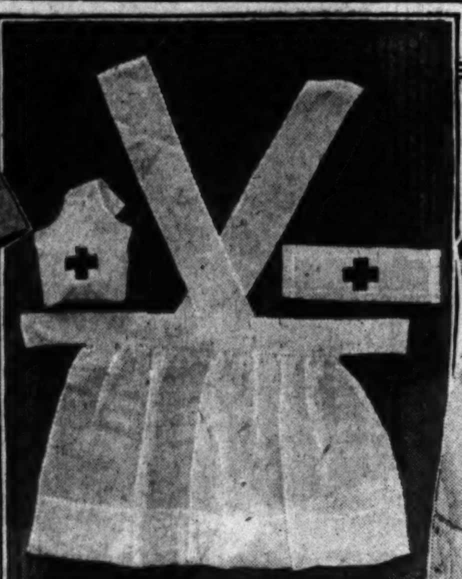
ON THE TABLE

[illegible] on your table may be of the best and cooked to [illegible], but unless the linen on the table is equally [illegible] the good qualities of the former are lost. The [illegible] the platter will prove appetizing if it is orna[illegible] the design offered today.

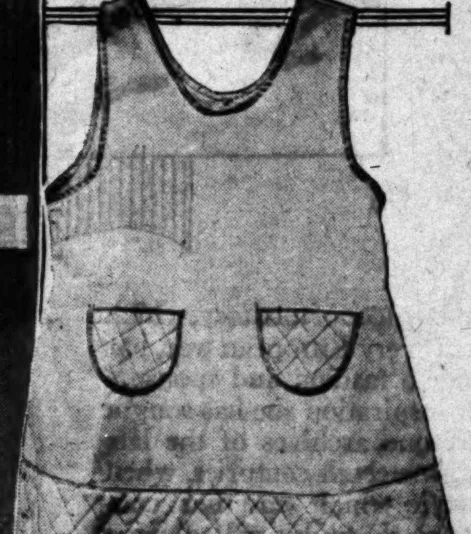
APRONS FOR PLAY AND EARNEST



Embroidered Chicks Add Attraction



A Miniature Red Cross Costume.



Quilting is New and Practical.

CALL an apron an apron and the most docile child will refuse to wear it; but just pass over it the magic of "pretend" and it is a different story. Mothers of wee people and kind aunties and adopted aunties have found this out and are consequently on the lookout for new ways to coax the youngsters into wearing protective aprons over their better frocks.

It takes only a few extra minutes to embroider the chicks with worms on the belt of the checked apron, which may also be a play dress; but these chicks will have an appeal to their young owner that the plain apron would always lack. Just a plain pink-and-white gingham is used for the apron proper, but white lawn is used for the collar and cuffs and sash ends which tie in back with a bow. This lawn is picoted to add a finer touch to the little play garment. Then the chicks are outlined on in pink cotton and the apron is complete. It buttons all the way down the back, so that it may be laid out flat on the ironing board.

Even the youngest member of the family will get the preparedness fever, if such a truly pretending play set as that of the Red Cross comes her way. The apron itself is not impractical, and from its scraps mother can fashion the tiny arm band and cap. Little missie will feel just as important as her soldier brother and can enter as readily as he into all the mimic battles of the neighborhood when under the protection of her Red Cross.

Just to make the apron different, and therefore attractive for the little girl who has to wear it, one can quilt the pockets and the hem, making the apron of heavy linen and doing the quilting with colored thread by machine. Let the little one watch you do it—she will be delighted with the criss-cross stitching which results. This quilted hem, by the way, makes a very good absorber for the little girl who likes to splash in water. Sometimes it is just as well to quilt the apron deeper than the hem here shown. Pipe the hem and bind the pockets and neck with bias bands of material to match the stitching. This apron has a neck size large enough to be slipped over the head and has no opening. For very hot weather it may be worn without a frock or even without a guimpe.

For the Perambulator

IF YOU crochet enthusiasts are looking for something to do to while away the time, why don't you crochet a cover for the perambulator? If you can't make use of it yourself, one of your friends can.

Crochet pink and white stripes, placing them alternately to form the cover. On the white stripes cross-stitch tiny pink rosebuds about six inches apart. The first white stripes should have a spray at the very top, and there should then be a space of six inches before the next bud is worked. On the next white stripe the bud should begin three inches from the top, but between the buds thereafter there should be six-inch spaces. The next white stripe should have its beginning bud at the extreme top, and the next white stripe after that should have its spray six inches down. By thus alternating the buds it will break the monotony of stiff rows and give the rosebuds a more attractive appearance. To be consistent, the cross-stitching should be done in wool. The work is simple to do on the cover because the crochet stitches form a very good background, inasmuch as they can be easily counted. It will not be necessary to stamp the design first.

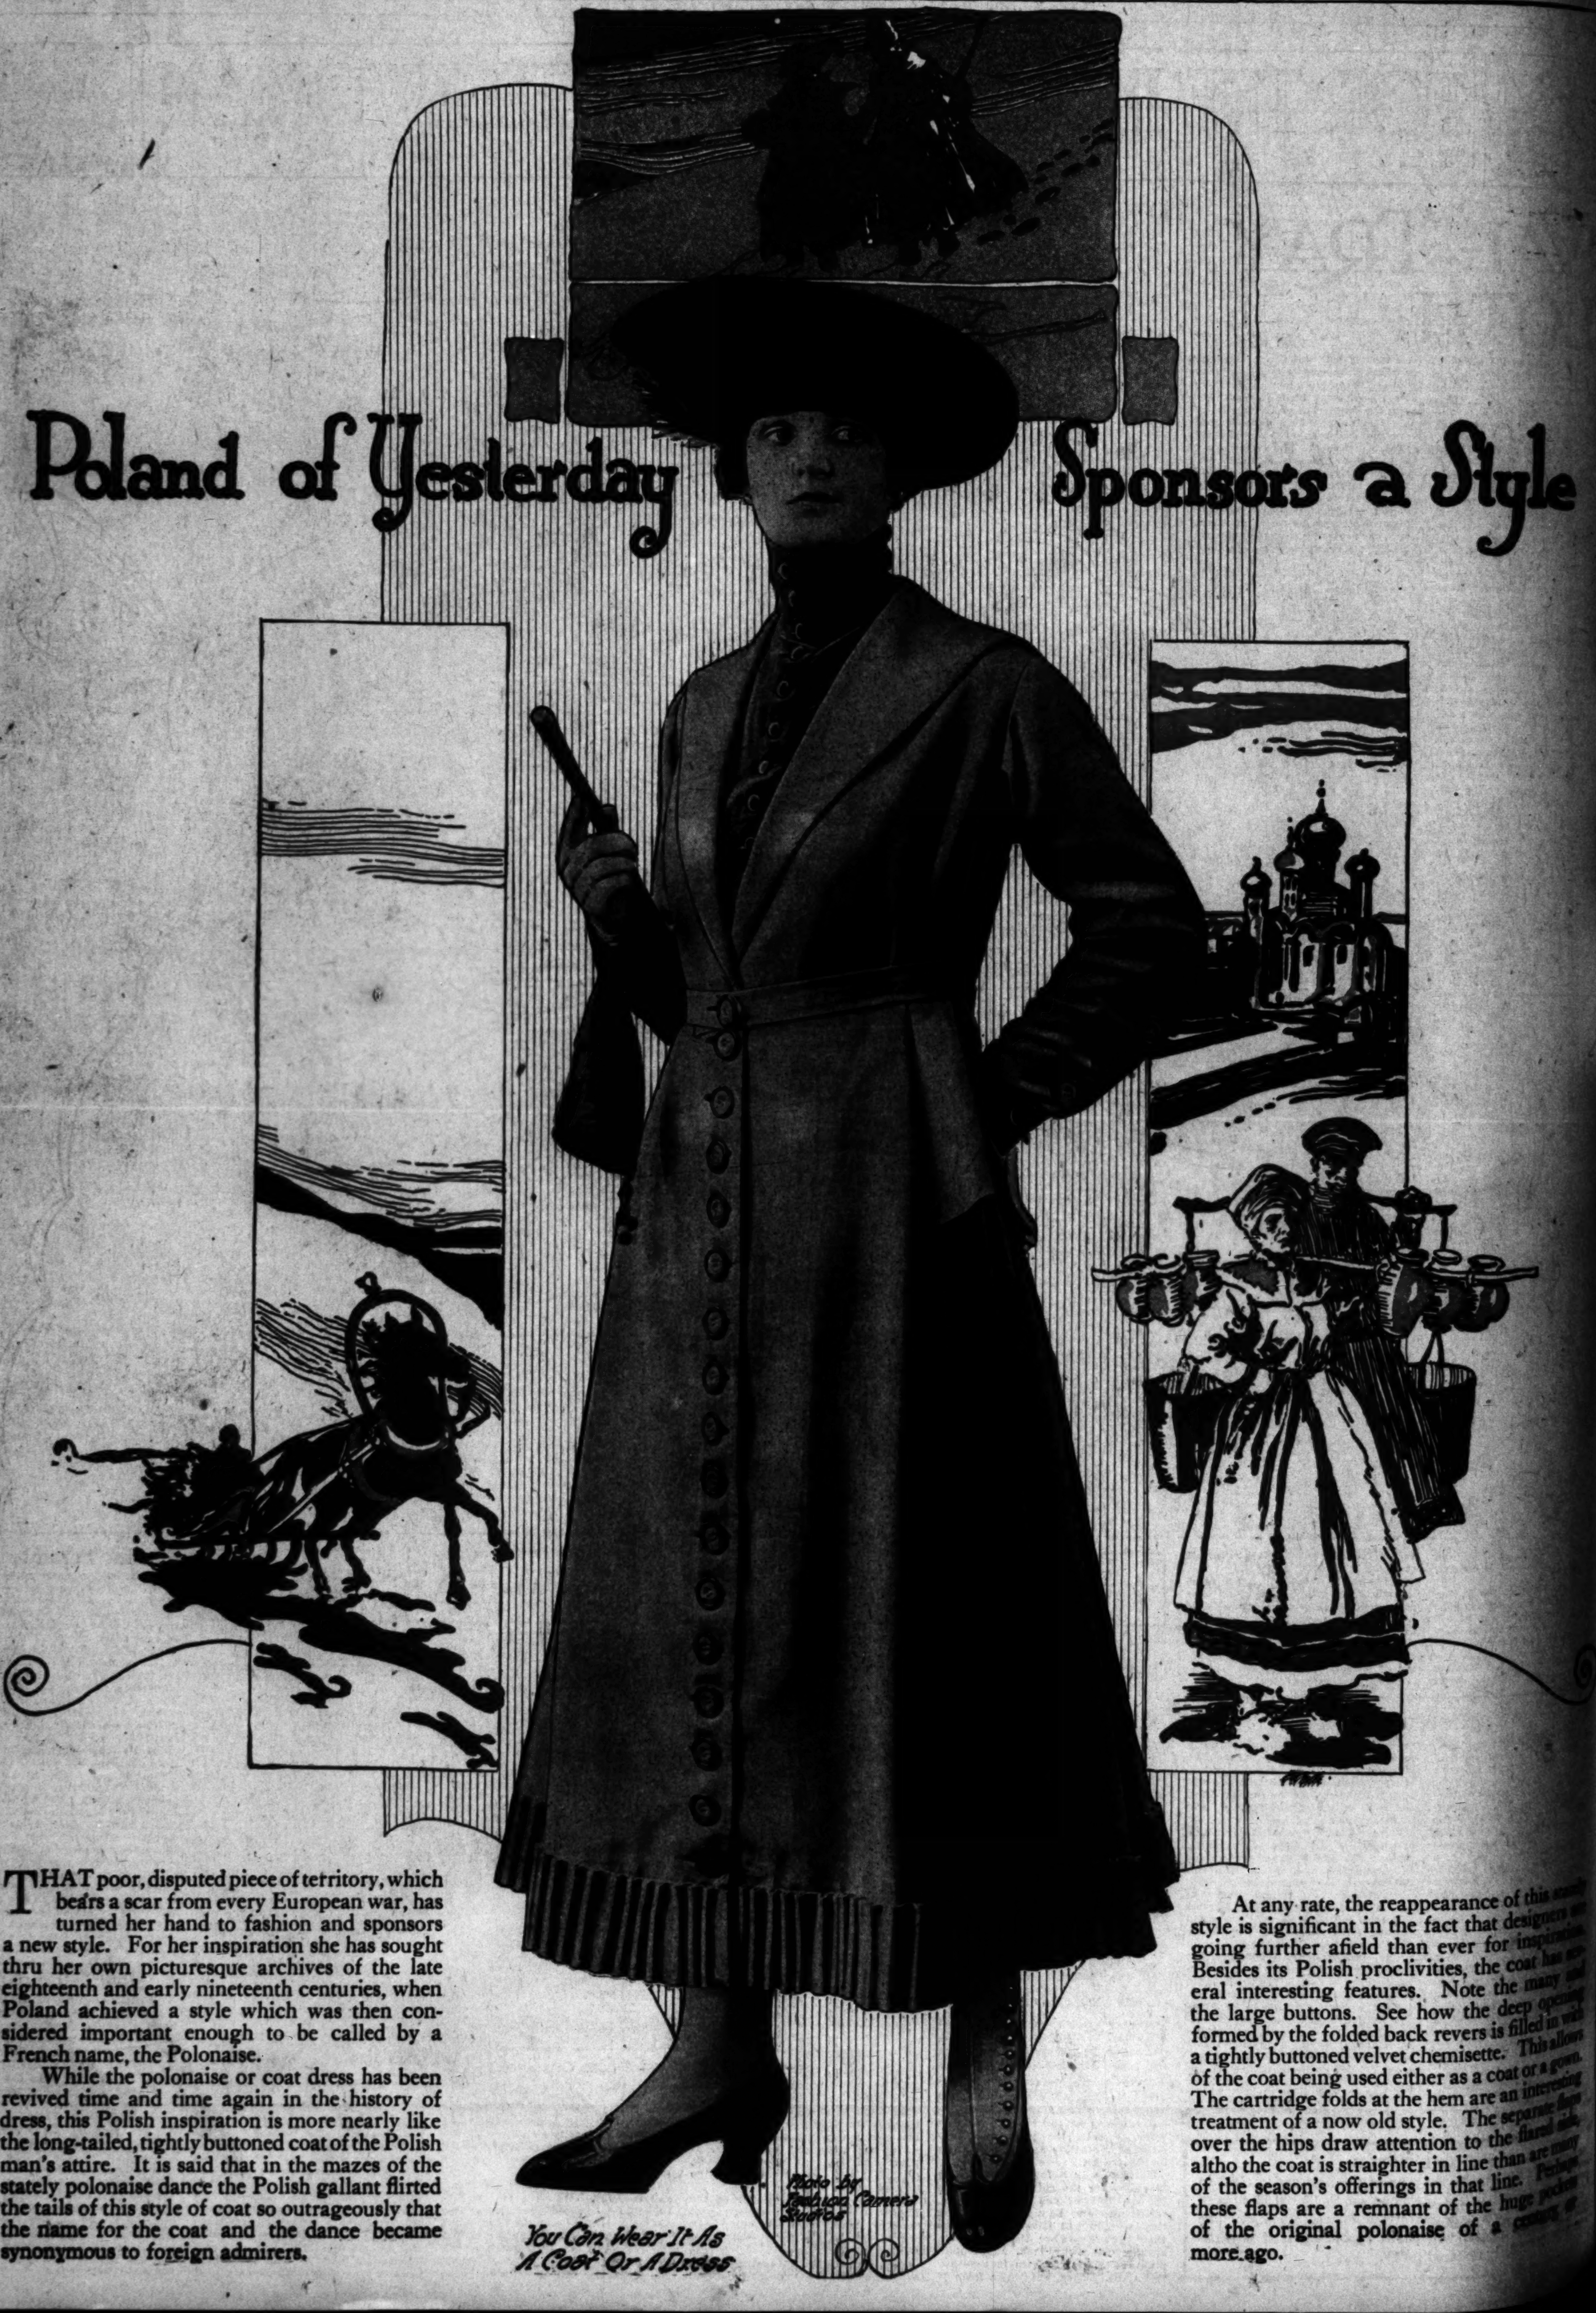
How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the design before you to any material.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen thru the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric.

If you have carbon paper you should place the sheet between the fabric and the newspaper. The latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked.

Poland of Yesterday Sponsors a Style



You Can Wear It As A Coat Or A Dress

THAT poor, disputed piece of territory, which bears a scar from every European war, has turned her hand to fashion and sponsors a new style. For her inspiration she has sought thru her own picturesque archives of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, when Poland achieved a style which was then considered important enough to be called by a French name, the Polonaise.

While the polonaise or coat dress has been revived time and time again in the history of dress, this Polish inspiration is more nearly like the long-tailed, tightly buttoned coat of the Polish man's attire. It is said that in the mazes of the stately polonaise dance the Polish gallant flirted the tails of this style of coat so outrageously that the name for the coat and the dance became synonymous to foreign admirers.

At any rate, the reappearance of this stately style is significant in the fact that designers are going further afield than ever for inspiration. Besides its Polish proclivities, the coat has several interesting features. Note the many and the large buttons. See how the deep opening formed by the folded back revers is filled in with a tightly buttoned velvet chemisette. This allows of the coat being used either as a coat or a gown. The cartridge folds at the hem are an interesting treatment of a now old style. The separate flaps over the hips draw attention to the flared sides, altho the coat is straighter in line than are many of the season's offerings in that line. Perhaps these flaps are a remnant of the huge pockets of the original polonaise of a century or more ago.

Extra Profits for Merchants

The Kenney Needle Shower is fast educating the whole country to the idea of bathing in running water—every drop clean. Liberal Selling Coöperation. Write for proposition.

But I've got the bulge on hard work and hot weather—I've found a way to keep full of the old Pep and Hustle in spite of the wear and tear of staying on the job.

Invigorating Fun

I've got something that gives me—right in my own bath tub—the same cool-you-off, makes-you-feel-fine fun and invigoration that lures people to the seashore.

I've found a mighty good indoor substitute for a bathing beach—a Kenney Needle Shower on my bath tub.

The extra snap and invigoration it puts into either hot or cold water is the finest thing in the world for the man who can't spare the time for a rest—keeps the sweating, sweltering days and nights of August and September from slowing him up and getting the best of him.

And it's equally fine for those who can indulge in a vacation—including the women and children.

At our house we figure that a single week's use at any time—and especially during a hot spell—is alone worth the full price.

A Daily Energizer

A few minutes' invigorating fun in running water first thing every morning gives you a running start on the day—sends you down to work as full of energy and enthusiasm as a man who has just made a million dollars.

Then out of your clothes and into a cool-you-off shower after the heat of the day and you feel good as new—as fresh as the proverbial daisy.

And a quick, refreshing shower at bed time will help you get sound, restful sleep even on the hottest night.

The Modern Way to Get Clean—A Constant Rinsing Process

In this day and age, no bathroom seems complete without a shower—it's the modern and hygienic way to keep clean, both summer and winter.

When you fill a tub, you finish in the same water you start with—finish in dirty water, water filled with impurities washed out of the pores.

But when you take a shower, you stand up in running water—a constant rinsing process—every drop from the first to the last absolutely fresh and clean.

A Revolutionary Improvement—No Curtain—No Wet Hair

And here's good news for everyone who likes the modern comforts and conveniences.

The Kenney Needle Shower turns any bath tub into the equivalent of a special stall shower, at a fraction of the expense.

A permanent, last-for-years, all metal fixture that is easily and quickly attached—no tools needed, nothing but your fingers.

Does away with all need for a curtain—a patented exclusive feature makes all the water hug the body and run down into the tub instead of spattering off—all splash is eliminated.

Guaranteed not to splash out of the tub—and you can try it on approval to prove it.

Another big advantage—it sends all the water direct against the body instead of first drenching the head—doesn't wet your hair a particle unless you prefer to duck your head under.

Simplicity Cuts the Cost Down

In every way this new kind of shower is a revolutionary improvement.

Yet the cost complete—with four fine models to choose from—is only $6 to $25.

All due to simplicity—to eliminating the curtain and other parts heretofore necessary evils.

Ask Your Dealer

Any wide-awake dealer—any department store, any drug or hardware store, any plumber—either has this new kind of shower in stock or can get any model for you, and will let you try it on approval.

Or if your dealer hasn't stocked up, simply write to us—we'll send you any model by mail—lend it to you for a 10-day see-for-yourself test.

In either case, the trial won't cost you a single cent unless you are thoroughly satisfied, unless you want to keep the shower.

A Free Book You'll Enjoy

Keeping Well
by Keeping Clean

If you want to know all about the fun and benefits of bathing in running water, then send your name and address for the free book pictured here—"Keeping Well by Keeping Clean."

It will give you an entirely new viewpoint on bathing—it's chock full of sound common-sense about how to keep at your best, both summer and winter, simply by getting more invigoration out of soap and water.

It also tells all about all four models of the Kenney Needle Shower—why they don't splash out, how they never interfere with filling the tub, and how any model will be loaned to you for 10 days see-for-yourself enjoyment without any obligation to keep it.

It will take you only a minute to tear out the coupon and start it on its way—and I promise you one of the most interesting books you've ever had in your hand.

The Hoe-man and the Great War

By Edwin Markham

Author of "The Man With the Hoe," and Other Poems

IT has been pointed out that we now have two new and needed words in the English vocabulary—hoe-man and hoemanry. The word yeomanry having long represented the more intelligent and well-to-do tillers of the soil, the free-holders, now we are told that the hoemanry represent the landless multitude, the serfs, who, as Lloyd George has said, are aliens in the land of their birth.

War is hell crashing through civilization. All feel its horror and shame; but the heaviest impact, the most frightful wreckage, falls upon the hoemanry at the bottom of the labor pyramid. The war outcries that we hear, come from the classes at the top, those that have pens and pulpits and platforms to express their feelings; but who can ever depict the silent sorrows and the grim destitutions that rush in upon the hoe-men and the hoe-women who have no voice wherewith to speak loudly?

There is a slight alleviation of suffering and war when there is money to afford the comforts of life; but who can body forth the gaunt sorrows of those dim hoe-men who are beset by both suffering and poverty? Upon the back of the hoe-man rests the bread burden of the world. He is the grim earth-wrestler. Inch by inch he digs his way into stubborn nature. He drains the swamps, reclaims the deserts, digs the ditches, builds the roads. He makes the rose to blossom and the tree to grow heavy with fruit, and he sends the rippling barley into the bare fields. Out of his stern labor, there has arisen a pyramid of riches worth more than all the gold dug from all of the mines known to recorded history. And yet he is evermore crushed with drudgery and cursed with poverty.

In years of peace he is not only earning his own scanty living, but he is also carrying the idle soldier on his back, and putting bread into the mouths of the idle gentry. Besides, he is paying with unremitting toil the monstrous debts of old wars—some of them being old, far-off, forgotten wars.

Thus, even in peace, the hoe-man is bent to the earth with burdens; but when war rushes in upon him, he is crushed, prostrated. Usually his scant property is swept away. The fields that have been his lean living, are torn with hoof-beats and wheel-ruts and shell-furrows; and he is hustled into the blood-splashed trenches as food for the guns.

WHY has the hoe-man ever left his green fields for the red fields of battle? What quarrel has he had with brothers he has never seen, and in lands he has never known? He has had no grievance, no desire to go out to murder. He has gone only in obedience to some command or incantation of the overlords.

Said Emperor William in 1891, to the young men who had been rounded up to take the military oath: "You are now my soldiers; you have given yourselves to me body and soul. There is but one enemy for you and that is my enemy * * * It may happen that I shall order you to fire on your fathers and brothers. But in such a case you are bound to obey me without a murmur."

Here are some lines from my Hoe-book of long ago:

The leaves shower down and are sport for the winds that come after;
And so are the toilers in all lands the jest and the laughter
Of nobles—the toilers scourged on in the furrow as cattle,
Or flung as a meat to the cannons that hunger in battle.

Thus the dim-seeing hoemanry go out to slay and be slain; and the women who draw the carts in the streets of the cities and always help to till and reap the fields, now take on the man's entire burden with their own, and wait for the end.

IT may be that those bent and patient home-drudges will only get word of one more body calcined in the lime-pit or will receive from a train-load of maimed and mangled soldiers a huddled wreck of a man, broken or daft or blinded. Indeed, there may be no home left after the fire and the fury, only the bare ground, as in Belgium. Not a cow is left in Poland today for babe or man. In the Balkans there are "rivers of blood and fields of bones." But they will begin again as did generations of their fathers on these same old blood-soaked fields. For, as soldiers of the legion, as mercenaries, as gladiators—always as dumb driven cattle—men have accepted carnage and cruelty as a part of the scheme of existence, as a part of the divine order of things.

But, how is this treason to the hoe-man accomplished? The begilted and beswordeded overlords pick a quarrel with their neighbors of the same stripe and blade. Forthwith honor demands a war; and forthwith (to bamboozle the people) there goes up the cry that the nation is in danger. The war-lords are psychologists. They know that they can hypnotize the people with specious catch-words and phrases.

Then the drums beat and the bugles blow, the banners wave and the orators vociferate. The people become curiously spellbound, or else otherwise are compelled to go forth to slaughter their neighbors with whom they have no quarrel.

The vital point in the discussion is the fact that in all wars the hoe-men have nothing to gain and everything to lose!

SOME months ago the organized but poverty-stricken workers of England saw this significant truth. They were being urged to join the army. They had been told to think of their honor, of their manhood, and especially to think of England's greatness. But the workers replied by saying that they had nothing to lose, and, therefore, had nothing at stake; that they were disinherited and destitute under English rule and that they could only be disinherited and destitute under any other government. And they ended by saying, "We will let those fight who have something to lose!"

I consider this the most remarkable and significant utterance on war that has ever been made. I hear in it the possible knell of all wars. For, if the workers once get this lightning glance into the sham and shame of war, they will combine and refuse to fight, and leave the war-makers and war-lovers to wage their own battles.

A spark can kindle a conflagration that may envelope a continent; so this bold idea may yet take fire in the brain of the hoemanry of the world and forever destroy the chimera of war, compelling an International Tribunal, clothed with positive power, to settle international disputes.

FIGURING value in terms of service, the most economical wood for home-building is

WHITE PINE

Lumber men, architects and carpenters have for generations agreed that no other wood gives such long and satisfactory service, when exposed to the weather, as White Pine.

It does not shrink, swell, crack, twist, warp or rot—and once in place it "stays put," after years of exposure, even in the closest fitting mitres and in delicate mouldings and carvings.

These are not mere claims—every one has been proved by three centuries of experience in America.

If your lumber dealer is unable to supply White Pine, we would appreciate the opportunity of being helpful to you in securing it.

"White Pine in Home Building" is beautifully illustrated and full of valuable information and suggestions on home-building. Send today for this booklet—free to all prospective home-builders.

remember what. You often forget the cause of a quarrel, don't you, although the quarrel itself may last forever?"

"Yes," said Wallace, slowly. "I understand."

"Anyway," the woman went on, ever so quietly, "off Tom went, swearing that the worm had turned at last, that he'd never return. And I sat up and waited for him, but when I fell asleep at dawn he had not come. I waited almost a month, expecting him every moment, but he didn't come back. As we were poor and lived from hand to mouth, I had to look for work. The girl who got me this job told me I might share her room. I took her at her word, so——"

"Why did you wait?" Wallace asked. He really wished to know.

"We women have a faith you men don't understand," said she. "I waited until I couldn't wait any longer. Then baby and I moved to my friend's rooms. Then—then my baby died, so there's nothing left me now. I like your friend, really I do, and I thought I'd let things happen as they might. When you're lonely you don't much care."

Wallace smiled.

Miss Trelawney made known her surprise.

"I've heard that story before," said he, "only I've heard it from the man's side. He went out, he says, and got gloriously drunk. When he recovered he found himself in a hospital with a fractured head, and the weeks had flown. Before he had the doctor's permission he left for home to find that his wife had gone. She left no address, or, at least, the people there remembered none. He searched as long as he had funds, which wasn't very long, and then applied for his old position, but it had been filled."

"And now?" breathed Miss Trelawney.

"And now," continued Wallace, "the man I'm speaking of, is janitor in the apartment house in which I live, and, if I'm not mistaken, he has an attractive, but lonely, little flat in the basement."

The woman clutched his arm.

"And his name?" she begged.

"His christian name is Tom, his surname is Magee, and his wife's name is Mollie, for he told me so himself."

The woman, who had risen to her feet, fell face forward on the table, upsetting several tumblers, a vase of flowers, and a bottle of Bumm's 96. Ned Greene came to see what the trouble was.

"Good heavens," he exclaimed, "she isn't drunk, is she?"

"I should say not," said Wallace, a half-smile on his face. "You mightn't have expected such a scene from Miss Tottie Trelawney, but when Mrs. Tom Magee finds her Long Lost Husband she's liable to take it rather hard. The Lost One is janitor in my apartment house, and she's going home with me. Call a taxi, please."

Ned Greene was too astonished for speech, so he did as he was told. A sip of wine restored Mrs. Tom Magee, and trustingly, she placed her hand on Wallace's arm. He put her in the cab; gave the driver the address.

"Good-night, Ned, old boy," said he, extending his hand. "It's been a pleasant evening. I've learned lots of things I never knew before. Mrs. Magee and I are going home; she, to a man by the name of Tom, I, to a woman by the name of——"

But Mary's name was lost beneath the noise of the moving car.

VII

SOON the pulsing lights of Lobster Square were far behind The soft lights of the upper West Side flashed like fireflies past the windows.

Wallace told Mollie all about Mary and his silly quarrel, and Mollie said she was sure Mary was sitting by the window waiting for him.

"We women understand one another," she explained.

The breeze made by the motion of the cab blew her hair about her face, and, as she pushed it back beneath her hat, she seemed almost happy. And then Wallace held her hand, which she didn't object to, in the least, until the cab drew up before one of the apartment houses that stand in solid rows along the uptown streets.

Of course, you won't believe it, but standing outside the door was Mr. Tom Magee, gazing empty-eyed toward the shimmering river, trying his best to get a breath of air. By the time Wallace had overpaid the chauffeur, she was in Tom's arms, and he was murmuring——But that's none of our business, after all.

Wallace went up-stairs two steps at a time. When he entered the little apartment, flushed and breathless from his climb, he found Mary waiting by the window, just as Mollie had predicted. She was looking down on the city where the blaze of Broadway cast its nightglow toward the blinking stars. A bit of sewing was in her lap.

She smiled up into his pleading eyes.

"Home at last, Wallace, dear," said she. Then, as he could not speak: "I've been waiting for you."

He knelt before her on the floor, his face hidden in her hands, the sewing crushed beneath it. "I'm sorry, Mary, dear," he breathed, "very sorry. After such a day as this, cooped up in a stifling office, a fellow——"

Mary raised his face; kissed the words from his lips.

"My dear," she smiled, "I understand."

He rose, and took the sewing in his hand.

"What's this you're making?" he asked.

For a moment her eyes shone like winter stars. The mysterious creature began to cry. "Baby clothes," said she.

In half a second she was folded in his strong, young arms.

"Why didn't you tell me before?"

Mannish he was, and unreasonable.

"I've only known for a few days," she said, "and today you wouldn't let me tell you, try as I might."

"Mary, darling."

"Wallace ——"

Came a ringing at the bell.

"Who can that be?" questioned Mary, arranging her hair, womanlike.

Wallace laughed boyishly.

"It's probably Mr. and Mrs. Tom Magee," he said. "I'll go and let them in."

The Best Fishing Time

THE best time to fish is from daylight to ten o'clock in the forenoon and from three or four o'clock in the afternoon to sunset and after until it becomes quite dark. Every moment of the morning is precious to the fishermen. Never waste any of that precious time digging bait or getting your tackle ready. Always have your fishing tackle and your fishing clothes and your lunch in readiness the night before.

Trout always head upstream and when scared their first impulse is to start upstream although later they may dart about. Do not try to fool a fish by making your bait travel upstream. He knows better than to believe anything can float against the current. Let your bait flow down the stream, and, if the trout has not heard you or seen your shadow or felt the vibration from heavy footfalls on the bank, he will think the bait is being naturally floated down with the current and so will chase and swallow it. Let your bait drift with the current. Do not drag down faster than the current travels.

Another mistake is to think that the best fishing is in the deep holes. Trout lurk there, it is true, but when they are hungry they do not stay in the still or sluggish deep water of the pool, but get out in the shallow rapids in order to catch whatever food may be drifting down with the current, such as worms that are washed up, or grasshoppers, bugs and flies that fall in.

Use common-sense about your bait. Fish worms are always good but there are times when other bait is better. Grasshoppers in season, moth millers and such insects when used without a sinker and allowed to float down on the surface of the water, especially in late summer, are always tempting to the fish.

The clan, including Crooked Nose's four daughters, gathered hurriedly to watch the fight between their father and Probably Arboreal

THE ILIAD OF THE OYSTER

By DON MARQUIS—ILLUSTRATIONS BY TONY SARG

"OUR remote ancestor was probably arboreal."—Eminent Scientist.

From his hut in the tree-top Probably Arboreal looked lazily down a broad vista, still strewn with fallen timber as the result of a whirlwind that had once played havoc in that part of the forest, towards the sea. Beyond the beach of hard white sand the water lay blue and vast and scarcely ruffled by the light morning wind. All the world and his wife were out fishing this fine day. Probably Arboreal could see dozens of people from where he crouched, splashing in the water or moving about the beach, and even hear their cries borne faintly to him on the breeze. They fished, for the most part, with their hands; and when one caught a fish it was his custom to eat it where he caught it, standing in the sea.

In Probably Arboreal's circle, one often bathed and breakfasted simultaneously; if a shark or saurian were too quick for one, one sometimes was breakfasted upon as one bathed.

In the hut next to Probably Arboreal his neighbor, Slightly Simian, was having an argument with Mrs. Slightly, as usual. And, as usual, it concerned the proper manner of bringing-up the children. Probably listened with the bored distaste of a bachelor.

"I will slap his feet every time he picks things up with them!" screamed Slightly Simian's wife, an accredited shrew, in her shrill falsetto.

"It's natural for a child to use his feet that way," insisted the good-natured Slightly, "and I don't intend to have the boy punished for what's natural." Probably Arboreal grinned; he could fancy the expression of his friend in making this characteristically plebeian plea.

"You can understand once for all, Slightly," said that gentleman's wife in a tone of finality, "that I intend to supervise the bringing-up of these children. Just because your people had neither birth, nor breeding, nor manners——!"

"There, there, my dear!" broke in Slightly, with a warning in his voice. "Don't you work around to anything caudal, now, Mrs. S.! or there'll be trouble. You understand?"

On one occasion Mrs. Slightly had openly charged her spouse that his grandfather had a tail five inches long; she had never done so again. Slightly Simian himself, in his moments of excitement, picked things up with his feet; but, like many other men of humble origin who have become personages in their maturity, he did not relish having the matter commented upon.

"Poor old Sim," mused Probably Arboreal, as he slid down the tree and ambled towards the beach, to be out of range of the family quarrel. "She married him for his property, and now she's sore on him because there isn't more of it."

NEVERTHELESS, in spite of the unpleasant effect of the quarrel, Probably found his mind dwelling upon matrimony that morning. A girl with bright red hair, into which she had tastefully braided a number of green parrot feathers, hit him coquettishly between the shoulder blades with a handful of wet sand and gravel as he went into the water. Ordinarily he would either have taken no notice at all of her, or else would have broken her wrist in a slow, dignified, manly sort of way. But this morning he grabbed her tenderly by the hair and sentimentally ducked her. When she was nearly drowned he released her. She came out of the water squealing with rage like a wildcat, and bit him on the shoulder.

"Parrot Feathers," he said to her, with an unwonted softness in his eyes, as he clutched her by the throat and squeezed, "beware how you trifle with a strong man's affections—some day I may take you seriously!"

He let the girl squirm loose, and she scrambled out upon the beach and threw shells and jagged pieces of flint at him, with an affectation of coyness. He chased her, caught her by the hair again, and scored the wet skin on her arms with a sharp stone, until she screamed with the pain, and as he did it he hummed an old love tune, for to-day there was an April gladness in his heart.

"Probably! Probably Arboreal!" He spun around to face the girl's father, Crooked Nose, who was contentedly munching a mullet.

"Probably," said Crooked Nose, "you are flirting with my daughter!"

"Father!" breathed the girl, ashamed of her parent's tactlessness, "how can you say that!"

"I want to know," said Crooked Nose, as sternly as a man can who is masticating mullet, "whether your intentions are serious and honorable?"

"Oh, father!" said Parrot Feathers again. And putting her hands in front of her face to hide her blushes she ran off. Nevertheless, she paused when a dozen feet away and threw a piece of driftwood at Probably Arboreal. It hit him on the shin, and as he rubbed the spot, watching her disappear into the forest, he murmured aloud, "Now, I wonder what she means by that!"

"Means," said Crooked Nose, "don't be an ass, Probably! Don't pretend to me you don't know what the child means. You've made her love you. You've exercised your arts of fascination on an innocent young girl, and now you have the nerve to wonder what she means! What'll you give me for her?"

"See here, Crooked Nose," said Probably, "don't bluster with me." His finer sensibilities were outraged. He did not intend to be coerced into matrimony by any father, even though he were pleased with that father's daughter. "I'm not buying any wives to-day, Crooked Nose."

"You have hurt her market value," said Crooked Nose, dropping his domineering air, and affecting a willingness to reason. "Those marks on her arms will not come off for weeks. And what man wants to marry a scarred-up woman unless he has made the scars himself?"

"Crooked Nose," said Probably Arboreal, angry at the whole world because what might have been a youthful romance had been given such a sordid turn by this disgusting father, "if you don't go away I will scar every daughter you've got in your part of the woods. Do you get me?"

"I wish you'd look them over," said Crooked Nose. "You might do worse than marry all of them."

"I'll marry none of them!" cried Probably, in a rage, and turned to go into the sea again.

A heavy boulder hurtled past his head. He whirled about and discovered Crooked Nose in the act of recovering his balance after having flung it. He caught the old man half way between the beach and the edge

An Indoor Substitute For a Bathing Beach

Keeps You Full of Pep and Hustle in Spite of Hard Work and Hot Weather

Try It on Approval to Prove It

ALL the vacation I'll be able to squeeze out this year is a little golf now and then, with perhaps an occasional afternoon at the ball game.

But I'm not kicking—not for two-thirds of a minute.

Others who aren't working half so hard as I am are complaining that they need a rest; and complaining of the heat.

But I've got the bulge on hard work and hot weather—I've found a way to keep full of the old Pep and Hustle in spite of the wear and tear of staying on the job.

Invigorating Fun

I've got something that gives me—right in my own bath tub—the same cool-you-off, makes-you-feel-fine fun and invigoration that lures people to the seashore.

I've found a mighty good indoor substitute for a bathing beach—a Kenney Needle Shower on my bath tub.

The extra snap and invigoration it puts into either hot or cold water is the finest thing in the world for the man who can't spare the time for a rest—keeps the sweating, sweltering days and nights of August and September from slowing him up and getting the best of him.

And it's equally fine for those who can indulge in a vacation—including the women and children.

At our house we figure that a single week's use at any time—and especially during a hot spell—is alone worth the full price.

A Daily Energizer

A few minutes' invigorating fun in running water first thing every morning gives you a running start on the day—sends you down to work as full of energy and enthusiasm as a man who has just made a million dollars.

Then out of your clothes and into a cool-you-off shower after the heat of the day and you feel good as new—as fresh as the proverbial daisy.

And a quick, refreshing shower at bed time will help you get sound, restful sleep even on the hottest night.

The Modern Way to Get Clean—A Constant Rinsing Process

In this day and age, no bathroom seems complete without a shower—it's the modern and hygienic way to keep clean, both summer and winter.

When you fill a tub, you finish in the same water you start with—finish in dirty water, water filled with impurities washed out of the pores.

But when you take a shower, you stand up in running water—a constant rinsing process—every drop from the first to the last absolutely fresh and clean.

A Revolutionary Improvement—No Curtain—No Wet Hair

And here's good news for everyone who likes the modern comforts and conveniences.

The Kenney Needle Shower turns any bath tub into the equivalent of a special stall shower, at a fraction of the expense.

A permanent, last-for-years, all metal fixture that is easily and quickly attached—no tools needed, nothing but your fingers.

Does away with all need for a curtain—a patented exclusive feature makes all the water hug the body and run down into the tub instead of spattering off—all splash is eliminated.

Guaranteed not to splash out of the tub—and you can try it on approval to prove it.

Another big advantage—it sends all the water direct against the body instead of first drenching the head—doesn't wet your hair a particle unless you prefer to duck your head under.

Simplicity Cuts the Cost Down

In every way this new kind of shower is a revolutionary improvement.

Yet the cost complete—with four fine models to choose from—is only $6 to $25.

All due to simplicity—to eliminating the curtain and other parts heretofore necessary evils.

Ask Your Dealer

Any wide-awake dealer—any department store, any drug or hardware store, any plumber—either has this new kind of shower in stock or can get any model for you, and will let you try it on approval.

Or if your dealer hasn't stocked up, simply write to us—we'll send you any model by mail—lend it to you for a 10-day see-for-yourself test.

In either case, the trial won't cost you a single cent unless you are thoroughly satisfied, unless you want to keep the shower.

A Free Book You'll Enjoy

Keeping Well by Keeping Clean

If you want to know all about the fun and benefits of bathing in running water, then send your name and address for the free book pictured here—"Keeping Well by Keeping Clean."

It will give you an entirely new viewpoint on bathing—it's chock full of sound common-sense about how to keep at your best, both summer and winter, simply by getting more invigoration out of soap and water.

It also tells all about all four models of the Kenney Needle Shower—why they don't splash out, how they never interfere with filling the tub, and how any model will be loaned to you for 10 days see-for-yourself enjoyment without any obligation to keep it.

It will take you only a minute to tear out the coupon and start it on its way—and I promise you one of the most interesting books you've ever had in your hand.

of the forest. The clan, including Crooked Nose's four daughters, gathered hurriedly to watch the fight.

It was not much of a combat. When it was over, and the girls took hold of what remained of their late parent to drag him into the woods, Probably Arboreal stepped up to Parrot Feathers and laid his hand upon her arm.

"Feathers," he said, "now that there can be no question of coercion, will you and your sisters marry me?"

She turned towards him a sobered face. Grief had turned her from a girl into a woman.

"Probably," she said, "you are only making this offer out of generosity. It is not love that prompts it. I cannot accept. As for my sisters, they must speak for themselves."

"You are angry with me, Feathers?"

The girl turned sadly away. Probably watched the funeral cortege winding into the woods, and then went moodily back to the ocean. Now that she had refused him he desired her above all things. But how to win her? He saw clearly that it could be no question of brute force. It had gone beyond that. If he used force with her, it must infallibly remind her of the unfortunate affair with her father. Some heroic action might attract her to him again. Probably resolved to be a hero at the very earliest opportunity.

In the meantime he would breakfast. Breakfast had already been long delayed; and it was as true then, far back in the dim dawn of time, as it is now, that he who does not breakfast at some time during the day must go hungry to bed at night. Once more Probably Arboreal stepped into the ocean—stepped in without any premonition that he was to be a hero indeed; that he was chosen by Fate, by Destiny, by the Presiding Genius of this planet, by whatever force or intelligence you will, to champion the cause of all mankind in a crucial struggle for human supremacy.

HE waded into the water up to his waist, and bent forward with his arms beneath the surface, patiently waiting. It was thus that our remote ancestors fished. Fish ran larger in those days, as a rule. In the deeper waters they were monstrous. The smaller fish, therefore, sought the shallows where the big ones, greedy cannibals, could not follow them. A man seldom stood in the sea as Probably Arboreal was doing more than ten minutes without a fish brushing against him either accidentally or because the fish thought the man was something good to eat. As soon as a fish touched him, the man would grab for it. If he were clumsy and missed too many fish, he starved to death. Experts survived because they were expert; by a natural process of weeding out the awkward it had come about that men were marvelously adept. A bear who stands by the edge of a river watching for salmon at the time of the year when they run up stream to spawn, and scoops them from the water with a deft twitch of his paw, is not more quick or skillful than was Probably Arboreal.

Suddenly he pitched forward, struggling; he gave a gurgling shout, and his head disappeared beneath the water.

When it came up again, he twisted towards the shore, with lashing arms and something like panic on his face.

"Oh! Oh! Oh!" he cried. "Something has me by the foot!"

Twenty or thirty men and women who heard the cry stopped fishing and straightened up to look at him.

"Help! Help!" he shouted again. "It is pulling me out to sea."

A knock-kneed old veteran, with long, intelligent-looking, mobile toes, broke from the surf and scurried to the safety of the beach, raising the cry: "A god! A god! A water-god has caught Probably Arboreal!"

"More likely a devil!" cried Slightly Simian, who had followed Probably to the water.

And all his neighbors plunged to land and left Probably Arboreal to his fate, whatever his fate was to be. But since spectacles are always interesting, they sat down comfortably on the beach to see how long it would be before Probably Arboreal disappeared. Gods and devils, sharks and octopi, were forever grabbing one of their number and making off to deep water with him to devour him at their leisure. If the thing that dragged the man, were seen; if it showed itself to be a shark or an octopus, a shark or an octopus it was; if it were unseen, it got the credit of being a god or a devil.

"Throw me a line!" begged Probably Arboreal, who was now holding his own, although he was not able to pull himself into shallower water. "It is not a god or a devil. It doesn't feel like one. And it isn't a shark, because it hasn't any teeth. It is an animal like a cleft stick, and my foot is in the cleft."

But they did not help him. Instead, Big Mouth, a seer and vers libre poet of the day, smitten suddenly with an idea, raised a chant, and presently all the others joined in. The chant went like this:

"Probably, he killed Crooked Nose,
He killed him with his fists,
And Crooked Nose, he sent his ghost to sea
To catch his slayer by the foot!
The ghost of Crooked Nose will drown his slayer,
Drown, drown, drown his slayer,
The ghost of Crooked Nose will drown his slayer,
Drown his slayer in the sea!"

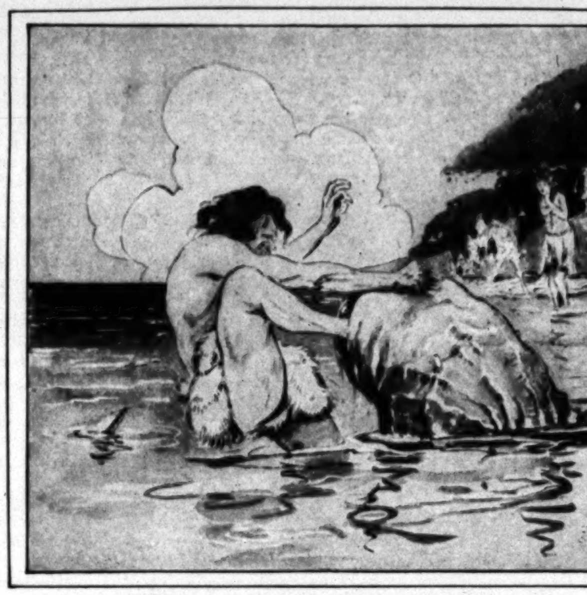
"You are a liar, Big Mouth!" spluttered Probably Arboreal, hopping on one foot and thrashing the water with his arms. "It is not a ghost; it is an animal."

But the chant kept up, growing louder and louder:

"The ghost of Crooked Nose will drown his slayer!
Drown, drown, drown his slayer,
Drown his slayer in the sea!"

Out of the woods came running more and more people, at the noise of the chant. And as they caught what was going on, they took up the burden of it, until hundreds and thousands of them were singing.

But, with a mighty heave and wriggle, Probably Arboreal went under again, up to his head and body; his feet for an instant swished into the air, and everyone but Probably Arboreal himself saw what was hanging onto one of them.



This Titan of Oysters was actually giving battle to a man

It was neither ghost, shark, god, nor devil. It was a monstrous oyster; a bull oyster, evidently. All oysters were much larger in those days than they are now, but this oyster was a giant, a mastodon, a mammoth among oysters, even for that period.

"It is an oyster, an oyster, an oyster!" cried the crowd, as Probably Arboreal's head and shoulders came out of the water again.

Big Mouth, the poet, naturally chagrined, and hating to yield up his dramatic idea, tried to raise another chant:

"The ghost of Crooked Nose went into an oyster,
The oyster caught his slayer by the foot
To drown, drown, drown him in the sea!"

But it didn't work. The world had seen that oyster, and had recognized it as an oyster.

"Oyster! Oyster! Oyster!" cried the crowd sternly at Big Mouth.

The bard tried to persevere, but Slightly Simian, feeling the crowd with him, advanced menacingly and said: "See here, Big Mouth, we know a ghost when we see one, and we know an oyster! Yon animal is an oyster! You sing that it is an oyster, or shut up!"

"Ghost, ghost, ghost," chanted Big Mouth, tentatively. But he got no farther. Slightly Simian killed him with a club, and the matter was settled. Literary criticism was direct, immediate and effective in those days.

"But, oh ye gods of the water, what an oyster!" cried Mrs. Slightly Simian.

And as the thought took them all, a silence fell over the multitude. They looked at the struggling man in a new community of idea. Oysters they had seen before, but never an oyster like this. Oysters they knew not as food; but they had always regarded them as rather ineffectual and harmless creatures. But this Titan of oysters was actually giving battle, and on equal terms, to a man! Were oysters henceforth to be considered as enemies? Were oysters about to attempt to conquer mankind? This oyster, was he the champion of the sea, sent up out of its depths, to grapple with mankind for supremacy?

Dimly, vaguely, as they watched the man attempt to pull the oyster ashore, and the oyster attempt to pull the man out to sea, some sense of the importance of this struggle was felt by mankind. Over forest, beach and ocean hung the sense of momentous things. A haze passed across the face of the bright morning sun; the breeze died down; it was as if all nature held her breath. And if mankind upon the land was interested, the sea was no less concerned. For, all of a sudden, and as if by preconcerted signal, a hundred thousand oysters poked their heads above the surface of the waters and turned their eyes—they had small, fiery, opalescent eyes in those days—upon the combatants.

At this appearance, mankind drew back with a gasp, but no word was uttered. The visible universe, perturbed earth and bending heavens alike, was tense and dumb. On their part, the oysters made no attempt to go to the assistance of their champion. Nor did mankind leap to the rescue of Probably Arboreal. Tacitly, each side, in a spirit of fair play agreed not to interfere; agreed to leave the combat to the champions; agreed to abide by the issue.

But while they were stirred and held by the sense of tremendous matters impending, neither men nor oysters could be expected to understand definitely what almost infinite things depended upon this battle. There were no Darwins then. Evolution had not yet evolved the individual able to catch her at it.

But she was on her way. This very struggle was one of the crucial moments in the history of evolution. There have always been these critical periods when the two highest species in the world were about equal in intelligence, and it was touch and go as to which would survive and carry on the torch, and which species would lose the lead and become subservient. There have always been particular instants when the spirit of progress hesitated between two forms of life, doubtful as to which one to make its representative.

BRIEFLY, if the oyster conquered the man, more and more oysters, emboldened by this success, would prey upon men. Man, in the course of a few hundred thousand years, would become the creature of the oyster; the oyster's slave and food. Then the highest type of life on the planet would dwell in the sea. Civilization, which was not yet, would be a marine growth when it did come; the intellectual, spiritual and physical supremacy held by the biped would pass over to the bivalve.

Thought could not frame this concept then; neither shellfish nor tree-dweller uttered it. But both the species felt it; they watched Probably Arboreal and the oyster with a strangling emotion, with a quivering intentness, that was none the less poignant because there was no Huxley or Spencer present to interpret it for them; they thrilled and sweat and shivered with the shaken universe, and the red sun through its haze peered down unwinking, like the vast bloodshot eye of life.

An hour had passed by in silence except for the sound of the struggle; more and more men and more and more oysters had gathered; the strain was telling on both champions. Probably Arboreal had succeeded in dragging the beast some ten feet nearer the shore, but the exertion had told upon him; he was growing tired; he was breathing with difficulty; he had swallowed a great deal of salt water. He, too, was dimly conscious of the importance of this frightful combat; he felt himself the representative of the human race. He was desperate but cool; he saved his breath; he opposed to the brute force of the oyster the cunning of man. But he was growing weaker.

If only those for whom he was fighting would fling him some word of encouragement! He was too proud to ask it, but he felt bitterly that he was not supported, for he could not realize what agonized emotion had smitten dumb his fellow-

remember what. You often forget the cause of a quarrel, don't you, although the quarrel itself may last forever?"

"Yes," said Wallace, slowly. "I understand."

"Anyway," the woman went on, ever so quietly, "off Tom went, swearing that the worm had turned at last, that he'd never return. And I sat up and waited for him, but when I fell asleep at dawn he had not come. I waited almost a month, expecting him every moment, but he didn't come back. As we were poor and lived from hand to mouth, I had to look for work. The girl who got me this job told me I might share her room. I took her at her word, so——"

"Why did you wait?" Wallace asked. He really wished to know.

"We women have a faith you men don't understand," said she. "I waited until I couldn't wait any longer. Then baby and I moved to my friend's rooms. Then—then my baby died, so there's nothing left me now. I like your friend, really I do, and I thought I'd let things happen as they might. When you're lonely you don't much care."

Wallace smiled.

Miss Trelawney made known her surprise.

"I've heard that story before," said he, "only I've heard it from the man's side. He went out, he says, and got gloriously drunk. When he recovered he found himself in a hospital with a fractured head, and the weeks had flown. Before he had the doctor's permission he left for home to find that his wife had gone. She left no address, or, at least, the people there remembered none. He searched as long as he had funds, which wasn't very long, and then applied for his old position, but it had been filled."

"And now?" breathed Miss Trelawney.

"And now," continued Wallace, "the man I'm speaking of, is janitor in the apartment house in which I live, and, if I'm not mistaken, he has an attractive, but lonely, little flat in the basement."

The woman clutched his arm.

"And his name?" she begged.

"His christian name is Tom, his surname is Magee, and his wife's name is Mollie, for he told me so himself."

The woman, who had risen to her feet, fell face forward on the table, upsetting several tumblers, a vase of flowers, and a bottle of Bumm's 96. Ned Greene came to see what the trouble was.

"Good heavens," he exclaimed, "she isn't drunk, is she?"

"I should say not," said Wallace, a half-smile on his face. "You mightn't have expected such a scene from Miss Tottie Trelawney, but when Mrs. Tom Magee finds her Long Lost Husband she's liable to take it rather hard. The Lost One is janitor in my apartment house, and she's going home with me. Call a taxi, please."

Ned Greene was too astonished for speech, so he did as he was told. A sip of wine restored Mrs. Tom Magee, and trustingly, she placed her hand on Wallace's arm. He put her in the cab; gave the driver the address.

"Good-night, Ned, old boy," said he, extending his hand. "It's been a pleasant evening. I've learned lots of things I never knew before. Mrs. Magee and I are going home; she, to a man by the name of Tom, I, to a woman by the name of——"

But Mary's name was lost beneath the noise of the moving car.

VII

SOON the pulsing lights of Lobster Square were far behind. The soft lights of the upper West Side flashed like fireflies past the windows.

Wallace told Mollie all about Mary and his silly quarrel, and Mollie said she was sure Mary was sitting by the window waiting for him.

"We women understand one another," she explained.

The breeze made by the motion of the cab blew her hair about her face, and, as she pushed it back beneath her hat, she seemed almost happy. And then Wallace held her hand, which she didn't object to, in the least, until the cab drew up before one of the apartment houses that stand in solid rows along the uptown streets.

Of course, you won't believe it, but standing outside the door was Mr. Tom Magee, gazing empty-eyed toward the shimmering river, trying his best to get a breath of air. By the time Wallace had overpaid the chauffeur, she was in Tom's arms, and he was murmuring—— But that's none of our business, after all.

Wallace went up-stairs two steps at a time. When he entered the little apartment, flushed and breathless from his climb, he found Mary waiting by the window, just as Mollie had predicted. She was looking down on the city where the blaze of Broadway cast its night-glow toward the blinking stars. A bit of sewing was in her lap.

She smiled up into his pleading eyes.

"Home at last, Wallace, dear," said she. Then, as he could not speak: "I've been waiting for you."

He knelt before her on the floor, his face hidden in her hands, the sewing crushed beneath it. "I'm sorry, Mary, dear," he breathed, "very sorry. After such a day as this, cooped up in a stifling office, a fellow——"

Mary raised his face; kissed the words from his lips.

"My dear," she smiled, "I understand."

He rose, and took the sewing in his hand.

"What's this you're making?" he asked.

For a moment her eyes shone like winter stars. The mysterious creature began to cry. "Baby clothes," said she.

In half a second she was folded in his strong, young arms.

"Why didn't you tell me before?"

Mannish he was, and unreasonable.

"I've only known for a few days," she said, "and today you wouldn't let me tell you, try as I might."

"Mary, darling."

"Wallace ——"

Came a ringing at the bell.

"Who can that be?" questioned Mary, arranging her hair, womanlike.

Wallace laughed boyishly.

"It's probably Mr. and Mrs. Tom Magee," he said. "I'll go and let them in."

The Best Fishing Time

THE best time to fish is from daylight to ten o'clock in the forenoon and from three or four o'clock in the afternoon to sunset and after until it becomes quite dark. Every moment of the morning is precious to the fishermen. Never waste any of that precious time digging bait or getting your tackle ready. Always have your fishing tackle and your fishing clothes and your lunch in readiness the night before.

Trout always head upstream and when scared their first impulse is to start upstream although later they may dart about. Do not try to fool a fish by making your bait travel upstream. He knows better than to believe anything can float against the current. Let your bait flow down the stream, and, if the trout has not heard you or seen your shadow or felt the vibration from heavy footfalls on the bank, he will think the bait is being naturally floated down with the current and so will chase and swallow it. Let your bait drift with the current. Do not drag down faster than the current travels.

Another mistake is to think that the best fishing is in the deep holes. Trout lurk there, it is true, but when they are hungry they do not stay in the still or sluggish deep water of the pool, but get out in the shallow rapids in order to catch whatever food may be drifting down with the current, such as worms that are washed up, or grasshoppers, bugs and flies that fall in.

Use common-sense about your bait. Fish worms are always good but there are times when other bait is better. Grasshoppers in season, moth millers and such insects when used without a sinker and allowed to float down on the surface of the water, especially in late summer, are always tempting to the fish.

THE HARD TIMES OF PROSPERITY

By Guy W. McConnell

DISPLAYED conspicuously in any number of stores, shops, factories and offices today is this newly adopted slogan of the National Association of American Manufacturers:

BUSINESS DEFENSE.

"What does it mean?" I asked the President of the Association.

"It is our call to the common citizen to come to our aid in the conservation of American business," he replied.

"What has the common citizen to do with general business?"

"Today, everything. We hope to teach him by a widespread publicity campaign its true relation to his own prosperity or poverty."

Here is an unprecedented movement to bring into closer understanding and co-operation the employer, the employee, the business and professional man, the laboring man, the consumer and the producer. It aims to hold mass-meetings in industrial centers, attended by members of all kinds of local organizations, boards of trade, employers' associations, labor unions, professional bodies and the general public. These meetings are now being advertised everywhere, even in schools and colleges.

The purpose is to analyze publicly the problems and difficulties of the manufacturer, the burden of which falls in the end, upon the ultimate consumer.

At last business is laying its cards, face up, upon the table, for the scrutiny of one and all. We want to know why needles and pins are not only higher in price but also scarce in quantity. Why our coal bills are jumping from fifteen to forty cents a ton and why steel rails by the ton have advanced five dollars. Why has glassware gone up twenty-five per cent, table linen forty per cent? These questions will be answered, as well as will the rise in potatoes of from two and a half to four and a half a bag, flour per barrel from six dollars to eight-fifty. The increased cost of clothing, hats, caps, boots and shoes, machinery, rents and sundry necessities will be analyzed and fundamentally explained.

AND what will the explanation be? "War prices?" I asked a prominent manufacturer of agricultural implements.

He shook his head. "No," said he, gloomily. "Labor prices!"

Today big money is being made by both capitalist and workingman. The dinner pail is full and bulging. Long rows of depositors are observed on pay days at the savings bank window in city post-offices. Retail merchants frankly admit that until now they never really knew what fat times meant. The huckster, nowadays, drives happily to town to a constantly rising market. Coupon day comes with sure and satisfying regularity to investors in stocks and bonds. Look at the railroads! The very sight of the unprecedented human and freight traffic, in all parts of the continent, reflects the unwonted activity of trade.

Yet, both capital and labor confess that after their bills have been paid, less money is left to both than before the from sea-to-sea and gulf-to-lakes business boom hit American industry. Never before has the workingman faced such high costs in living. Nor has the producer ever been in such a predicament as now, for continually advancing is the price of all kinds of raw material entering into manufacture. From day to day fluctuations occur in the expenses of both the employer and the worker at a trade, always higher, never lower. And the manufacturer who has sold his product in advance for the year 1916, though his plant may run steadily during the twelve months, is more apt than not to find, when he strikes a balance at the year's end, that his net profits will foot up with a minus sign in front.

"If present-day conditions continue," recently stated a prominent steel manufacturer, whose eyes wore a harried expression, "business, to save itself, will have to shut down!"

Prosperity lies in abundance of cheap products. Today any factory man will tell you that the producing cost has long since passed the danger point—upwards. Recently agents of the Federal Reserve set out to ascertain why this is so. Answers to ninety-seven per cent of several thousand letters addressed to all kinds of manufacturers contained this startling explanation which has been incorporated in an official report to the Federal Government:

"The future of business rests squarely upon the shoulders of the working man of America. He is lying down on his job. Labor, never more dear or scarce, is lacking in efficiency at a time when the maximum effort is necessary to prevent business paralysis."

Thus, in the midst of prosperity, business is having serious hard times. The blame is attributed to the dominating and independent attitude of labor. Curiously enough, labor does not shirk the allegations of its critics. It acknowledges that for many months past, by strike or otherwise, in factory village, mill town and industrial city, the country over, it has been tapping the profit sap out of the prosperity tree of business. And having forced the wage standard to the wave's crest, these headlines it has flashed upon its bulletin board, regardless of the general welfare:

Employment Only To Those Licensed By Labor To Work—Restricted Output—Limited Machine Capacity—Shorter Working Hours.

I asked the secretary of the central labor union in a large seaboard city to explain why labor is trying to force business to walk so many different kinds of planks at the same time.

"PREPAREDNESS for the future is behind the labor movement of today," he stated candidly. "We intend to see that when the after-war spurt or paralysis in business comes, the working man does not get it in the neck. For years after the war in Europe ends," he continued, "the present struggle for world supremacy between the Central Powers and the Allies will merge into a struggle between all of Europe and America to fill the world's bare shelves. Once more, as before the war, Europe will flood this country and the entire world with the cheaper article, imperiling not only our trade at home but the trade we have established abroad since the war began. What will American business do in order to successfully compete in this world-wide selling movement? Cut production cost, of course! And where does this strike first? Why, in the plant! The employer's first thought will be to over-tax labor—which will then be more scarce than now—and also the plant generally, while, at the same time, trying to reduce wages. This is exactly what we are preparing against now, when we are in a position to make our demands."

Upon a placard posted on the yard fence of a prominent shipbuilding plant, this warning to the workmen is given by the labor union: "Work slow. Slow down. This means more pay for you at less toil!"

Naturally, curtailment of production follows. This is why employers are getting together with the common folk today in seeking relief from labor conditions which have "more than reached the limit in increased pay and shortened hours of work," says the report of the investigating agents of the Federal Reserve. Here is offered some concrete testimony.

Said a textile manufacturer: "I have orders on my books for eight months to come, yet my mills are running at only two-thirds capacity. This is due to the independence of the workmen who, instead of taking advantage of the opportunity to make large earnings, are not inclined to give reasonable returns for the abnormally high scale they are paid. They take a holiday whenever they please and have cut the working day from six to four days. Their pay envelopes during the past few months have been so fat that now they lay off for a day or two at any time on the slightest pretext."

An automobile manufacturer of international reputation is paying increased labor cost of nearly forty per cent. "Yet," said he, "instead of my workmen's realizing that the present harvest is apt to be short, working steadily and saving money, they waste time and seem to be satisfied if they average net in shorter hours the previous lower rate of wages, indifferent entirely to the effect on production."

"With every wage increase," remarked a castings maker in answer to my inquiry, "there is a corresponding decrease in labor productiveness. The men have become intolerantly independent. They will not take orders from their superiors, but, growing restless in one plant, they move on to another. Because of this unrest, I refuse to quote prices, covering any large amount of tonnage, and I am not renewing annual contracts of long standing with regular customers."

Now, it is a sort of habit of business always to be harping on the disaffection of its laborers, if for no reason other than to keep the nose of the worker close to the industrial grindstone. But in these wild-fire business times, the cry of the employer to his men to earn the enormous wages he has yielded to them, springs from motives of self-preservation when trade speed is geared to its highest. The steamcocks of business really can not be shut off. The pressure of trade must continue so long as orders keep crowding in. Practically every plant in the country is sold for months to come, many for deliveries as far ahead as late in 1917. I know of machine works in New England booked up until 1918. Not all of these orders are of foreign origin. Take, for example, steel. It has been generally assumed that domestic consumers have failed to receive material owing to heavy buying abroad. Charles M. Schwab is authority for the statement that less than ten per cent of our steel production is now being exported. "At least seventy-five per cent of it," testified another prominent manufacturer, "is for domestic consumption. Accepted contracts last month for domestic shop extension alone aggregated eighty-two per cent of the structural output."

"Of what is this indicative?" he was asked.

"That America, in the high tide of a stupendous war-born trade, is preparing of necessity, now, for trade after the war."

YET, owing to labor's refusal to be one hundred per cent efficient, in steel there is a famine. I could quote a dozen hardships this has caused to general business. One: A man I know recently needed steel beams for factory extension. It meant thousands of dollars to him to have the building completed at a certain time. The best quotation he could get from the steel mills was five cents a pound for delivery within nine months. Regardless of the price, he could not wait so long. So he sent a man about the country in search of beams. In an Ohio village he found an available lot, although they had seen long service. He bought them at a high price and after considerable difficulty took them to his plant yard. Then, in the erection work, a strike occurred. This settled, after great expense of time and money, labor refused to work more than five and a half days a week, even at the inducement of time and a half for Saturday afternoons. It could not work on Sunday, even at double time, for the law prohibited. The working day consisted of eight hours and at the stroke of the clock the men threw down their hammers, though overtime for longer hours was offered. By the time the building was ready for occupancy, the need for which it had been created, had passed, and the owner was in the hole financially.

Outside, the heat still rose from the uptown street, all but deserted in the early evening. The sunset's aftermath lingered in the west. As Wallace turned in the direction of the subway a little breeze came up the street. A brooding thunder-storm flashed its signals overhead.

With the majority of the passengers, he left the train at Times Square, and, more to avoid the hurrying throng than anything else, he entered the Knickerbocker bar and ordered Scotch and soda. And there, stick on arm, stood Ned Greene, the only man in New York that Wallace Lemmert could really call his friend. He was gazing at Old King Cole as if he'd never seen the merry old soul before.

Ned Greene was a good-looking, idle young man, healthy, wealthy and wise, to whom Wallace had been given an introductory letter when he first came to New York. Subsequently, the two men had become excellent friends, probably because they were as unlike as it is possible for two men to be. He greeted Wallace as if they had parted ten minutes before.

"Who'd have thought to see the wondrously wedded Wallace wandering wistfully on the wild wet way," he said, shaking him by the hand. "It's unbelievable! It's so absurd it must be true. Wife gone to the country; poor dear hubby all alone in the great glittering city with one eye on the Grand Central awaiting her return, and the other——"

"Cut it," said Wallace, a trifle annoyed. "What are you doing in New York on a night like this?"

The other man shrugged his shoulders vaguely. "I was going to the Maraschino Roof to see 'The Waggish Widow,'" responded he. "As the heroes in the English novels say, it's a toppin' show. But if you don't want to go, I'll do anything you say."

Wallace smiled. "If you recommend 'The Waggish Widow' as being fit for a young married man to see, we'll get seats at once. I'll make for the newsstand now."

As they shouldered their way through the lobby of the hotel, Greene waxed almost lyrical in praise of one Miss Tottie Trelawney, whose real name was Magee, of the first row chorus, second from the left, in the pale pink bathing suit.

"She's somehow different," he explained. "Instead of straw colored hair and pale blue eyes, she has hair of a dark reddish brown and large frightened looking eyes that make you want to take her home to mother. And when you ask her out to supper, what d'you think she orders? A club sandwich and a small bottle of ale; simply that, and nothing more."

Wallace displayed an interest he did not feel. "That woman belongs in a museum," he said.

Side by side they swung along Broadway.

"She belongs in some good man's home," said Ned, with unusual seriousness. "She's got my goat, and no mistake."

Wallace laughed for the first time. "I'm afraid that ruminating quadruped of yours is an inconstant animal," said he. "I've known him to be in possession of many lovely ladies occupying various stations in society. Why don't you keep your goat at home awhile?"

Ned Greene slipped his arm through that of his friend.

"Wait till you meet the girl," was all he said.

V

THE Maraschino Roof isn't on the roof. There are a good sized stage, several rows of orchestra chairs and many tables spread oasislike in a desert anything but dry. On either side of the proscenium arch is painted the suggestion of the deck of an ocean liner. The effect is as nautical as a sailor in a comic opera.

To describe "The Waggish Widow" there is no need. The dialogue sounded as if the people on the stage were improvising as they went along. The music gave the impression of a drum solo, with orchestral accompaniment. Once in a while a perfect lady (one could tell it by the ball-gown she wore on the Atlantic City boardwalk in mid-afternoon) or an equally perfect gentleman (one could tell it by his purple evening clothes), came out and argued with the orchestra. It was a typical Broadway show.

Which brings us to our second heroine.

Wallace had to confess that Miss Tottie Trelawney, despite her name, was somewhat different. She was slight and dark, with large brown eyes which made you forget her face was plain. "Wistful" is the word that tells the most about her. And any woman who can be wistful in a pale pink bathing suit has an uncommon personality.

By eleven o'clock even Ned Greene was glad the thing was over. The heat still hung over the city, although when the street was regained it mirrored the myriad lights as a result of the promised storm, which had proved a fleeting one.

Ned had sent a note to Miss Trelawney, so, after calling a cab, the two adventurers waited within its shadowed depths. Having nothing to say, they sat smoking in silence.

VI

OUR next scene shows the Cafe de la Paix.

It is filled with mirrors, manikins and mannerisms; diamonds, dollars and democracy, and an ever present cabaret. The women wear too few clothes and too many jewels, while many of the men speak of themselves as gentlemen. There is a noisy near-Hungarian orchestra L. C., and a tiny stage beyond.

Miss Trelawney was silent. She juggled a club sandwich with an engaging disregard for the rules of the game. Ned Greene chatted with his usual cheerfulness, while Wallace looked about with honest interest.

It was six minutes to midnight when Miss Trelawney turned to Wallace and said: "What are you doing here?" She nodded in the direction of Ned Greene, who had joined some acquaintances at a distant table. "You aren't one of his kind, you know."

Wallace asked just what she meant.

It seemed difficult for her to explain. "There're people born for a certain kind of life, just as there're pictures made for a certain kind of frame. And when your kind of man is put in the midst of this kind of life, the effect's all wrong, like a picture badly framed." She paused for a moment. "Then," she added, a shade less seriously, "your thoughts have been miles away all evening. To be quite frank, you don't know how to play this game at all."

"I'm sorry I've been so dull," Wallace lied.

Quite openly, like a child, she laid her hand on his forearm. Suddenly, this little brown hand gave him the clue for which he had been unconsciously seeking.

"If you'll tell me why you're here, I'll return the compliment," he told her. "Your picture, now I come to look at it, is as badly framed as mine."

She caught his eyes, and smiled.

"I guess that's a pretty fair exchange," said she. "But you'll find mine the same old worn-out story, one of those breezy Manhattan Nights' Entertainments to be found in the magazines. Only, those always end happily, and mine——"

For a moment she hesitated. A new expression came over her face, an expression as far removed from the Cafe de la Paix as Third avenue is from Fifth.

Then she began:

"I was married, and very happy in a little home of my own. Tom was a devoted husband, as husbands go; kind and thoughtful and fairly considerate. I loved him very much then, and I love him very much now. A woman's love doesn't change with the seasons like a woman's clothes. To tell the truth, I love my husband so very dearly, now that we're separated, nothing seems to matter in the least. He came home one night, cross and tired from his day's work, and——"

"Cross and tired," repeated Wallace.

She continued as if she had not noticed the interruption. "It was a night like this, sticky and torrid. We quarreled over something, I scarcely

WOULD it bore you to dip into Thermology?

"Temperature has a tremendous influence on the human race," says Dr. Wuremburg in his treatise on Mankind and the Weather. "It makes and unmakes nations, just as it makes and unmakes individuals. . . Under the influence of great heat man may do, say and think things he would consider madness under a moderate temperature."

Thus, in a few words, we finish with Dr. W.

II

ENTER the plot!

It had been a dreadful day. The August heat had held Manhattan in its grasp since dawn. You fancied something personal in its intensity.

At five in the afternoon Wallace Lemmert stepped from the building in which he was employed. The heat, radiating from the shadowed pavements, seemed to strike him a physical blow. As he walked toward the subway, the westering sun filled the crosstown thoroughfares with quivering gold and the topmost windows of the skyscrapers were aflame.

It had been an irksome day for everyone, and Wallace, like the others, felt the strain. He was irritable, and very tired. All day he had looked forward to this hour of release, but now that it had come, his freedom was not particularly desirable.

The uptown train was packed and jammed. Wallace had to fight his way into a car. The air underground was close, breathed and rebreathed many times. The whirring fans merely forced it back into his lungs.

The overcrowded, ill-ventilated, noisy express weakened his last vestige of self-control. By the time the door of his little flat was reached he felt overwhelmed, as you do when vitality is at ebb, by the helplessness of man when confronted by some great natural force, the futility of striving against Nature's irrevocable laws.

What was the use of slaving day after day so that you might have strength to slave again? Lemmert put this question to himself many times, and each time the answer was the same: There was no use, no use at all. And this realization of the meaninglessness of existence made him suddenly angry. At the same time, he knew his anger to be that of a child shaking its fist in the face of God.

The sight of his wife, white clad and smiling, waiting for him at the apartment door, seemed the one thing needed to fan his smoldering anger into flame.

She greeted him with unaffected camaraderie.

"It's been a dreadful day for you, hasn't it, dear?" she asked, as she closed the door behind him.

"Yes, it has," returned Wallace, gruffly.

She let his sullenness pass unnoticed.

"Your bath is ready," said she. "By the time you've changed I'll have dinner on the table." She touched his shoulder with gentle affection. "I'm sorry you're so tired."

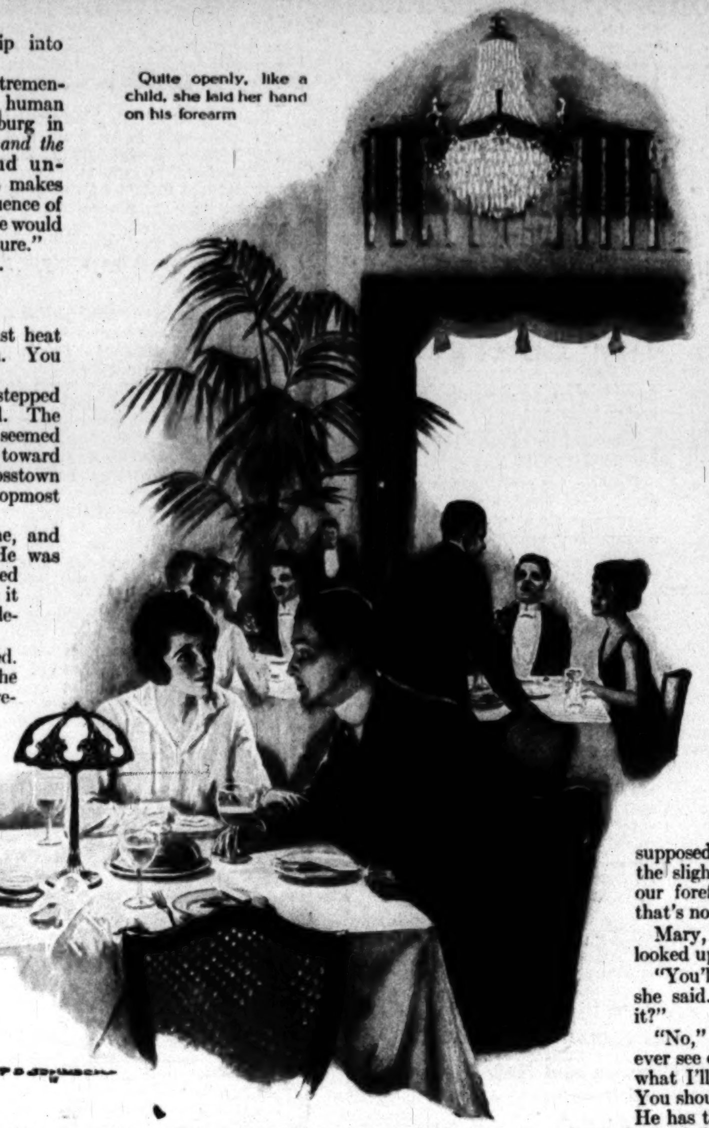
"You look cool enough," he told her.

"It's been ever so hot up here," she reminded him. She spoke without that irritating patience which can be made more annoying than the angriest word. "But there's a nice cool dinner with——"

The slam of his bedroom door cut short her remark.

With lips tightly pressed she went into the small, super-heated kitchen and closed the door. She took her apron from its accustomed hook and tied it about her waist. For the first time in many weeks she failed to sing softly as she went about her work.

It had been a year and a half since Wallace Lemmert had brought Mary Watkins to New York from a small mid-western town and established her in a small, but comfortable, flat. They were married in the "parlor" of Mary's home, and immediately after the ceremony they left for the metropolis where Wallace had been given a position in the main office of the firm for which he had traveled since almost a boy. And here he had worked day after day for eighteen months, with the exception of a two weeks' vacation spent with relatives back home.



Quite openly, like a child, she laid her hand on his forearm

And now it was August, with the mercury hovering about the nineties!

III

DINNER that night was not a pleasant meal.

Wallace sat silently at one end of the small table. At the other end sat Mary, quiet and externally cheerful, serving the salad, pouring the iced-tea, attending to her husband's needs with the matronal youthfulness he had always found so charming.

She was reviewing the months of her married life. In retrospect, they were pleasant to recall. Petty quarrels there had been, but these were more than overshadowed by the idiotic happiness of "making up." Wallace had been a good husband, this she knew. At the same time he had been something more, an excellent friend. And one thing she told herself, a truth to blot out all the rest, no matter what he might do, no matter what he might say, Wallace Lemmert was the one and only man for her.

The heat in the little dining-room was intense. Not a breath of air stirred the muslin curtains at the open windows. The unceasing drone of the city, the frequent honk of distant motor-cars, the nearby rumble of the apartment-house elevator as it struggled up and down, seemed, in some strange way, to intensify the strain, to make the heat more difficult to endure.

Without warning, Wallace slid back his chair. He threw his napkin on the table, overturning his glass of tea. An umber stain flashed across the cloth like the shadow of events to come.

Mary did not move.

"I'm going to quit," he said.

"Quit what?" she asked. "What do you mean?"

"I'm going to quit the whole thing." He spoke with a sort of impersonal fierceness. "I'm tired of getting up every morning, hurrying through my breakfast and going to the office in the crowded train just like a million other men. I'm tired of working for someone else. I'm tired of fighting my way home so I may rest, and fight my way to work again."

"But——" Mary began.

"Don't give me any of your 'buts,'" Wallace interrupted, wrathfully. "I know what you're going to say; I've said it often enough to other worms. Man must toil that he may live. Idleness breeds evil habits, and all that sort of copy-book twaddle. Believe me, none of it is true."

"We must make the best of our position in life," ventured Mary.

"I didn't ask to come here, did I?" he interrogated, bitterly. His anger swept over him like a flame. "We aren't given a fair show. Do you think it's reasonable to expect a fellow to work day in and day out, to be honest, straightforward and truthful, without a single reason for being so? And after we've been decent all our lives, what do we get for it? Nothing but a promissory note of future bliss. We're like squirrels in a cage. We go round and round and round till we're all worn out, and then we die and leave the cage to our children. We wouldn't ask a child to do a thing without giving it a reason why, and yet we're supposed to go on for years and years without the slightest reason for doing so, except that our forefathers did the thing before us. And that's no reason at all."

Mary, pale, and trembling just a little, looked up at him.

"You'll get a better position some day," she said. "That's worth working for, isn't it?"

"No," Wallace returned, "it isn't. Did you ever see old Martin down at the office? He's what I'll be if I'm faithful to my employer. You should see him! He's old and weazened. He has the outlook of a hen. He looks as if he ate from a ledger; I'm sure he sleeps in one. He's got two more rooms to his apartment, and a player-piano, but they don't compensate a fellow for what he's missed by sitting on a stool all day for fifty weeks a year."

Mary started to arise, then sank back. "You told me, Wallace dear, how happy Mr. Martin was with his children who were growing up. Surely that makes up for many things."

"Yes," said he, a fleeting softness in his voice, "that makes up for many things, but we haven't any children. I wish to God we had. Things would be different then." His anger rose and took possession of him again. It seemed to drive him on, somehow, against his will. "But if a human adding-machine is to be my end, I'd rather end right here and now. I'm tired—tired—tired."

Mary rose to her feet, dignified and calm.

"Wallace dear," she remonstrated, "listen for a moment——"

He gently, but firmly, pushed her aside.

"Let me alone," he demanded. Huge drops of perspiration stood on his face. "I've been a stupid worm long enough, but the worm has turned at last. I'm going to quit—now."

Without another word he left the room.

Mary heard him fumbling in the hall for his hat and stick. She tried to call to him, but, try as she might, she could not bring herself to speak. The door of the apartment slammed, and he was gone.

Ty Cobb, Super-man, World's Greatest Baseball Player, Tells How Nuxated Iron Gave Him New Life

This great giant of strength and endurance says he now plays a better game than when he was younger.

Physician explains why taking Nuxated Iron gave Ty Cobb such tremendous strength and vitality after he was so weakened and all "rundown"—says it will often increase the strength and power of delicate, nervous folks 200 per cent. in two weeks' time.

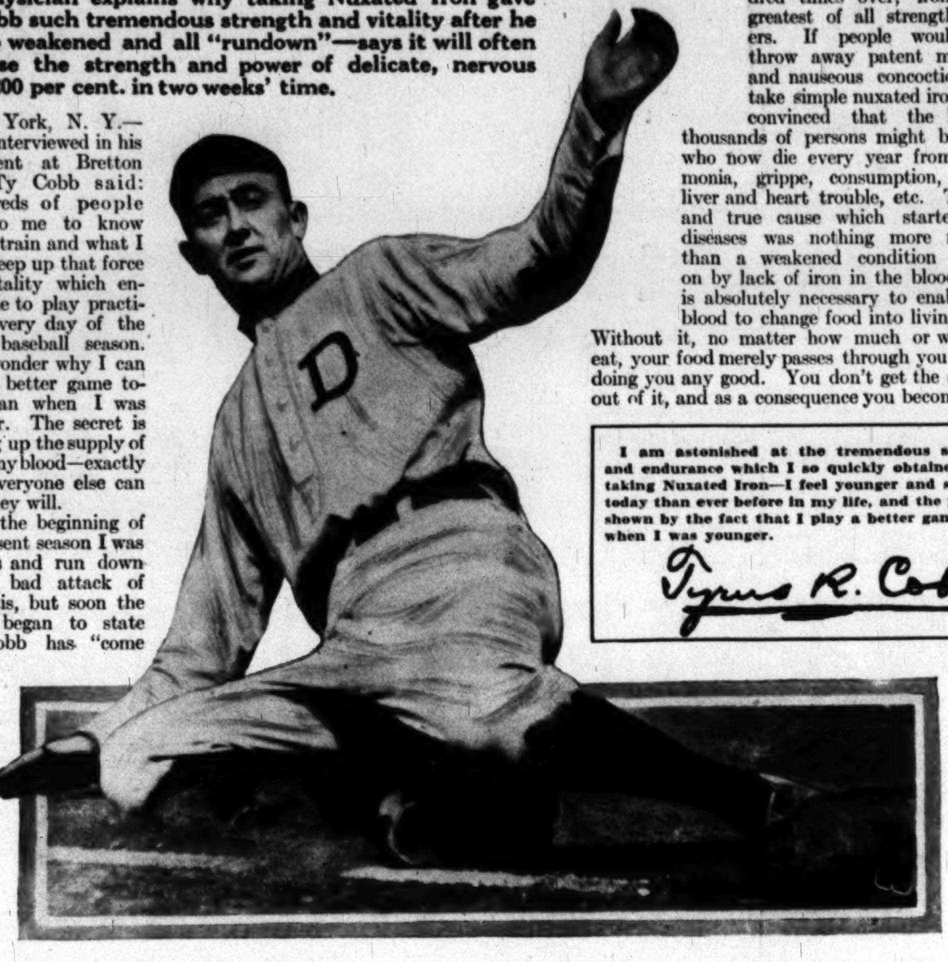
New York, N. Y.—When interviewed in his apartment at Bretton Hall, Ty Cobb said: "Hundreds of people write to me to know how I train and what I do to keep up that force and vitality which enables me to play practically every day of the entire baseball season. They wonder why I can play a better game today than when I was younger. The secret is keeping up the supply of iron in my blood—exactly what everyone else can do if they will.

"At the beginning of the present season I was nervous and run down from a bad attack of tonsillitis, but soon the papers began to state 'Ty Cobb has "come back." He is hitting up the old stride.' The secret was iron—Nuxated Iron filled me with renewed life.

"Now they say I'm worth $50,000 a year to any baseball team, yet without plenty of iron in my blood I wouldn't be worth five cents. Nuxated Iron supplies that 'stay there' strength and vim that make men of mark and women of power." Continuing, Dr. Sauer said: "Mr. Cobb's case is only one of hundreds which I could cite from my own personal experience, which proves conclusively the astonishing power of nuxated iron to restore strength and vitality, even in most complicated chronic conditions."

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret he said was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray while many another has gone to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.—E. Sauer, M. D.



I am astonished at the tremendous strength and endurance which I so quickly obtained from taking Nuxated Iron—I feel younger and stronger today than ever before in my life, and the proof is shown by the fact that I play a better game than when I was younger.

Tyrus R. Cobb

A good batter must be in prime physical condition—he needs a cool head, a quick eye and tremendous strength to put the swing behind the bat.

Ty Cobb is undoubtedly the greatest baseball player in the history of the game. A short time ago he was weakened and all "rundown"—today he is a miracle of strength and endurance, due to filling his blood with plenty of iron. He says Nuxated Iron has given him new life and renewed energy and put the old-time vim and vigor of youth into his blood.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. Sauer, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well-known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach: on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.—Advertisement.

will hang its own prosperity, if not now, when the after-war conflict of trade comes," a union worker acknowledged to me the other day—a machinist in a large eastern shop with whom I talked during the half-hour midday lunch. "The manufacturers, by going direct to the people with their high overhead troubles will stir up the government and get it on the backs of us both."

"How do you figure that?"

"Well," said he, philosophically, "when it costs business too much to do business and meet competition, there's only one way to save us from bankruptcy. The government will have to regulate both business and wages." Unconsciously, perhaps, this union man uttered a thought which is not new in the business mind.

"Business has had government by instinct, government by psychology and government by investigation," a large employer of labor recently said, "but the one thing which business has not had is wage regulation by government."

"Do you advocate this?"

He shook his head. "All business wants is equal opportunity with labor. This it does not have. It can be obtained only through sober, sane, public opinion and co-operation. The affairs of the industrial world are complicated. While relatively a few hundred corporations comprise the bulk of the employing forces of industry, the public forgets that its own vital connection with the weal or woe of life is bound up with the success or failure of these concerns. Labor also forgets this, interested only in drawing the highest wage on the easiest terms. If all classes of society could meet business face to face, seek the truth concerning the conditions of business and then discuss it in a common sense way, we would have less class feeling, more equitable business dealings, a more solid business structure and a more really patriotic Americanism."

There you are! Concretely, the business situation as affected by labor is:

(1) The country is short a million workers to ply our war-born and home trade;

(2) Wages are top-notch the country over and mounting;

(3) Labor unions are standardizing wages, and, by shortening the hours of toil, are restricting and curtailing production;

(4) Production costs, in consequence, together with consequent increased prices for materials, are narrowing the margins of profit in business more closely than in less active times;

(5) Labor, itself, is worse off at higher wages than on a lower scale;

(6) Business while more prosperous than ever before has no protection against hard times accompanying competition from abroad when it comes;

(7) The public pays more dearly for every kind of commodity than ever before.

No Admittance

JUDGE ISAAC FRANKLIN RUSSELL, Chief Justice of the Court of Special Sessions, of New York, has to make a personal supervision of penal institutions, among them insane asylums, as one of his official duties. He went to the White Plains asylum recently on a tour of inspection and found a strange guard at the entrance, an old friend of his having been discharged.

Judge Russell told the guard he wished to be admitted.

"Can't do it," was the answer.

"But I have business here," said the Judge. "I come from New York."

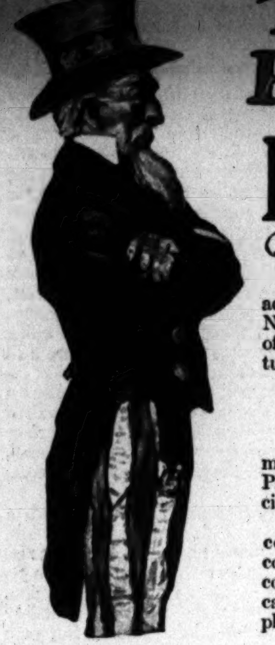
"We've got two hundred in here now who came from there," answered the other.

"I'm afraid you do not know who I am," ventured the Judge getting tired of the guard's belligerent attitude. "I am Chief Justice of the Court of Special Sessions——"

"Cut it, cut it," broke in the other. "We've got three men inside now who say they're Chief Justices."

THE HARD TIMES OF PROSPERITY

By Guy W. McConnell



DISPLAYED conspicuously in any number of stores, shops, factories and offices today is this newly adopted slogan of the National Association of American Manufacturers:

BUSINESS DEFENSE.

"What does it mean?" I asked the President of the Association.

"It is our call to the common citizen to come to our aid in the conservation of American business," he replied.

"What has the common citizen to do with general business?"

"Today, everything. We hope to teach him by a widespread publicity campaign its true relation to his own prosperity or poverty."

Here is an unprecedented movement to bring into closer understanding and co-operation the employer, the employee, the business and professional man, the laboring man, the consumer and the producer. It aims to hold mass-meetings in industrial centers, attended by members of all kinds of local organizations, boards of trade, employers' associations, labor unions, professional bodies and the general public. These meetings are now being advertised everywhere, even in schools and colleges.

The purpose is to analyze publicly the problems and difficulties of the manufacturer, the burden of which falls in the end, upon the ultimate consumer.

At last business is laying its cards, face up, upon the table, for the scrutiny of one and all. We want to know why needles and pins are not only higher in price but also scarce in quantity. Why our coal bills are jumping from fifteen to forty cents a ton and why steel rails by the ton have advanced five dollars. Why has glassware gone up twenty-five per cent, table linen forty per cent? These questions will be answered, as well as will the rise in potatoes of from two and a half to four and a half a bag, flour per barrel from six dollars to eight-fifty. The increased cost of clothing, hats, caps, boots and shoes, machinery, rents and sundry necessities will be analyzed and fundamentally explained.

AND what will the explanation be? "War prices?" I asked a prominent manufacturer of agricultural implements.

He shook his head. "No," said he, gloomily. "Labor prices!"

Today big money is being made by both capitalist and workingman. The dinner pail is full and bulging. Long rows of depositors are observed on pay days at the savings bank window in city post-offices. Retail merchants frankly admit that until now they never really knew what fat times meant. The huckster, nowadays, drives happily to town to a constantly rising market. Coupon day comes with sure and satisfying regularity to investors in stocks and bonds. Look at the railroads! The very sight of the unprecedented human and freight traffic, in all parts of the continent, reflects the unwonted activity of trade.

Yet, both capital and labor confess that after their bills have been paid, less money is left to both than before the from sea-to-sea and gulf-to-lakes business boom hit American industry. Never before has the workingman faced such high costs in living. Nor has the producer ever been in such a predicament as now, for continually advancing is the price of all kinds of raw material entering into manufacture. From day to day fluctuations occur in the expenses of both the employer and the worker at a trade, always higher, never lower. And the manufacturer who has sold his product in advance for the year 1916, though his plant may run steadily during the twelve months, is more apt than not to find, when he strikes a balance at the year's end, that his net profits will foot up with a minus sign in front.

"If present-day conditions continue," recently stated a prominent steel manufacturer, whose eyes wore a harried expression, "business, to save itself, will have to shut down!"

Prosperity lies in abundance of cheap products. Today any factory man will tell you that the producing cost has long since passed the danger point—upwards. Recently agents of the Federal Reserve set out to ascertain why this is so. Answers to ninety-seven per cent of several thousand letters addressed to all kinds of manufacturers contained this startling explanation which has been incorporated in an official report to the Federal Government:

"The future of business rests squarely upon the shoulders of the working man of America. He is lying down on his job. Labor, never more dear or scarce, is lacking in efficiency at a time when the maximum effort is necessary to prevent business paralysis."

Thus, in the midst of prosperity, business is having serious hard times. The blame is attributed to the dominating and independent attitude of labor. Curiously enough, labor does not shirk the allegations of its critics. It acknowledges that for many months past, by strike or otherwise, in factory village, mill town and industrial city, the country over, it has been tapping the profit sap out of the prosperity tree of business. And having forced the wage standard to the wave's crest, these headlines it has flashed upon its bulletin board, regardless of the general welfare:

Employment Only To Those Licensed By Labor To Work—Restricted Output—Limited Machine Capacity—Shorter Working Hours.

I asked the secretary of the central labor union in a large seaboard city to explain why labor is trying to force business to walk so many different kinds of planks at the same time.

"PREPAREDNESS for the future is behind the labor movement of today," he stated candidly. "We intend to see that when the after-war spurt or paralysis in business comes, the working man does not get it in the neck. For years after the war in Europe ends," he continued, "the present struggle for world supremacy between the Central Powers and the Allies will merge into a struggle between all of Europe and America to fill the world's bare shelves. Once more, as before the war, Europe will flood this country and the entire world with the cheaper article, imperiling not only our trade at home but the trade we have established abroad since the war began. What will American business do in order to successfully compete in this world-wide selling movement? Cut production cost, of course! And where does this strike first? Why, in the plant! The employer's first thought will be to over-tax labor—which will then be more scarce than now—and also the plant generally, while, at the same time, trying to reduce wages. This is exactly what we are preparing against now, when we are in a position to make our demands."

Upon a placard posted on the yard fence of a prominent shipbuilding plant, this warning to the workmen is given by the labor union: "Work slow. Slow down. This means more pay for you at less toil!"

Naturally, curtailment of production follows. This is why employers are getting together with the common folk today in seeking relief from labor conditions which have "more than reached the limit in increased pay and shortened hours of work," says the report of the investigating agents of the Federal Reserve. Here is offered some concrete testimony.

Said a textile manufacturer: "I have orders on my books for eight months to come, yet my mills are running at only two-thirds capacity. This is due to the independence of the workmen who, instead of taking advantage of the opportunity to make large earnings, are not inclined to give reasonable returns for the abnormally high scale they are paid. They take a holiday whenever they please and have cut the working day from six to four days. Their pay envelopes during the past few months have been so fat that now they lay off for a day or two at any time on the slightest pretext."

An automobile manufacturer of international reputation is paying increased labor cost of nearly forty per cent. "Yet," said he, "instead of my workmen's realizing that the present harvest is apt to be short, working steadily and saving money, they waste time and seem to be satisfied if they average net in shorter hours the previous lower rate of wages, indifferent entirely to the effect on production."

"With every wage increase," remarked a castings maker in answer to my inquiry, "there is a corresponding decrease in labor productiveness. The men have become intolerantly independent. They will not take orders from their superiors, but, growing restless in one plant, they move on to another. Because of this unrest, I refuse to quote prices, covering any large amount of tonnage, and I am not renewing annual contracts of long standing with regular customers."

Now, it is a sort of habit of business always to be harping on the disaffection of its laborers, if for no reason other than to keep the nose of the worker close to the industrial grindstone. But in these wild-fire business times, the cry of the employer to his men to earn the enormous wages he has yielded to them, springs from motives of self-preservation when trade speed is geared to its highest. The steamcocks of business really can not be shut off. The pressure of trade must continue so long as orders keep crowding in. Practically every plant in the country is sold for months to come, many for deliveries as far ahead as late in 1917. I know of machine works in New England booked up until 1918. Not all of these orders are of foreign origin. Take, for example, steel. It has been generally assumed that domestic consumers have failed to receive material owing to heavy buying abroad. Charles M. Schwab is authority for the statement that less than ten per cent of our steel production is now being exported. "At least seventy-five per cent of it," testified another prominent manufacturer, "is for domestic consumption. Accepted contracts last month for domestic shop extension alone aggregated eighty-two per cent of the structural output."

"Of what is this indicative?" he was asked.

"That America, in the high tide of a stupendous war-born trade, is preparing of necessity, now, for trade after the war."

YET, owing to labor's refusal to be one hundred per cent efficient, in steel there is a famine. I could quote a dozen hardships this has caused to general business. One: A man I know recently needed steel beams for factory extension. It meant thousands of dollars to him to have the building completed at a certain time. The best quotation he could get from the steel mills was five cents a pound for delivery within nine months. Regardless of the price, he could not wait so long. So he sent a man about the country in search of beams. In an Ohio village he found an available lot, although they had seen long service. He bought them at a high price and after considerable difficulty took them to his plant yard. Then, in the erection work, a strike occurred. This settled, after great expense of time and money, labor refused to work more than five and a half days a week, even at the inducement of time and a half for Saturday afternoons. It could not work on Sunday, even at double time, for the law prohibited. The working day consisted of eight hours and at the stroke of the clock the men threw down their hammers, though overtime for longer hours was offered. By the time the building was ready for occupancy, the need for which it had been created, had passed, and the owner was in the hole financially.

"And here is where labor, in the noose it is constantly setting for business, (Continued on page 796)

By ROBERT GARLAND—ILLUSTRATIONS BY P. D. JOHNSON

WOULD it bore you to dip into Thermology?

"Temperature has a tremendous influence on the human race," says Dr. Wuremburg in his treatise on Mankind and the Weather. "It makes and unmakes nations, just as it makes and unmakes individuals. . . Under the influence of great heat man may do, say and think things he would consider madness under a moderate temperature."

Thus, in a few words, we finish with Dr. W.

II

ENTER the plot!

It had been a dreadful day. The August heat had held Manhattan in its grasp since dawn. You fancied something personal in its intensity.

At five in the afternoon Wallace Lemmert stepped from the building in which he was employed. The heat, radiating from the shadowed pavements, seemed to strike him a physical blow. As he walked toward the subway, the westering sun filled the crosstown thoroughfares with quivering gold and the topmost windows of the skyscrapers were aflame.

It had been an irksome day for everyone, and Wallace, like the others, felt the strain. He was irritable, and very tired. All day he had looked forward to this hour of release, but now that it had come, his freedom was not particularly desirable.

The uptown train was packed and jammed. Wallace had to fight his way into a car. The air underground was close, breathed and rebreathed many times. The whirring fans merely forced it back into his lungs.

The overcrowded, ill-ventilated, noisy express weakened his last vestige of self-control. By the time the door of his little flat was reached he felt overwhelmed, as you do when vitality is at ebb, by the helplessness of man when confronted by some great natural force, the futility of striving against Nature's irrevocable laws.

What was the use of slaving day after day so that you might have strength to slave again? Lemmert put this question to himself many times, and each time the answer was the same: There was no use, no use at all. And this realization of the meaninglessness of existence made him suddenly angry. At the same time, he knew his anger to be that of a child shaking its fist in the face of God.

The sight of his wife, white clad and smiling, waiting for him at the apartment door, seemed the one thing needed to fan his smoldering anger into flame.

She greeted him with unaffected camaraderie.

"It's been a dreadful day for you, hasn't it, dear?" she asked, as she closed the door behind him.

"Yes, it has," returned Wallace, gruffly.

She let his sullenness pass unnoticed.

"Your bath is ready," said she. "By the time you've changed I'll have dinner on the table." She touched his shoulder with gentle affection. "I'm sorry you're so tired."

"You look cool enough," he told her.

"It's been ever so hot up here," she reminded him. She spoke without that irritating patience which can be made more annoying than the angriest word. "But there's a nice cool dinner with——"

The slam of his bedroom door cut short her remark.

With lips tightly pressed she went into the small, super-heated kitchen and closed the door. She took her apron from its accustomed hook and tied it about her waist. For the first time in many weeks she failed to sing softly as she went about her work.

It had been a year and a half since Wallace Lemmert had brought Mary Watkins to New York from a small mid-western town and established her in a small, but comfortable, flat. They were married in the "parlor" of Mary's home, and immediately after the ceremony they left for the metropolis where Wallace had been given a position in the main office of the firm for which he had traveled since almost a boy. And here he had worked day after day for eighteen months, with the exception of a two weeks' vacation spent with relatives back home.

And now it was August, with the mercury hovering about the nineties!

III

DINNER that night was not a pleasant meal.

Wallace sat silently at one end of the small table. At the other end sat Mary, quiet and externally cheerful, serving the salad, pouring the iced-tea, attending to her husband's needs with the matronal youthfulness he had always found so charming.

She was reviewing the months of her married life. In retrospect, they were pleasant to recall. Petty quarrels there had been, but these were more than overshadowed by the idiotic happiness of "making up." Wallace had been a good husband, this she knew. At the same time he had been something more, an excellent friend. And one thing she told herself, a truth to blot out all the rest, no matter what he might do, no matter what he might say, Wallace Lemmert was the one and only man for her.

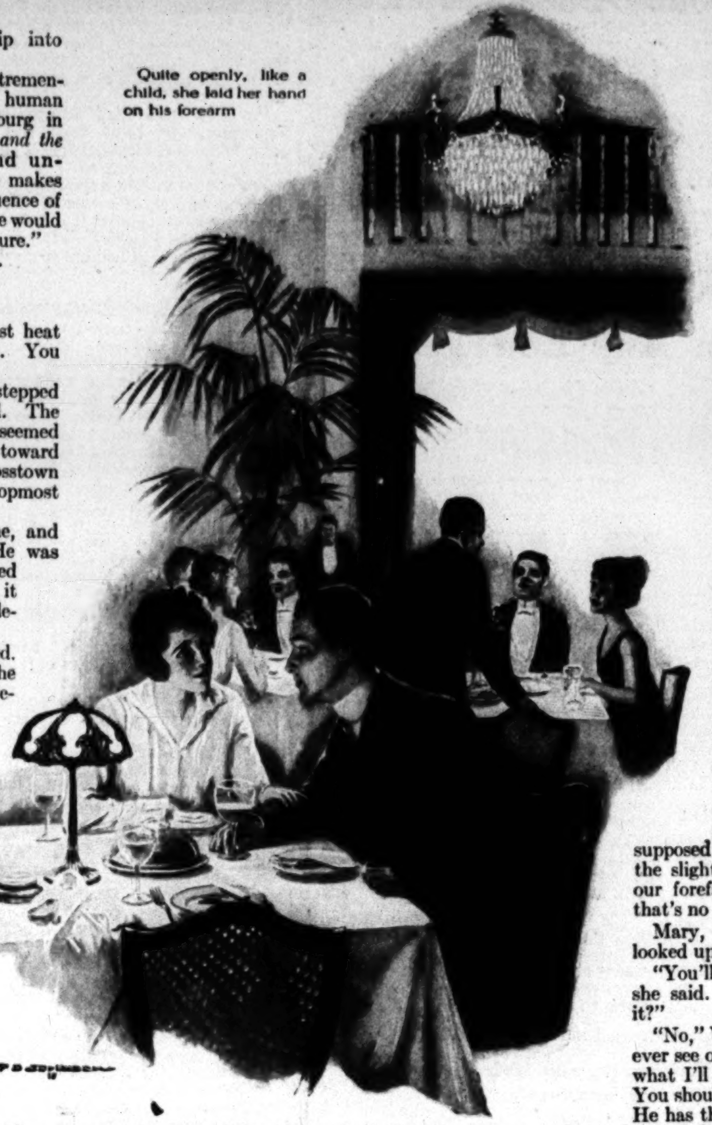
The heat in the little dining-room was intense. Not a breath of air stirred the muslin curtains at the open windows. The unceasing drone of the city, the frequent honk of distant motor-cars, the nearby rumble of the apartment-house elevator as it struggled up and down, seemed, in some strange way, to intensify the strain, to make the heat more difficult to endure.

Without warning, Wallace slid back his chair. He threw his napkin on the table, overturning his glass of tea. An umber stain flashed across the cloth like the shadow of events to come.

Mary did not move.

"I'm going to quit," he said.

"Quit what?" she asked. "What do you mean?"



Quite openly, like a child, she laid her hand on his forearm

"I'm going to quit the whole thing." He spoke with a sort of impersonal fierceness. "I'm tired of getting up every morning, hurrying through my breakfast and going to the office in the crowded train just like a million other men. I'm tired of working for someone else. I'm tired of fighting my way home so I may rest, and fight my way to work again."

"But——" Mary began.

"Don't give me any of your 'buts,' " Wallace interrupted, wrathfully. "I know what you're going to say; I've said it often enough to other worms. Man must toil that he may live. Idleness breeds evil habits, and all that sort of copy-book twaddle. Believe me, none of it is true."

"We must make the best of our position in life," ventured Mary.

"I didn't ask to come here, did I?" he interrogated, bitterly. His anger swept over him like a flame. "We aren't given a fair show. Do you think it's reasonable to expect a fellow to work day in and day out, to be honest, straightforward and truthful, without a single reason for being so? And after we've been decent all our lives, what do we get for it? Nothing but a promissory note of future bliss. We're like squirrels in a cage. We go round and round and round till we're all worn out, and then we die and leave the cage to our children. We wouldn't ask a child to do a thing without giving it a reason why, and yet we're supposed to go on for years and years without the slightest reason for doing so, except that our forefathers did the thing before us. And that's no reason at all."

Mary, pale, and trembling just a little, looked up at him.

"You'll get a better position some day," she said. "That's worth working for, isn't it?"

"No," Wallace returned, "it isn't. Did you ever see old Martin down at the office? He's what I'll be if I'm faithful to my employer. You should see him! He's old and weazened. He has the outlook of a hen. He looks as if he ate from a ledger; I'm sure he sleeps in one. He's got two more rooms to his apartment, and a player-piano, but they don't compensate a fellow for what he's missed by sitting on a stool all day for fifty weeks a year."

Mary started to arise, then sank back. "You told me, Wallace dear, how happy Mr. Martin was with his children who were growing up. Surely that makes up for many things."

"Yes," said he, a fleeting softness in his voice, "that makes up for many things, but we haven't any children. I wish to God we had. Things would be different then." His anger rose and took possession of him again. It seemed to drive him on, somehow, against his will. "But if a human adding-machine is to be my end, I'd rather end right here and now. I'm tired—tired—tired."

Mary rose to her feet, dignified and calm.

"Wallace dear," she remonstrated, "listen for a moment——"

He gently, but firmly, pushed her aside.

"Let me alone," he demanded. Huge drops of perspiration stood on his face. "I've been a stupid worm long enough, but the worm has turned at last. I'm going to quit—now."

Without another word he left the room.

Mary heard him fumbling in the hall for his hat and stick. She tried to call to him, but, try as she might, she could not bring herself to speak. The door of the apartment slammed, and he was gone.

IV

THE sad-faced janitor, coatless and perspiring, answered the elevator bell and took him to the ground floor, where he bade him a weary "Goodnight."

The book contains 128 pages and over 100 illustrations. It is a complete and authentic reprint of our book that sells for 50 cents. Every home at some time has urgent need for it, when a life may be at stake.

We ask 10 cents merely as evidence of serious intent. The book costs us much more.

Be Double-Sure

This is part of our effort to prevent careless wound-dressing. And to help you fight germ infections.

Another part is to make dressings that are sterile. And enable you to keep them sterile. We are at war with half-way measures. We urge you to be double-sure.

What You Need

What you need in the house—all the time—is B&B Absorbent Cotton, B&B Bandages and Gauze, B&B Adhesive Plaster.

You need the B&B brand for the following reasons:

B&B Cotton goes through 22 processes. Our Cotton and Gauze are twice sterilized, once after being sealed.

B&B Arro Brand Cotton and Handy-Fold Gauze are both put up in germ-proof envelopes—enough for one use in each. They keep their sterility for years.

Both are also put up in handy packages. No need to remove the roll. Cut off what you need and leave the rest untouched.

B&B Adhesive

B&B Adhesive Plaster is rubber coated. It is prepared especially for surgeon's use. But it sticks to anything without heating or wetting. And it stays stuck. Every home has a hundred uses for mending rubber, glass and wood.

Our First Aid Book tells how these things are used. Also hundreds of other things—knowledge you should keep on file. We will mail it for ten cents. Address First Aid Dept. 10.

men. He had got to the place where a word of spiritual comfort and encouragement would have meant as much as fifty pounds of weight in his favor.

He had, in fact, arrived at the Psychological Moment. There were no professing pyschologists in those days; but there was psychology; and it worked itself up into moments even as it does today.

Probably Arboreal's head went under the water, and briny tears and salt ocean mingled nauseatingly in his mouth.

"I am lost," he gurgled.

But at that instant a shout went up—the shrill, high cry of a woman. Even in his agony he recognized that voice—the voice of Parrot Feathers! With a splendid rally he turned his face towards the shore.

SHE was struggling through the crowd, fighting her way to the front rank with the fury of a wild-cat. She had just buried her father, and the earth was still dark and damp upon her hands, but the magnificent creature had only one thought now. She thought only of her lover, her heroic lover; in her nobility of soul she had been able to rise above the pettiness of spirit which another woman might have felt; she knew no pique nor spite. Her lover was in trouble and her place was nigh him; so she flung a false maidenly modesty to the winds and acknowledged him and cheered him on, careless of what the assembled world might think.

She arrived at the Psychological Moment.

"Probably! Probably!" she cried. "Don't give up! Don't give up! For my sake!"

For her sake! The words were like fire in the veins of the hero. He made another bursting effort, and gained a yard. But the rally almost exhausted him; the next instant his head went under water once more.

Would it ever reappear again? There was a long, long moment, while all mankind choked and gasped in sympathetic unison, and then the dripping head emerged. It had hit a stone under water, and it was bleeding, but it did emerge. Besides the cut on his head, one eye was nearly closed.

"Watch him! Watch him!" shouted Parrot Feathers. "Don't let him do that again! When he has you under water he whacks your eye with his tail. He's trying to blind you!"

And, indeed, these seemed to be the desperate oyster's tactics. If he could but destroy our hero's sight, the end would soon come.

"Probably—do you hear me?"

He nodded his head; he was beyond speech.

"Take a long breath, and dive! Do you get me? Dive! Dive at your own feet! Grab your feet in your hands, and roll under water in a bunch! Roll towards the beach!"

It was a desperate manoeuvre, especially for a man who had already been under water so much that morning. But the situation was critical, and called for the taking of big chances. It would either succeed—or fail. And death was no surer if it failed than if he waited. Probably Arboreal ceased to think; he yielded up his reasoning powers to the noble and courageous woman on the sand; he dived and grabbed his feet and rolled.

"Again! Again!" she cried. "Another long breath, and roll again!"

Her bosom heaved, as if she were actually breathing for him. To Probably Arboreal, now all but drowned, and almost impervious to feeling, it also seemed as if he were breathing with her lungs; and yet he hardly dared to dive and roll again. He struggled in the water and stared at her stupidly.

She sent her unusual and electric personality thrilling into him across the intervening distance; she held him with her eyes, and filled him with her spirit.

"Roll!" she commanded. "Probably! Roll!"

And under the lash of her courage, he rolled again. Three more times he rolled . . . and then . . . unconscious, but still breathing, he was in her arms.

As he reached the land a half million oysters sank into the sea in the silence of defeat and despair, while from the beaches rose a mighty shout. The sun, as if it had gestured, flung the mists from its face, and beamed benignly.

"Back! Back! Give him air!" cried Parrot Feathers, as she addressed herself to the task of removing the oyster from his foot.

That giant beast was dying, and its jaws were locked in the rigor of its sufferings. There was no way to remove it gently. Parrot Feathers laid her unconscious hero's foot upon one rock, and broke the oyster loose with another.

Incidentally, she smashed Probably Arboreal's toe.

He sat up in pained surprise. Unthinkingly, as you and I would put a hurt finger into our mouth, he put his crushed toe into his mouth. At that period of man's history the trick was not difficult. And then——

A beatific smile spread over his face! Man had tasted the oyster!

IN half an hour, mankind was plunging into the waves searching for oysters. The oyster's doom was sealed. His monstrous pretension that he belonged in the van of evolutionary progress was killed forever. He had been tasted, and found good. He would never again battle for supremacy. Meekly he yielded to his fate. He is food to this day.

Parrot Feathers and Probably Arboreal were married after breakfast. On the toes of their first child were ten cunning, diminutive oyster shells. Mankind, up to that time, had had sharp toenails like the claws of a bird. But the flat, shell-like toe-nails, the symbols of man's triumph over, and trampling down of, the oyster were inherited from the children of this happy couple.

They persist to this day.

Country Town Sayings

By Ed. Howe of Atchison

THE newspapers say the people demand a thing long before the people have thought of it.

No use grumbling; people won't act to suit you.

Intuition is usually suspicion.

Your best luck comes while you are behaving best.

Many a man who is not perfect is a tolerably good fellow, and useful in a modest way.

To be mated is man's natural condition; when he remains a bachelor, some woman has scared him.

English sparrows are the proletariat of the bird world. And how they multiply!

Every rich or noted man is as conceited as a pretty woman.

A man's first intention is to be fair; while he is in this humor, make him sign a contract.

If you let another man do your thinking, he will take advantage of you.

Eating too much is the pace that kills; and everyone has a chance at it three times a day.

Hope and ambition will not make you a leader after industry, temperance, politeness and fairness have failed.

The history of every political party has been that while it promises reforms next year, it is very extravagant this year.

FOOD DEPARTMENT

Pies and Puddings

IF THERE is one dessert that the average man prefers above all others it is pie. The housewife, in catering to this masculine preference, will find among the pies and puddings presented here a seasonable variety.

It is recommended that in hot weather fresh fruits should always be used in preference to dried or canned fruits, saving the latter until the advent of winter.

It is hardly necessary to emphasize that all pies and puddings should be cooked thoroughly to insure their digestibility. Also, that the bottom crust should, in most cases, be cooked before filled and then cooked quickly again.

Following is a crust recipe that has some advantages over puff paste, being cheaper, requiring less time in preparation and being less liable, with reasonable precaution, to become soggy when used for bottom crust of fruit pies.

Pie Crust With Egg

2 cupfuls of flour
¾ cup of lard
½ teaspoonful of salt
1 egg-yolk
Ice-water

Sift salt with flour and work into it the lard, which should be very cold, until mixture is like coarse powder. Beat egg-yolk in a cup and add ice-water to make about one-third of a cupful. Use the egg mixture for wetting the dough and make of the same consistency as plain paste. This quantity makes two lower crusts, or one upper and one lower. The amount of liquid required will depend upon the kind of flour used, but sufficient water should be added to egg-yolk to have enough of this mixture left from wetting the dough to brush over the crusts just before baking. This paste must be baked in a very hot oven to emerge crisp and flaky. The oven should be hot enough to "set" the crust at once so that the lard will not melt and allow the dough to settle down the side of the pan, spoiling the shapeliness of the crust.

Orange Whip Pie

½ cupful of sugar
4 egg-yolks
1 orange
1 pint whipping cream
1 level teaspoonful cornstarch

Line a deep pie tin with the paste, prick with a fork to let the air out, brush with egg mixture and bake in a very hot oven. Set aside to cool.

Whip egg-yolks light, and gradually add sugar with which cornstarch has been sifted, then the juice and grated rind of orange. Cook in a double boiler till very thick, then cool. Whip cream and sweeten slightly. Take half of it and fold into above mixture after it has become perfectly cold. Turn this out into the crust shell and heap the remainder of the whipped cream over the top of the pie. To be at its best, the filling for this pie should be very cold, therefore, should not be put together until just before serving.—Mrs. A. B. D., Cody, Wyoming.

Peach Meringue Pie

(Crust)	(Filling)
1 cup flour	8 large peaches
pinch of salt	2 eggs (whites)
1 teaspoonful baking powder	2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon shortening

Bake pie, and while warm, fill with peaches cut into quarters. Cover with meringue and place in oven a few minutes to brown. Blackberries, raspberries or huckleberries in season, may be substituted for peaches. This makes a dry, delicious pie.—Mrs. E. E., Philadelphia, Pa.

Mock Mince Pie

1 cup fine bread crumbs
1 cup hot water
1½ cups sugar
½ cup butter, melted
½ cup vinegar
1 cup chopped apple
1 cup currants
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon powdered cinnamon
½ teaspoon allspice
½ teaspoon ginger
1 cup sultana raisins

This mince meat is better if made a few days before wanted for use. Can be kept indefinitely in airtight jars.—Mrs. J. T., Waukegan, Ill.

Chocolate Cream Pie

Beat four eggs slightly, add one and one half cups of sugar, one third cup of softened butter, two-thirds cup of grated unsweetened chocolate, one cup cream, one teaspoon vanilla, and a few grains of salt. Cook over hot water until mixture thickens, cool slightly, turn into deep pie plate, lined with paste, and bake in a moderate oven. Cover with meringue, and bake eight minutes to cook meringue.—Mrs. R. B. K., 224 Seaton Place, N. E., Washington, D. C.

Gooseberry Meringue Pie

Cook a pint of gooseberries until soft, rub through a sieve, add three heaping tablespoons of fine bread crumbs, one heaping tablespoon butter, the well beaten yolks of two eggs, and sugar to taste. Line a pie tin with rich pastry, fill with the fruit mixture, and bake until pastry is done. When the pie is cold, heap the beaten whites (to which two teaspoons of sugar have been added) on top, and brown in the oven.—M. M. O., 476 Mary Place, Elgin, Ill.

Lemon Pie

Make a rich crust and bake first, pricking it all over carefully to avoid blistering. Set aside while the filling is being made. Put into an earthen stew crock, one teacup of granulated sugar. Grate over it the yellow rind of one lemon, being careful not to remove any of the white underneath. Cut the lemon and squeeze the juice over the sugar and grated rind. Mix one tablespoon (heaping) of cornstarch and a few spoonfuls of water. Add also one whole egg and yolks of two others, well beaten. Stir all together thoroughly. Pour over the same one large teacup of boiling water. Set on stove until it thickens, watching carefully and stirring at need. Cool somewhat and turn into the crust.

Beat the two remaining whites, which must be kept very cold, to a stiff froth, add a heaping teaspoon of sugar, spread over the top. Return to the oven until of a delicate brown.—Mrs. F. M. H., 204 E. 13th Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Cream Cocoanut Pie

1 pint boiling milk
2 egg-yolks
2 tablespoons of flour
1 tablespoon butter
¾ cup sugar

Beat last four ingredients, then stir in milk and cook until thick. Remove from stove and add one-half package cocoanut and flavor to taste, (vanilla). Put in baked crust add meringue made of whites of eggs and a little sugar, then brown in oven.—Mrs. F. M. H., Jr., McWhorter, Va.

Crow Nest Pudding

Put a pint of cherries, or any kind of berries, into a buttered baking dish. Sweeten and sprinkle a little flour over the top. Make a batter of 1 cup sugar

1 egg
1 teaspoon baking powder
Butter size of a walnut
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Flour to make a little stiffer than cake batter and bake.

Sauce

Butter size of a walnut, browned, milk and water, one-half pint of each, one-half cup sugar, flour enough to thicken. Flavor with vanilla, let come to a boil. Serve warm or cold.—Mrs. R. M., 409 Walnut Street, Elmwood Place, Ohio.

Rice Pudding With Prunes

½ cup rice soaked in cold water
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs well beaten
½ cup raisins
1 quart milk
2 or 3 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla

Put on a slow fire and boil until rice is done. Add the other ingredients as soon as the rice starts to boil. One minute before the rice is done, add the well beaten eggs, and cool.—Mrs. J. F. L. 5843 So. Talman Street, Chicago, Ill.

Orange Bread Pudding

Soak together two cups of bread crumbs and two cups of water. When soft add:

2 egg-yolks, unbeaten
1 teaspoon butter
Juice of one orange strained
½ cup sugar
½ orange rind grated

Bake slowly one-half hour. When cold add meringue of whites of two eggs beaten stiff, with two tablespoons of sugar. Brown in oven.—H. L. L., San Bernardino, Calif.

21 Delights

Folks Owe to Prof. A. P. Anderson

Three Puffed Grains have been created by Prof. Anderson. And each is often served in seven ways. So there are 21 kinds of enjoyment now open to users of Puffed Grains.

These are the seven popular uses:

1—With sugar and cream.
2—Mixed with any fruit.
3—In bowls of milk or cream.
4—Doused with melted butter.
5—As garnish for ice cream.
6—As wafers in soups.
7—As nuts in fudge, etc.

Summer Suppers Best

But thousands say that the best use is the summer dairy dish. These toasted bubbles, airy and flaky, are delightful in bowls of milk.

Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice are whole grains, with all the whole-grain virtues.

They are thin, crisp, fragile morsels, four times as porous as bread. And they melt away into nut-flavored granules, with a fascinating taste.

Their ease of digestion makes them ideal foods for luncheon or for bedtime. And Puffed Grains are pure nourishment. Every atom feeds.

Puffed Rice 15c

Puffed Grains are exploded. Each food cell is blasted by creating steam pressure within it. Within each grain there occur in our process over 100 million explosions.

Other cooking methods break part of the food cells. But no other method breaks all of them. That's the scientific reason for Puffed Grains.

These grains, more and more, are being eaten in puffed form. The trend is growing as the facts become better known. Whole wheat especially, when steam-exploded, is almost a perfect food. Keep all three kinds on hand.
